RELIEVE JAIL CONGESTION

Several Parishes Use Penal Farms In Rehabilitation

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following dispatch is the first of a series of articles The Monroe Morning World will present showing the importance of parish penal farms in law enforcement work. Ouachita parish is badly in need of such an institution to eliminate the crowded conditions of our jails. Today's dispatch deals primarily with the parish penal farm at Lake Providence. Subsequent articles will outline operation of penal farms in Caddo, Webster and East Baton Rouge parishes as well as showing the need for one in Ouachita and how it can be obtained.)

By RECA JONES
State Editor

Want to work eight to nine hours a day in the great outdoors, eat three square meals a day, live in a cottage or barrack-type quarters and receive a possible furlough home for Christmas?

Sound like a good job?

It really isn't. It is penal farm life for some who have violated the law in a few of Louisiana's 64 parishes. But in comparison to what most parish prisoners face in Louisiana, it is a paradise.

There are four parish penal farms in Louisiana, including the East Carroll Parish Prison Farm near Lake Providence. The others are Webster Parish Penal farm near Minden, Caddo Parish Penal Farm near Shreveport and East Baton Rouge Penal Farm near Baton Rouge.

While scattered in different sections of the state, all parish penal farms have many things in common. East Carroll and Webster penal farms are self - supporting. Caddo expects to be next year.

PREFER

Prisoners prefer the open life to being cooped up in crowded, smelly, closed - in parish and city jails. It is easier for all concerned and cheaper.

Judge Frank Voelker, who has jurisdiction over the East Carroll Parish Farm, explained it thus: "Such a farm provides the court with a facility that permits incarceration for both misdemeanors and certain types of felonies. The sentences for misdemeanors ordinarily would have to be served in jail, mostly in idleness; whereas the sentences for felonies would have to be served in the penitentiary.

"Incarceration on the farm for a felony avoids the stigma attached to a term in the penitentiary as the prisoner at the farm is not considered 'a convict.' Consignment to the farm is within the discretion of the court when it is determined that such incarceration will be responsive to a program of rehabilitation. The discipline, while firm, is benign and personalized.

A further advantage is that, in most cases, adjustment to civil life is accomplished more readily due to the fact that this is a rural area largely composed of plantations and farms which are operated almost identically with the conduct of the prison farm. Consequently, upon release, these

Record Crowd Attends Fair At Shreveport

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A record opening day crowd of more than 96,000 packed the Louisiana State Fair midway, Youth Center and exhibit buildings Saturday.

Joe T. Monsour, fair secretary-treasurer, said people were still pouring through the turnstiles at 9 p.m., with their cars backed up a mile and one-half along Highway 80 and other thoroughfares leading to the Fair Grounds.

If the ideal fall weather continues, Monsour said, this years attendance for the 9-day show will easily top last year's 522,640. The record total attendance was 563,039 in 1955.

LAWMAKERS

Some 40 state lawmakers attended during opening day, named Legislators' Day. The biggest attraction for the day was the Spectacular, a show of some 100 stars and a variety of other attractions in the Youth Center.

Sunday is East Texas Day, with Monday Negro Day, featuring a night football game between Grambling and Wiley College.

Other days will be dedicated to

$5 MILLION BOND ISSUE

Civic Projects Subject Of Vote Set October 28

By DANNY BINGHAM
Staff Writer

(Today's is the first in a series of articles designed to provide for the public as much information as possible on details of the Public Works Improvements Program bond election set for Tuesday, October 28. These facts are taken from the reports of highly competent and unbiased engineering firms, and the articles bear the stamp of approval of the Citizens Committee, non-political, non-factional organization of local civic-minded residents.)

Monroe property owners go to the polls Tuesday, October 28 in a special election to decide if a bond issue shall be passed to provide funds for three major community needs - improvements to sanitary sewerage, drainage and street systems of the city.

These three projects are deemed of utmost urgency in a public works improvement program presented to the public by the Monroe Citizens Committee.

A special tax would make it possible to begin immediate improvements and taking the lead in the program is a group of men and women from all walks of community life who have formed the Citizens Committee to promote improvements to public works.

NON-POLITICAL

This committee, headed by Lee R. Vanderpool, Jr., is purely non-political and its membership is made up of all political factions in the community working together toward a common goal.

Its formation followed a series of discussions during which it was commonly agreed that the city of Monroe was in almost desperate need of certain improvements on the community level which effect the health and welfare of all the residents of the city.

During the process of charting a course, it was decided to concentrate on urgent needs and bal-

11 Persons Are Feared Fatalities

ARGENTIA, Nfld. (UPI) —A U. S. Navy radar picket plane carrying fresh American personnel for duty in Newfoundland crashed into Placentia Sound just short of a runway Saturday while trying to make an instrument landing with 29 persons aboard.

Eleven persons were believed killed, but only one body had been recovered from the frigid North Atlantic waters.

Heavy rain and winds hampered search and rescue crews. A Navy spokesman said 12 hours after the crash that "it will be rough going from now on."

PICKET DUTY

The four-engine Super Constellation was carrying personnel from the Patuxent, Md., Naval Station to the U.S. base at Argentia for assignment on radar picket duty. It tried to make an instrument landing shortly after midnight, but for some unexplained reason came down short of the water-edged runway and plunged into the sound.

Base officials immediately ordered rescue craft into the darkened sound.

SUPPLEMENT

The plane is the mushroom-top type used by the Navy on radar barrier patrol flights between Argentia and the Azores. The powerful radar devices aboard are used to supplement the stationary radar stations in the Atlantic and on the U.S. and Canadian shores which serve as the nation's warning system against surprise enemy attack. The planes usually carry a large complement of personnel to operate the complex radar equipment.

Names of the missing and dead were withheld pending notification of kin.

'Big Wheel' In Ga. Bombings Is Arrested

ATLANTA (UPI) — Police arrested the so-called "central figure" in a synagogue dynamiting Saturday just as he was reported ready to flee town. But anonymous telephone threats indicated some conspirators were still at large.

Detectives B. Compton and R. W. Davidson seized Richard Bolling, 25, near his home in the southwest section at 1:10 a.m. EST. They said he went quitely with them to the county jail to be questioned first by sheriff's officers and later by the FBI.

Bolling, one of five men indicted for the Sunday bombing of the Jewish temple here on charges that could bring the death penalty, is the brother of one of those arrested earlier and indicted.

Called a "central figure" in the case, Richard Bolling was the only one not in custody when the indictments were returned Friday by a special grand jury. Police received a tip that he was preparing to leave town and intercepted him.

LITERATURE

In a car found at Bolling's home police discovered anti-Jewish literature, signed by a man who identified himself as national commander of the Knights of the White Camillia, an outgrowth of the Ku Klux Klan.

The two-page letter called the Jew "the sworn enemy of white Christian America . . . this is a life and death struggle which we must win legally if possible but violently if necessary."

Meanwhile, threatening and harassing telephone calls were made to at least two members of the

IN LITTLE ROCK

White School Hope Boosted

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Ouachita Baptist College announced Saturday that it will open school Monday in three of Little Rock's largest Baptist churches for white high school students.

The Little Rock Private School Corp. also will open school Monday in the former University of Arkansas Graduate School for white seniors only, with donated funds.

Ouachita College's classes will be for all three high school grades —10th, 11th and 12th. The Private School Corporation does not know when it can provide 10th and 11th grade classes.

The Baptist churches all have educational buildings and it was understood that the other eight Baptist churches in Little Rock have offered their educational buildings.

CRISIS

More than 3,000 high school students in Little Rock, including about 700 Negroes, haven't attended school this year because of the integration crisis. School was supposed to open for them Sept. 2.

"If we can do it, we will take care of every kid in the Little Rock school district," Dr. Ralph Phelps, president of Ouachita Baptist College, said. "We are school people and we ought to know something about running a school."

He said the limiting factor will be teachers and a call will be put out Sunday in all the 75 Baptist churches in Pulaski County for teachers.

He set up a tentative tuition schedule as follows: $20 for the first child in a family; $15 for the second; $10 for the third, and $5 each for any additional children.

The classes will start in the First Baptist Church, Second Baptist Church and Gaines Baptist Church.

The board of trustees of Ouachita Baptist Church said it will admit only whites "because the only basis on which a school can be set up now in Little Rock is on the basis of racial segregation."

The classes will be non-denominational at the start, but if it

Suicide Theory In Airport Bomb Blast Advanced

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The bomb that blasted Forrest Don McCuiston to death in Wichita's big air terminal Friday was hand detonated, police reported Saturday.

This, Police Chief Eugene Pond said, "Seems to bear out the theory of suicide."

The bomb, hidden in a paper-wrapped package, exploded as the unemployed Tulsa, Okla., aircraft worker carried it along a passageway adjoining the terminal's lobby. About 50 persons in the building were shaken up but none injured. Damage to the building was extensive.

A Federal Bureau of Investigation explosives expert discovered that the homemade dynamite bomb had no timing device and had to be set off manually, Pond said.

Witnesses said McGuiston had the bomb package with him on a flight here from Kansas City. Still undetermined is whether he also carried it on a round trip that included stops at Las Vegas, Nev., Denver, Salt Lake City and Phoenix. He had just completed the last leg of the trip when he was blown to death.

Blaze Destroys Gin In District

Officials said the fire started while a bale of cotton was being ginned. The Winnsboro fire department answered the call and Fire Chief Allen Robinson said that after 2 hours of fighting the blaze, the department got it under control and prevented any spread to other structures.

The gin itself was destroyed, but the loss was partly covered by insurance, according to authorities. The only cotton lost was the one bale which was being ginned.

Extension is a community located 18 miles southwest of Winnsboro.

Free World To Pay Its Final Tribute To Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The free world pays its final solemn tribute Sunday to Pope Pius XII.

Dignitaries from all over the world were here for the services. Among them is Secretary of State Dulles, who will represent President Eisenhower.

Eisenhower's other two representatives, Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, his former ambassador to Rome, and John A. McCone, chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, attended today's requiem mass in private capacities.

Before a majestic altar dominated by a replica of a cathedral chair, symbol of the papacy, the two followed the celebration of a pontifical requiem mass attended by 338 of the 54 living members of the College of Cardinals.

All Aboard Red Plane Killed

LONDON (AP)—Radio Moscow Saturday night announced a Soviet twin-jet TU104 airliner crashed in Russia, killing all those aboard.

There was no immediate announcement of the number killed but the sleek jetliners can carry around 70 passengers.

The broadcast said the jet went down Friday on a regular Peiping-Moscow flight in the eastern Soviet area of Kanash.

The plane disintegrated on crashing, the broadcast said, killing all passengers and crew members.

Couple Marry As Robot Gives Statical Okay

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A starry - eyed young couple took their vows Saturday in a formal wedding that had the statistical blessings of UNIVAC, the robot calculator which arrived at the conclusion that they were "ideal mates."

Shirley Saunders and Robert Kardell, both 26, were joined in holy matrimony by Dr. Raymond I. Lindquist at the First Presbyterian Church in the culmination of a romance started by the unemotional calculator.

DATA

UNIVAC was fed statistical data on Miss Saunders, an advertising copy writer, and Kardell, a communications consultant, and found that their personalities, politics, religion, education and general outlook on life were in "perfect harmony." Neither had been married previously.

It all started as a stunt on Art Linkletter's NBC television show, "People Are Funny."

Linkletter followed through by acting as best man at the wedding.

The excited bride said before the ceremony, "We'll need more than UNIVAC to make a go of it. . . every young couple needs lots of luck."

They're expected back in Monroe over the Missouri Pacific from Lake Charles and the Northeast - McNeese football game played down there last night. Time of train's arrival is set for 4:30 a. m. today and this is being written, many hours earlier, about Saturday noon. About 300 are making the trip. Of course it's a big thing for Northeast students, many of whom have never before ridden in a passenger train in this automotive age.

Shreveport

Saturday was a day when groups went in two directions with a vengeance. A large number went to Shreveport to attend the formal opening of the 53rd annual state fair. Believes GOP Platform To Be Acceptable

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) —I. Lee Potter, chairman of the Virginia State Republican Central Committee, predicted here today that the 1960 GOP platform for the presidential campaign will be far more acceptable to the South than anything the Democrats offer.

Potter, who is special assistant to GOP National Chairman Meade Alcorn, declared also that the Republicans will carry at least as many and probably two or three more Southern states in 1960 than they did in 1956.

The federation elected its new slate of officers headed by Mrs. Pratt Williams Elsas of New Orleans as president for the next two years.

Potter told the Louisiana womens group he feels "there is no doubt there will be a third party in the picture because I am sure the people of the South will not be able to stomach the leadership

SNAKE CLANS ACTIVE

Crawling Creatures Haul Deadly Cargo

By AUSTIN ABRAMS
Staff Writer

What you don't know about snakes could prove fatal.

Its people walk the woods and fields — probably all with a wariness for snakes — yet doubtfully few are aware of vital facts that could save their lives.

Authorities on snakes emphasize that to know a snake means safety.

Once you learn that the coral snake's head is black, that a narrow yellow ring cuts around its neck, that the rest of the body is black with wide red bands, and that the red bands each have narrow yellow rings at each edge, you're safe.

The rest is a matter of keeping your distance.

The slender-bodied coral snake is a natural trap for curious children and there have been numerous cases where an unsuspecting

Slaughter Animals Not Inspected Here

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

Animals slaughtered for meat consumption in Ouachita Parish are not inspected for disease, but sanitary conditions are maintained in parish slaughter-houses, Dr. W. Carroll Summer, Health Unit director, stated yesterday.

"It takes money to inspect animals — we would have to hire a veterinarian for the work — and we don't have the funds to do it," Dr. Summer commented.

Both he and Ouachita Parish Police Jury President M. W. Montgomery were queried on whether animals slaughtered here are inspected, to see if they heve any disease which could be passed on to the human who eats the meat.

Montgomery said that he had never heard of any request for inspection, and added that since milk is inspected by the Health Unit; animals inspection might also come under its jurisdiction.

Dr. Summer explained that the first step in meat inspection would be a local ordinance.

"Funds to pay the veterinarian would also have to come from local sources," the Health Unit director added.

Right now, with the Police Jury $75,000 "in the red," and expecting to borrow an additional $25,000 before the year is over; there is little hope of any money to pay a veterinian's salary.

Ouachita parish is not alone in lacking meat inspection.

Dr. Summer said that "only child was bitten by what seemed a likely pet.

Case histories of coral snake victims are not uncommon, but are scattered. Few known deaths are recorded and most cases recovered with medical treatment.

The poison causes paralysis of the respiration system.

Biologists at Northeast Louisiana State College report that, although several coral snakes have been found in the Northeast Louisiana area this year, it is doubtful that there are any more around than in previous years.

They attributed the findings to late warm weather, hibernation seeking by the snakes, and woodland clearing disturbing them. Some snakes also have been reported around residential areas.

They gave the same reason for reports of rattlers, copperheads, and cottonmouths -- the three pit vipers that move freely in this area.

OPINIONS

The rattler, most people have their opinions already formed on this fellow.

However biologists explain that the rattler isn't aggressive — yet is unpredictable.

Two weeks ago, Johnny Lessing, West Monroe did just that.

Lessing said he saw the rattler while hunting, but just didn't move fast enough. He was hospitalized almost a week.

The copperhead or rattlesnake pilot, is a dry - land moccasin.

The background color is snuff brown, sometimes almost olive.

Across its back are diamond-shaped black bands.

Poison ejected by this snake can bring death but usually it does not, if treatment is given.

DISTINCTIVE

Each has a distinctive diamond-shaped head, and a sunken pit between the eyes. Thus they are called pit vipers.

This you should know, and your doctor must know for effective treatment of a bite.

Treatment for bites has been simplified by anti - snake bite shots.

In many cases it is a long way to a doctor.

The next best thing is good first aid.

Here's information that may save your life.

If bitten move as little as possible, preferably none at all.

A tourniquet between the bite and heart is a must.

Slashes, one - fourth-inch deep in X patterns, should be made across the fang incision.

Over the slashes apply suction, by mouth if no cups are available. Authorities say danger from mouth suction is small and if the poison is swallowed little harm will result if any.

If you can get to a doctor, it is vital that he know just what snake bit you. Know at least these four snakes.

Others of the many species that crawl the area will hardly bring death, although some can bring temporary illness.

PILLS VS. WOLVES

Animals Not Inspected Here

He hastened to point out that the Health Unit inspects and approves all slaughter houses in Ouachita parish.

"Even though the meat is not inspected, the animals are killed in slaughterhouses that are approved and sanitary. Even the plans for each slaughter house must be approved by the main office in New Orleans before they can start operation," he noted.

He indicated the importance of sanitary slaughter houses, showing how good meat could be contaminated in unsanitary surroundings.

"In the 'old days', animals were often slaughtered outdoors, under trees, and the meat was carried all around town in the back of an open truck—exposed to the air. That's when it was contaminated by dust in the air and humans," he mentioned.

Today, the slaughter houses have plenty of hot water, ways to sterilize knives and equipment, and the meat is transported in closed trucks, free from air.

"Cooking usually kills any disease in meat," Dr. Summer explained.

He mentioned salmonella, a disease of chickens, turkeys and all other fowl, and said that there are over 700 different types of it.

"Inspection doesn't show up salmonella — you would have to take a culture of each chicken, and then you'd find that just about 100 per cent of the chickens would be condemned," he said.

"Many people develop an immunity to it. Others are affected by it. The symptoms are nausea, vomiting, diahrrea and fever, lasting 3 to 4 days. That's why they call it the 3-4 day diahrrea," he continued.

Dr. Summer stressed that "if you cook the fowl well, and don't eat it rare, you'll probably kill the salmonella germs.

IMPORTANT

He mentioned trichinosis as the most important pork disease which would be checked by inspection.

"But state law now requires that all garbage fed to pigs be cooked. Cooking kills the trichinae in the garbage," he added.

"Inspection might spot undulant fever in beef. That can be contracted as easily by handling it as eating the meat. Any housewife handling beef with undulant fever could get it," Dr. Summer said.

"Food poisoning outbreaks often are traced to salmonella infections. It can be quite serious and occasionally fatal," he stated, and added that "mayonnaise is also a wonderful incubation medium for food poisoning. If someone who has an infection on the hands prepares something with mayonnaise in it, an outbreak of food poisoning could result."

"As I said though, animal inspection would require a veterinarian, and the Health Unit could not pay for one. The state cut off $270,000 which formerly went for x-ray buses. Now we cannot send out mobile units to take chest x-rays," Dr. Summer revealed.

"We're receiving the same operating budget we had last year —we needed more funds for this year though," he said, adding that the parish Health Unit is "just lucky to be getting tuberculosis drugs today. We haven't had any in two months, until this shipment arrived today."

The drug is used to cure tuberculosis, for any person who needs help in the 14 Northeast Louisiana parishes served by the Health Unit here.

When asked if the state legislature's economy drive had affected any other Health Unit services, Dr. Summer revealed that all "in-service" training meetings have been halted.

The meetings were held twice a month, for nurses, sanitarians, directors and clerks of Health services.

EDUCATIONAL

The sessions were educational and instructional. Public health problems were discussed.

In addition, all salaries of Health Unit personnel are "frozen" — no one can get a raise, no matter how much the raise is deserved.

The Health Unit needs a new building. Normally, 15 per cent of the cost would come from the state, 53 per cent from Hill-Burton federal funds, and 32 per cent from local funds.

A new building could be owned by Monroe, the parish, or both the parish and the Twin Cities.

"It would render more efficient service. Offices would be located more conveniently and we could do more in an allotted period of time" he stated.

Presently, the unit "does more work" for residents of Monroe and West Monroe than for residents of the parish, mainly because the city populations are greater.

The Health Unit's objective is to prevent disease.

1. Give immunization shots.
2. Conduct clinics to prevent the complications of pregnancy.
3. Inspect restaurants, food manufacturing places, milk supplies and the handling of milk.
4. Take chest x-rays for tuberculosis and cancer of the lungs.
5. Treat venereal disease, to prevent its spread.
6. Collect birth and death certificates. The death certificates are analyzed and tabulated to determine the causes of death.

Several Parishes Use Penal Farms

persons readily adjust to civil life."

Judge Voelker further stated, "The availability of this particular type of penal facility is of the utmost assistance to the court because it permits the incarceration of younger offenders in a more wholesome environment, and, consequently, avoids the influences of the more seriously offending criminals, as well as the other unwholesome factors existing in a penitentiary."

SIMILAR

All of the prisons have about the same set - up. Persons sent to the farms are primarily first offenders sentenced for lesser offenses. All, with the exception of East Baton Rouge, have facilities for white and Negro men and Negro women. East Baton Rouge does not have any facilities for women.

Diversified farming is practiced.

As is the case on all the farms, very few prisoners attempt to escape.

"The prisoners beg to come to the farm. They adjust well. Our greatest number of returnees are alcoholics. With the exception of this category, it is seldom the prisoners return," said one superintendent.

Since the East Carroll Parish Farm is near the Monroe area, we can get a more detailed look at its operation first.

The state authorized the organization of prison districts in 1926. The East Carroll Parish Police Jury realized the benefits to be derived from the operation of a project of this type and so was born Prison District No. 1 of the Sixth Judicial District of Louisiana.

Money for the initial investment and other expenses, in the amount of $23,462.65, was advanced by the East Carroll Parish Police Jury. This sum has been repaid in full, and, today, the farm and equipment are worth more than $300,000. The farm has never cost the taxpayers one cent, having been self - sustaining from the beginning.

MODERN

The prison farm is essentially a plantation operation where modern up - to - date farming methods are used.

The superintendent is the only guard. There are no barriers to a man's escape, but his own honor.

Most of the inmates of the prison farm receive better meals than they do at home. There is always a variety of fresh vegetables, raised on the farm, fresh meat, eggs and plenty of milk. The portions they receive are not limited. Extra dishes of each of the foods served are placed on the tables along with jugs of fresh milk.

The sanitary facilities of the kitchen and barracks are regularly inspected by the parish sanitarian and reports of his findings are made to the judge and the board of governors. Almost without fail, the report shows one hundred per cent compliance with the sanitary code of the health department.

The board meets at least once a month to go over the affairs of the prison district, advise with the Superintendent K. E. Mangum, and set up policies to govern its operation.

The work schedule of the farm inmates is comparable to that of any plantation in its area. They work about nine hours a day, with an hour off for lunch. The rules of the farm regarding visiting hours are very lenient. Each Christmas they are granted a vacation home.

The operation of such an institution as the prison farm serves a manyfold purpose, Judge Voelker stated.

"First, it permits the judge to remove prisoners from idleness in jail and place them in an environment with which they are familiar. Prisoners are given an opportunity to do useful work. They receive an approved and adequate diet, expert medical care, and are retained in the community in which they have been living.

"By placing a prisoner in an institution of this type, authorities have a much better opportunity to rehabilitate him, and upon release, the prisoner can make a better adjustment to the outside world. In addition to this, a prisoner who served a term under the mild and benign discipline of the farm seldom builds up any resentment against society.

"This project is an interesting and challenging experiment in penology and we believe we are doing a good job. But we must continue to enlarge the program in the years ahead," the judge concluded.

Skunk Finds Cooked Bugs More Savory

CROSSETT (Special) — Just as men learned accidentally to prefer cooked meat to raw, we see in Crossett the first stages of animals learning to prefer their bugs grilled and hot off the fire.

The electric bug killer which was installed on Crossett's Main Street this summer has attracted the attention of all passersby as insects attracted to its yellow light have set off constant fireworks as they have been electrocuted against the charged screen within the frame of lights.

Recently Rosebud (as we shall hereby name her — him — or it) has discovered the savory superiority of fired bugs, and has been coming nightly to have his supper fresh - fried. Photographer, Neil Rhodes, loaded up his camera and waited one night this week. Rosebud appeared at about 8:30, and Rhodes got his picture.

He knew that anything might happen when the animal was startled by the flash bulb, so was ready to beat a hasty retreat. Rosebud, however, merely dashed off under the shrubbery apparently saving his retaliatory powers for something more lethal than a camera.

Says Soviets Exploiting Science Meets

CHICAGO (AP) —An internationally known physicist said Saturday Russia is exploiting worldwide scientific meetings while U.S. security policy hampers person to person exchanges of information with leading foreign scientists.

John A. Simpson, University of Chicago professor and authority on cosmic radiation, urged that this country open its doors for more international scientific conferences.

Meetings sponsored by Russia, he said, attract many of the world's top experts in various areas of science.

"As a result," Simpson said in a statement, "Russian graduate students and many scientists are given an opportunity to meet and exchange scientific ideas with foreign experts.

"But official policy in Washington the past several years has forbidden even the issuance of invitations to the executive committees which schedule such conferences just because, in some cases, a handful of behind-the-Iron-Curtain delegates will be sprinkled among the hundreds of experts from other parts of the world."

Simpson returned recently from Moscow where he was one of two Americans at meetings of the 15-member committee for the International Geophysical Year.

He said by inviting the meetings in Moscow of such international groups as the IGY committee, the Russians also are creating the impression they are the world center of science and tolerance.

Simpson said the Russians scored a major psychological gain at the IGY committee meeting by leading the drive to continue the general IGY program for a year beyond the Dec. 31 expiration at the same level of intensity.

"American and British scientists were in the defensive position of being against another year of the GY," Simpson said, "because of the lack of assurances by their governments that further funds would be available."

He is convinced the Soviet Union is trying to get into a position in which it can export scientific manpower to Red China and other nations as an effective means of extending its influence. The United States, he added, will not have an excess of scientific manpower for such export.

The Missile Program

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, a non-military organization, recently announced a proposal under which it would take over certain Army missile scientists and missile facilities.

So far, complete details of what NASA, which was organized not long ago as a federal agency, is proposing have not been made public. But enough is known, however, to stir up a strong Army protest, participated in by scientists working on Army projects and supported by persons outside the Army who see the proposal as a threat to U.S. preparedness.

The key question involved in the proposal is simply this: Which organization will do the best job. This is imperative for the survival of the United States.

Another important question is this: Does the United States hold a lead over Soviet Russia in the quality of its military missiles, in the supply of such missiles and in the ability to produce these missiles in quantity?

All of the evidence thus far made public indicates that the United States is not ahead of Soviet Russia in the military missile field. We began our missile program in laggard fashion, well after the Russians had started theirs under high pressure. The numerous failures in tests have shown that there is still much to be learned in U.S. research and production, even though the progress made in recent times has been gratifying.

There is nothing whatever in the present situation which justifies taking any important part of our military missile program out of the hands of military men, or which justifies diverting any of the military scientists or facilities to peacetime space problems.

The military men are the ones whom we hold responsible for the survival of our country, not the NASA or any other civilian agency. President Eisenhower is well aware that the responsibility rests with the military and it should be clear to him that this is no time to weaken the military for the benefit of a civilian organization.

The Army has done much fine missile work; let that work continue, with full steam behind it.

Best Brains Fleeing

The remarkable increase in recent weeks in the stream of refugees from the Soviet-occupied zone of Germany has a meaning more significant than the usual reasons for flight. The high percentage of professional people who have been choosing freedom is due to an intensification of the puppet government's efforts to press intellectuals into the Marxist mold.

In 10 years the number who have fled from East Germany to the West has reached 3,000,000. During the first eight months of this year 130,000 Germans crossed the line into freedom. The stream has swelled "alarmingly" in recent weeks, the federal minister for all-German affairs, Ernest Lemmer, declared a few days ago.

"Alarmingly" because, while West Germany has been able thus far to find employment for this vast influx due to its booming economy, the Bonn government is concerned lest the east zone become depopulated of Germans and resettled with Poles and Russians, making ultimate reunion of the two parts of the country more difficult.

There also is serious concern because in the increasing flood of refugees there is this high percentage of university professors, schoolteachers, doctors and engineers. The east zone is being bled white of its intellectual class. The natural leaders of the people are being compelled by Communist pressure to leave the country. West Germans are worried because their blood brothers in the East are being deprived of doctors to treat their ills and teachers to instruct the young.

Particularly baffling is the recently stepped-up pressure on the engineers. For a long time these were treated with favor by the puppet regime because they were so needed in the program of increasing industrial production. The promises that they would be left alone politically and would be free to travel in the West German republic have been broken. The engineers have been forced to sign the so-called peace resolutions and otherwise support the regime. The result is that they are leaving by the hundreds, with nothing but the clothes on their backs like the other refugees.

In the last week of August 6079 refugees arrived in West Berlin, the largest number since the great influx following the revolt of June, 1953. Intellectuals and specialists comprised the majority. The puppet regime is stripping East Germany of its best brains in its stubborn effort to impose conformity.

Virginia Federal Judges Failing To Uphold South

Two very active Virginia Republican politicians both of whose political careers were blighted by the Byrd Democratic machine in the Old Dominion but who subsequently found their way to the Federal bench through appointment by Republican Presidents are causing Senator Harry F. Byrd some of the headaches Byrd caused them when they were aspirants for elective office.

How much the judicial robes change a man who has been a partisan politician is a subject for debate. Judges themselves say a man undergoes a great change when he ascends the federal bench. Lawyers and the public generally are not always so sure of that and nowhere is it being discussed more than in Virginia where Federal Judges John Paul and Walter E. Hoffman are in the limelight. At all events there is no evidence that Paul and Hoffman are not thoroughly enjoying the discomfiture they are causing Harry Flood Byrd and the State Democratic Administration.

When the Supreme Court first placed the matter of integrating public schools in the hands of inferior federal courts the argument was made that the Southern Federal Judges would be sympathetic with the problems of the South. More than any other Southern Judges perhaps the orders of Paul and Hoffman would seem to disprove this. It was their "sudden-death" integration orders which caused Governor Almond to close schools having 13,000 pupils in Norfolk, Charlottesville and Front Royal.

The political tussle between the 75-year old Paul and the 71-year old Byrd is an ancient one. Paul's father was a one - term Congressman and also a Federal judge.

The present Judge Paul came close to being "Mr. Republican" in the Seventh Virginia Congressional District and was a delegate to four Republican National Conventions. In 1920 he entered the race for Congress. In the Harding landslide he polled a large enough vote to make the election of Democrat Thomas W. Harrison doubtful. Paul contested the election of Harrison, who took the oath and began his fourth term.

The Paul - Harrison contest dragged along before a House of Representative Elections Committee. Meanwhile Byrd, a young State Senator, was elected Democratic State Chairman in 1922. Byrd's home was in the Seventh district, scene of the Paul-Harrison election contest, and where both were again candidates. Byrd assigned himself as his first objective the elimination of Paul. There was no doubt of the result. Harrison clobbered Paul. After the decisive Harrison victory the overwhelmingly Republican House of Representatives seated Paul and he served nearly four months, from December 15, 1922, to March 4, 1923.

Attorney General Harry M. Daughtery brought Paul into the Department of Justice as a special assistant Attorney General and he served in this capacity for nearly two years. In 1932 President Hoover appointed Paul a United States Judge in Virginia.

Judge Hoffman had no such long record of political feuding with Byrd as Paul did. In fact Hoffman is a Northerner, was born in Jersey City, New Jersey, attended and played football at the University of Pennsylvania. He moved to Norfolk in 1926 and immediately plunged into Republican politics. He was a delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1952. These 1952 National Convention delegates were a hand picked class of Attorney General Brownell, himself a former Republican National Committee handed Hoffman the plum of United States Judge in the Eastern District of Virginia.

Hoffman in 1953 had tried for the office of Attorney General of Virginia. He was conceded an excellent chance to win. The Byrd candidate Lindsay Almond, the present governor defeated him.

The spotlight beat with fury especially on both Paul and Hoffman last week. Before them was a question about which every Southern State is wondering: Will a Federal Judge somewhere render a decision ordering a State to conduct a school. Paul ordered private schools to quit using public school teachers, but said he did not think he had the right to reopen the schools as the NAACP has asked him to do.

"If the state is going to discontinue public education in these localities it must be a complete abandonment," Paul said.

When lawyer for the NAACP appeared before Hoffman he advised them to file suit against the Governor instead of the school board. Commenting on this the Washington Star said editorially: ' Federal Judge Walter E. Hoffman; who refers to himself as "old black robes" seems anxious to set the stage in Norfolk for a showdown with Virginia Governor Almond. This is at least the inference to be drawn from the Judge's repeated suggestions to NAACP lawyers that they should make the Governor a defendant in the Norfolk school litigation. If this smacks of something less than Judicial detachment, it is entirely consistent with Judge Hoffman's past performance.

"In 1953, as the G. O. P. candidate for Attorney General he ran against and was defeated by Lindsay Almond. So there will be no great lifting of eyebrows in Virginia if the outspoken Judge Hoffman seems eager for another go at the Governor . . . He (Hoffman) implying that he would enjoin Almond against invoking the school - closing law and thereby make it possible for the school board to reopen on an integrated basis. . . . (This) the stage presumably will be set for a major legal test — whether a Federal Judge, in effect can compel a State Governor to acquiesce in the operation of integrated schools. Since the Supreme Court's 1954 ruling did not order integration as such, this Norfolk undertaking apparently would involve a venture onto new and untested legal grounds. Judge Hoffman, however, appears willing and eager to give it the old college try."

Government Works On Air Pollution Problem

The federal government is spearheading a campaign to develop a long - range program to see what can be done to solve the increasingly serious problem of air pollution which is costing this nation anywhere between $1.5 and $4 billion a year.

It is a problem that traces its origin to the early days of the Industrial Revolution and one, unfortunately, that gets worse as our standard of living gets better.

Aware of the growing threat that "dirty air" poses to human life and welfare, the surgeon general of the United States has called for a national conference on air pollution in Washington next month. It is expected to attract doctors, engineers, meteorologists, local, state and federal officials, representatives of industry and labor, civic leaders and many others.

Specifically, it is hoped that the conference will result in: (1) widespread public understanding of the air pollution problem and the necessity for resolving it, and (2) a unified 10 - year plan of action, setting up goals and outlining the steps necessary to achieve them, both in research and in control activities.

Not nearly enough has been done many will agree, to explore both the short and long-range effects of polluted air on health. What specific agent, for example, caused the death of 20 persons in Donora, Pa., in 1948, and several thousand deaths in London in 1952 and 1956 has never been learned. Practicaly all that is known is that man - made pollution combined with natural fog to form a death - dealing gas. Disturbing at this time is the fact there is no guarantee that similar disasters will not take place again and perhaps on a more disastrous scale.

City dwellers pay for air pollution in increased laundry, cleaning and painting bills. In some rural areas farmers pay for it in damage to their crops and livestock. Its affect on human health is anybody's guess. And there is, too, the "intangible" damage which results from living and working in an unpleasant environment.

Several Federal agencies are concerned with the problem but public health officials at the national level feel — and rightfully so — that the actual solution of the air pollution problem rests at the state and local level. They believe the Federal government should provide only guidance and leadership.

Working with states and communities the Federal government has set up a national air sampling network which is coming up with many answers to this extremely complicated problem. There is at least one sampling station in every state making it possible for the first time to collect and analyze air pollution data on a nationwide basis.

The Public Health Service is carrying on an important research project in Nashville, Tennessee, to develop information on the effect of air pollution on human health. Extensive measurement of air pollution is being made over a two - year period by means of 126 sampling stations throughout the Nashville metropolitan area. At the same time 6,000 households are participating in a program under which reports of illness are being correlated with full information on the past illnesses of members of each family, their occupations, smoking habits and socio - economic status. As part of this same survey a daily check is being kept on the status of patients with chronic respiratory and heart diseases.

Public heath officials admit they are not quite sure what precise conclusions there will be able to be drawn from the Nashville studies. One thing is certain, however. More will be known about air pollution in a given metropolitan area and about the health of its people under varying atmospheric conditions than this or any other country has ever known before.

Probably the greatest reason why air pollution has not been attacked before on a grand scale is that people are not aroused. Except for such tragedies as those which occurred at London and Donora and the heavy "smog" which settles periodically over Los Angeles, most people view air pollution simply as a nuisance. Unlike epidemics it does not litter the streets with the dead and dying. It does not in any obvious way cause healthy people to fall ill suddenly and it does not have the dreaded power of being contagious.

Dr. John D. Porterfield, deputy surgeon general of the United States, is one who believes air pollution is more than a nuisance, especially to those directly affected by it. He cites, for example, the asthmatic patient whose ailment has been worse since he moved from the country to the city, the perfectly healthy commuter whose eyes smart and water as he goes about the city, the shopper whose nylon stockings mysteriously fall apart while she is downtown, the truck farmer who suddenly finds his whole crop of spinach splotched and unmarketable or the housewife who gets an inferiority complex because her laundry comes off the line with tattle tale gray, no matter what soap she uses.

The air pollution problem actually should be everyone's concern because everyone depends on the state of the air intimately surrounding him. Every day throughout our lives we take in about 30 pounds of air compared with 2¾ pounds of food and 4½ pounds of water. With this air we also breathe all the varieties of particles and gases which invariably accompany it.

It is important to note that the air pollution problem will get worse instead of better. The United States population will reach an estimated 220 million by 1970 and two - thirds of that increase is expected to locate in the same industrial areas which already hold more than half the people.

With urbanization increasing, standards of living continuing to rise only one thing can happen— the air will get dirtier. Certainly the time is here to see that this trend is reversed.

Views Of Our Readers

We who call ourselves true sportsmen would like to take this means to thank Olin - Mathieson for the invitation to hunt in their forests. In gratitude we feel it our wholehearted responsibility to help keep Louisiana green. The name Olin - Mathieson has won a warm place in all our hearts.

We also want to thank the Farm Bureau for their deep concern shown at recent meetings with the Wildlife Association.

The farmers cannot be blamed for their attitude toward the townspeople who swarm their farms in droves shooting and tramping down crops and fences. Any person guilty of this has never lived on the farm. He doesn't know what it is to sweat all year fighting grass and endure the many hardships typical of farm life. When a hunter is in your pasture or field banging away, you can't help but fear for the livestock and for your own safety too. There are many of us, however, who have never done this type of hunting and to those who have we offer no thanks for having the door of hospitality slammed in our faces.

The majority of us who follow the hounds at night have always tried to do unto others as we would have them do unto us. At one time most of us have lived on the farm and we know what it means to be taken for granted. But as usual, it is the hunter who looks forward to a weekly hunt as a means of relaxation who has to pay, while the irresponsible persons who were concerned only with bagging the limit are no longer concerned. We sincerely hope that the welcome mat will again be out to the true sportsman and we can prove to be worthy of your trust.

Daily Devotion

Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, Lo there! for, behold, the Kingdom of God is within you. — Luke 17-21.

As the leavening agent "leavens the whole loaf," so the spirit of Christ changes the minds, hearts, and spirits of men — if they but accept Him and believe in His proclaimed truths. We speak of national pride, spirit and devotion as if each were material things — but patriotism and good citizenship are the sum total of all these things when found in the minds and hearts of our citizens. In like manner, the Kingdom of God is not made of missions, churches, hospitals and schools — but that spark of divinity which is found in the hearts of Christians.

O God, make us more Christlike. In His name we ask. Amen.

GEORGE SOKOLSKY'S DAYS

Dulles Policy Brings Success

I saw an editorial in the Spracuse "Herald-American" signed by Alexander F. Jones on "Diplomatic Blackmail in the Far East." It was an amusing editorial in parts, but it contained this opinion:

"Mr. Dulles, who is getting to be an international nuisance, and a terrible bore, continues to bellow the U.S. is ready to 'risk war' over the offshore islands.

"So far as I am concerned that is one war Mr. Dulles could fight all by himself for he would find he was practically alone if his foot ever slips in that 'brinkmanship' balancing act of his."

Unfortunately for Mr. Jones and those who believe as he does, the policy adopted by John Foster Dulles vis-a-vis the Soviet Universal State has worked out brilliantly both in the Middle East and the Far East.

Without referring to such synthetic words as, "brinkmanship," let us analyze that policy:

The proposition: Soviet Russia, having seized the initiative in 1945 and having held it since then, maintains the world in turmoil by short, limited wars or by incidents which require swift, emergency retaliatory actions lest they develop into general wars.

President Truman developed the Truman Doctrine which drew a line containing Soviet Russia. That line was breached on several occasions, principally by the absorption of Red China, North Korea, North Vietnam and other Asiatic areas into the Soviet Universal State and then by the development of the United Arab Republic under Nasser as a Soviet ally. The extension of Soviet power took place in both the Truman and Eisenhower administrations.

Handling international relations in trouble times has never been a simple matter. Such men as Talleyrand and Metternich faced complexities as great as ours, but their world was smaller. They did not have as many allies or as many neutrals; they were not faced by a geographical spread such as now faces the United States; they were not concerned with what we nowadays call "public opinion," a synthetic proposition based on the assumption that a common denominator exists between the expert and the ill informed.

John Foster Dulles is required by the circumstances in which his country finds itself to hold our allies at any cost except defeat; he is faced by a new range of weapons, the nature and ultimate capacity of which are hardly understood and in which the enemy is as proficient as we are; he is faced by an inflation at home and by the rising trade capacities in international markets of nations that heretofore have not so traded, thus engendering the political antagonisms that arise from economic competition.

He faces the fact that the enemy plans a series of short, limited wars on a shuttle cock pattern— one stops, another starts—and that the time schedule of these wars has naturally not been disclosed. His task is threefold:

1. To prevent the limited wars from developing into a general war;

2. To uphold the honor and dignity of the United States without impairing the honor and dignity of any other nation:

3. To prevent Soviet Russia from separating the United States from its allies.

Quemoy is a pawn in this. Quemoy is of no political or economic importance. However, as a phase of the Middle Eastern situation, involving Lebanon and Iraq, it was essential for Soviet Russia to bring to a close what could have developed into a general war and to divert attention elsewhere. Dulles has proved to be correct in his handling of the Lebanese situation; he caught up with the Soviet Universal State in its swift shift to Quemoy. He is undoubtedly prepared to meet the next shift of Soviet policy to some other place. It will come quickly enough.

It would seem that the less men know, the more sure they are that they can solve the outstanding questions between Russia and the United States better than John Foster Dulles has done. They would have had Soviet Russia win an enormous victory in the East of Asia over a barren island because their very practical minds are not sufficiently expansive to envisage the broad historic meaning of such a victory.

Perhaps that is why the Russians have such contempt for what they call Wall Street. They have no contempt for Dulles who has now out-thought them in two difficult situations, Lebanon and Quemoy.

African Doctor Follows Voodoo

The African belief in magic and witchcraft is deeply ingrained and has defied western attempts to change it. This is particilarly true of the Bantu, according to Miss L. Longmore, in a recent issue of the Central African Journal of Medicine.

These people worship their ancestors, who are supposed to influence their health and well being. The native doctors also abide by this belief. It is useless for an African who adheres to tribal customs to consult a European physician about illnesses caused by ancestors and the white man who tries to talk them out of such concepts is batting a stone wall.

There are two types of medical advisers: the doctor and a diviner, or witchdoctor. The doctor is a servant of the gods (ancestors). He diagnoses and prescribes remedies for ordinary ailments, prevents misfortunes, and brings prosperity. He must provide protection against bad luck, accidents, and witchcraft and is not supposed to give his patients medicines that would harm others.

The diviner supplies powerful magic medications. He works in secret and is consulted by victims of witchcraft or ill fortune.

The doctor handles domestic problems. If a woman finds her husband straying, she goes to a friend's doctor. He tell her that another woman is using medicine against her so that her husband detests her presence. He has decided to sleep in another part of the house because she smells like stale fish.

The perturbed woman then asks for protection and a cure. The doctor gives her four medicines: one, to clean out her intestine; two for the morning bath; three, to be applied to the face; four, a secret medicine to be mixed with dirt and put in her husband's food.

The neglected wife follows directions and one day her husband says, "My wife, I love you very much. The devil wanted to separate us. I'm so pleased I defied his wish."

American physicians and marriage counselors could not do better. The physician might prescribe a tranquilizer to help her bear her grief but the African goes to the heart of the matter and prescribes a remedy geared to the native way of life.

TOMORROW: Be kind to your feet.

REDUCING IN ARTHRITIS

Mrs. G. writes: I have arthritis and my doctor put me on a starvation diet to lose weight. I'm hungry and weak all the time and the pain in my back and hips is no better. Is there any use in continuing this treatment?

REPLY

Give it a fair trial. Slight alternations in the diet may help you to avoid hunger and weakness.

EAR INFECTION

Mrs. W. writes: Can infection in the middle ear be cured by operation? Medicines have done no good.

REPLY

Yes. The most common operation is puncturing the eardrum to allow pus to escape. If infection persists there is a possibility the mastoid is involved. A second operation may be needed to promote drainage from this structure.

IMMUNITY TO BRUCELLOSIS

F. J. writes: Can undulant fever occur more than once?

REPLY

Yes. Apparently one attack does not confer absolute immunity.

Today's Health Hint — The eyes should be used but not abused.

ACCUSED OF ATTACKS

BEIGRADE (UPI) — The government newspaper Borba Friday charged Moscow and its East European satellites had broadcast more than 700 attacks against Yugoslavia within the past five months.. It said Moscow radio alone "broadcasting in Russian and Yugoslav languages emitted over 250 typewritten pages of anti-Yugoslav material." Attacks also were made by the official radios of Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania.

SOME problems we can solve within . . . The hours of a day . . . While others take so long, it seems . . . That we grow old and gray . . . And yet we should not worry if . . . We place our faith in God . . . A difficulty that endures . . . Is nothing really odd . . . Not every answer can be found . . . Before another dawn . . . Some problems are tenacious and . . . They just go on and on . . . Perhaps it is the will of God . . . That we should be restrained . . . In order to appreciate . . . Our ground already gained . . . Or possibly He only wants . . . To try our patience out . . . And thereby weigh our trust in Him . . . Against the smallest doubt.

Civic Projects Subject Of Vote

ance these against the ability to pay.

Using a comprehensive survey and study conducted by Ford, Bacon and Davis, Inc., engineering firm with headquarters in New York, and S. E. Huey and Company, consulting engineers, of Monroe, the committee concurred that improved sewerage and drainage facilities, plus streets, were the most sorely needed. This was the opinion of all participating engineers whose study resulted in a list of other capital improvement problems which the city will have to face in the future.

These engineers were also guided by a resolution of the Monroe-Ouachita Regional Planning Commission, and a memorandum on the street improvement program by Arch R. Winter and Associates, city planning consultants to the City of Monroe.

In all the street studies, the emphasis on railroad grade crossing elimination was manifested.

TOTAL COST

As a result of the studies and discussions, it was decided that a bond issue calling for $5,115,800 was the only possible way such needed improvements could be prosecuted, and necessary steps were taken by the Citizens Committee to present the proposition to the property owners of Monroe.

Upon the recommendation of the Citizens Committee, the Monroe City Council on September 23 voted to call the bond election in a unanimous poll following a review of the proposal.

The program calls for:

1. Improvement of the sanitary sewerage facilities, $897,500.

2. Improvement of the storm drainage facilities, $2,389,000.

3. Improvement of streets and construction of two railroad underpasses, $1,829,300.

The city has agreed that the funds, if voted by the property owners, would be d'spersed upon certification of the engineers that the work has been performed satisfactorily, and that the funds have been spent as specified.

The funds will be administered in strict accordance with the recommendations of the engineers, and Citizens Committee leaders declare that since the committee did recommend the bond issue, it will maintain an alert interest throughout the construction program, and, if deemed necessary, the committee will report from time to time on the progress.

The Citizens Committee has re-emphasized the three projects recommended — sewerage, drainage and streets and rail underpasses — are by no means all the improvements needed in the city, but that they are the most urgent and the committee feels they should be accomplished at the earliest possible time.

In the subsequent articles on the forthcoming bond election for public works improvement, the various details of the three propositions will be outlined in full.

Democrat Group Picks President

BATON ROUGE (AP) — William Cox, commissioner of streets of Lake Charles, was elected president of the United Democrats of Louisiana by the board of directors here Saturday.

Other officers elected include Sen. John Petre of New Orleans, vice president; councilman Theodore Hickey of New Orleans, treasurer, and Miss Carol Vinson of Bossier City, secretary.

The organization will sponsor a $25 dollar per plate fund raising dinner in New Orleans Dec. 9.

2 Full-Scale Detonations Are Reported

ATOMIC TEST SITE, Nev. (UPI)—An unprecedented detonation of two full-scale nuclear devices within a 10-minutes period Sunday was announced Saturday by the Atomic Energy Commission following Saturday morning's 75-foot tower shot on Yucca Flat.

Taking advantage of excellent weather conditions in its bid to complete the current test series by Oct. 31, the AEC also tentatively set another test shot, "Socorro," for Monday.

One of Sunday's scheduled tests is the much-postponed, powerful "Wrangel," and the other a device designated as "Rushmore."

STEM BROKE

A small fireball appeared to bounce off the desert floor Saturday morning when "Rio Arriba," a minor scale experiment in the current series, was detonated. The tower disappeared in the fireball of the sub-kiloton shot and the gray cloud balloon shot quickly to 6,000 feet.

The stem broke from the body of the cloud at about 8,000 feet. Newsmen, five miles away, said the blast was "real dinky," and the shock wave hardly noticeable.

Sunday's "Wrangel" — from a balloon anchored at 1,500 feet—should be considerably more impressive than "Rio Arriba," the ninth in the current series of 13.

Wrangel, set now for 9:20 a.m. EDT Sunday, has a wide range potential, with a possible yield as half the nominal 20 kilotons.

Twenty miles away, at 9:10 a.m. EDT, a balloon device, "Rushmore" will be fired from a balloon 500 feet over Yucca Flat. This will have an estimated yield of one to two ilotons.

The AEC has never "doubled up" on its shots within such a brief span, according to observers here, but the program of intensified firings followed a plan to get the tests completed by Oct. 31.

That's the date talks are to start among the nuclear powers, the U.S., Britain and Russia, over halting all atomic testing.

Six Persons Die In Ala. Auto Wrecks

United Press International

At least six persons died in traffic mishaps in Alabama during the first eight hours of the weekend, a United Press International survey showed Saturday

Amanda Louise Woodward, 58, of Munford, Ala., was killed shortly after 2 a.m. Saturday in a car-truck collision 10 miles west of Anniston on U. S. 78. The Highway Patrol said she was a passenger in the car.

Charles Smith, 14, of Huntsville, was fatally injured late Friday when struck by a car as he walked along U. S. 231 about six miles south of Huntsville.

Four Negroes were killed Friday night when their speeding car careened through a bridge abutment and plunged into a creek on a Dallas County road about 12 miles east of Selma.

Soviet Union Sets Off 9th Nuclear Blast

TOKYO (AP)—Tokyo's Weather Bureau said Sunday the Soviet Union has set off its ninth nuclear blast and probably its biggest since it resumed nuclear weapons testing Sept. 30.

A Weather Bureau spokesman said abnormal air wave pressures around 0.3 millibars were recorded around midnight Japan time (10 a.m. EST Saturday). These contrast with pressures of up to 0.2 millibars in previous new tests and 0.5 millibars in Soviet super blasts last spring.

The latest blast must have been one of several megatons, the expert said. One megaton has the equivalent power of one million tons of TNT.

(The U. S. Atomic Energy Commission announced in Washington it had detected another Soviet nuclear weapons test. The AEC said, "This large-yield test is the ninth U. S.S.R. detonation announced by the United States since Sept. 30. This test, like the others, took place north of the Arctic Circle.")

The Weather Bureau here has recorded five Soviet tests on its sensitive microbarographs since Sept. 30. Four others, detected and announced by the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, were not recorded here.

Miss. Mayor Is Named In Damage Suit

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) — Mayor James Ballard of Tupelo was named Saturday in a $25,000 damage suit charging harrassment of a Tupelo business man.

Dale Walton charged in the suit Ballard conspired with policemen Lloyd Grissom and Nile McKinney to have him arrested.

The suit further states the officers, acting under Ballard's command, arrested Walton Sept. 28 and kept him in jail without cause for five hours.

Walton has been arrested more than 100 times in the last 3 years.

The suit asking for $25,000 actual and punitive damages and all costs, is the most drastic action yet in the three-year feud between Walton and Ballard.

The controversy began over Walton's arrests for operating his grocery-service station on Sunday.

IN FORMOSA

Declaration Of Unity Foreseen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Administration officais predicted Saturday that next week's conferences in Formosa will produce a joint declaration of unity and a private agreement to avoid provoking renewed Communist attacks.

The time is ripe now for compromising U.S.-Nationalist Chinese disagreements, with a minimum of haggling, these officials said.

Their predictions suggested that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles hopes he and President Chiang Kai-shek can present a solid and successful-looking front to both the world and the voters back home at the conclusion of the talks.

Dulles is due in Taipei Tuesday, on a flight from Rome, for three days of talks. He will leave for Washington just before expiration of the third week of Red China's Quemoy cease fire.

Officials discounted the possibility that Dulles would try to persuade Chiang to make major, public concessions to win a lasting extension of the cease fire, such as demilitarization of the offshore islands or ending the Nationalists' partial blockade as South China ports.

These sources also doubted that Chiang would make a public issue of his reported desire to win a permanent U.S. guarantee to help defend the offshore islands.

These problems will be discussed, it was presumed here. But the emphasis will be kept on the theme of unity in the face of the Communists' new political campaign to weaken Nationalist faith in the United States and undermine Chiang's prestige.

The main objective now, Dulles indicated at his news conference here Tuesday, is to complete what he considers a successful demonstration that his policy of standing firm against any communist threat pays off.

The urgency has gone out of efforts to persuade Chiang and the Communists to end the Chinese civil war. Pressure by the United States' allies to make drastic moves for peace in the Formosa Strait has eased. And the Communists have made clear that they will not accept any compromise short of complete U. S. abandonment of the Nationalists.

In this situation, an administration official said Saturday Dulles has done all that he reasonably can do. He has declared that the United States will not support a Nationalist return by force to the mainland. He has given public assurance that the offshore islands never again will be used by the Nationalists to blockade mainland ports or as bases for raids and espionage landings on the Communist coast.

Union Role In Politics Discussed

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (UPI) — Ralph J. Cordiner, president of General Electric Co., Saturday described the AFL-CIO as "the most aggressive and successful force in politics" and equally as powerful as "all other groups and individuals combined."

He said the Nov. 4 congressional election may give the big labor organization more political influence than is held by the remainder of American society.

Cordiner made this appraisal in a statement prepared for a closed door meeting of the Commerce Department's business advisory council. Although a member of the council's labor policy committee, he said his remarks were "purely my own."

He told fellow corporation executives that most observers believe that as a result of next month's elections, the AFL - CIO will gain "the added 11 senators and 41 representatives that will give the union officials an absolute majority and the power to pass or repeal legislation at will."

"This imbalance of political power," he continued, is, "to only a small degree, in the hand of the racketeers under attack by the McClellan (Senate Rackets) Committee. It is principally in the hands of the other union officials, who nevertheless put forward ideologies and proposals which result in inflation, concentration of power in central government, damage to progress and withering of freedom."

In apparent reference to "union shops" clauses in labor contracts, Cordiner said "compulsory (union) membership, which wields a monopoly of the labor market, is the source of the economic power of union officials."

He said "this license to take away jobs" is the "basic source of the political power wielded through the use of vast funds and manpower without any necessary regard to the wishes of members who pay the bill." He added that it "makes the union official the master rather than the servant of the members."

A non-union worker who takes a job in a "union shop" establishment is obliged to join the union after a certain period or lose the job.

Cordiner said the last Congress failed to take any action to check union "monopoly power." He said he thought it "unlikely that any will be made in the next; in fact, the reverse is all too likely."

Terms Given For Tunisia, UAR Relations

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) —Authoritative Arab sources said Saturday Tunisia would resume diplomatic relations with United Arab Republic if the U.A.R. would expel Salah Ben Youssef, Tunisian dissident leader now living in Cairo.

Tunisia broke relations Wednesday. Tunisian Foreign Minister Sadok Mokkadem said the U.A.R. had interfered in Tunisia's internal affairs and supported Youssef and others hostile to the Tunis government.

Youssef, an anti-Western extremist, once worked with President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia for independence from France. He split with him in 1956 because of Bourguiba's moderate, pro-Western policy. Ben Youssef went to Cairo and was sentenced to death in Tunisia as an alleged inciter of terrorist opposition.

'Champ Yam' Award Won By Area Girl

NEWELLTON (Special) — A Newellton High School senior girl won the "Champ Yam Cook" award in the finals of the sweet potato recipe contest now in progress in Opelousas.

Miss Elizabeth Ann Coit, whose yam pecan pie won over three other district winners, was the first north Louisiana girl to win the recipe award. She will receive an all expense paid trip out of state with the Yambilee Queen.

Other district winners were Carolyn Miller, St. Joseph Academy of New Roads; Glenda Shepherd, La Fargue, and Peggy Thibodeaux of Henry High School. District awards were presented by State Supt. of Education, Shelby Jackson.

W. J. Parent of the state department of education was principal speaker at a breakfast held by the Future Homemakers of America in honor of the four district winners. He termed sweet potatoes the "finest product we have in the south."

Print Ballots For Conclave

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Six thousand ballots have been printed for the conclave of cardinals beginning next Saturday to elect a successor to Pope Pius XII.

With balloting twice daily that would be enough for two months of voting. Vatican sources said, however, that the number of ballots should not be taken as the expected length of the conclave.

More Firms Pledged To United Fund

United Givers added 10 firms to its list of "hundred per centers" for the employes' payroll deduction plan as the second week of the fund raising campaign closed, it was learned yesterday.

F. Strauss and Son, Inc., the Penn Hotel, Commercial Securities, Dixie Dandy, Fields, Thompson - Thompson and Sparks, Friendly Finance, Saul Adler Garage, AETNA Finance and Beneficial Finance were the latest firms included in the list of those whose employes are cooperating 100 per cent with the payroll deduction plan of the fund raising drive.

Campaign Chairman R. L. Vanderpool Jr., praised the employes for their generous gestures of cooperation in the plan. He gave credit also to the business managers of the cooperating firms for explaining the advantages of payroll deduction to the employes.

Vanderpool said the reports thus far gave evidence that the drive could be brought to a successful conclusion by the end of this week.

Ouachita Parish United Givers includes 133 affiliated service organizations. Goal for this year's campaign is $210,000.

Soviet Press Writes Off N.Y. Election

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet press Saturday wrote off the New York State elections as an impossible choice between a pair of reactionary billionaires.

The Young Communist League newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda and the Republic organ Soviet Russia both pictured Republican candidate Nelson Rockefeller as the arch villain of American monopolists. He took the brunt of the attacks.

The articles said Rockefeller flashed a good natured campaign smile that would be replaced, if he is elected, by a hard commanding face demanding billions for peacetime military purposes.

IN LIMERICK, IRELAND

Fairy Tale Stalls Airport Extension

LIMERICK, Ireland (AP)—The fares of Ireland are amiable people, as is well known, but not when they get their Irish up.

And since that is where their Irish is right now, goodness knows what's to be done about extending Shannon's International Airport runway.

Ambrose McInerney, who has the contract to do a bit of earth moving for the extension, told about his troubles Saturday.

The Irish government sent him orders not to disturb the fairy fort on top of Trade's Hill. Trouble is, the fairies have their fort where the airport people want to extend the runway.

Quite a useless order, McInerney observed, because his Irish workmen never would molest a fairy fort anyway. As soon play patty-cake with the devil himself, they would.

A foiry fort is a sort of a headquarters and community hall. That's where they have their parties and kick the fairy gong around.

Farmer Frank Fahy, said that many a midnight the fairies can be heard "chomping and chattering" at the fort.

And some think the fairies also are worried about the gold they have buried near the fort.

If an American bulldozer dug into the treasure there could be trouble, real trouble.

Listen again to farmer Fahy. Another farmer of the region died when he took stones from a fairy fort to make a wall.

"His hands swelled up, he died and he never finished the wall," Fahy said. "Poeple here wouldn't even cut a bush on a fairy fort."

So how is the airport authority ever to extend the runway to accomodate the big jet airliners?

Darned if McInerney knows. Why even if he ignored the government and tried to level the hill with the fort on it, his workers would strike more than likely.

Aviation engineers said it would be possible to squeeze the new runway past the little hill, but that would create a minor hazard.

They might have to put red warning lights on the hill. And what if the fairies don't like red lights?

King Family Leaves For Parts Unknown

WOODBINE, Ga. (AP) —Negro minister Clennon King and his family left for parts unknown Saturday after his wife withdrew an abandonment warrant.

Camden County Sheriff W. F. Smith said King was released when the warrant was canceled and the one-time Mississippi college professor took his wife and six children without any notice of their destination.

King was arrested and jailed when he arrived here from Mississippi Wednesday after announcing plans for a "Back to Africa" movement for skilled American Negroes. A white man in Jacksonville, Fla., was to sponsor the venture.

King's wife obtained the abandonment warrant when she read news accounts of his Arrican plan and intention to talk her into going with him.

Sheriff Smith said he felt King appeared mentally unbalanced and was harboring "a tremendous hatred for white people."

King ran into trouble at least twice in Mississippi. He was arrested last June when he tried to enroll in the University of Mississippi and aroused strong feelings when he said he would try to enroll his child in an all-white Gulfport elementary school.

The enrollment plan fell through when his wife left Gulfport with the children and came here. She said she was terrified by threatening telephone calls

Distribution Of Funds For Science Ready

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U. S. Office of Education reported Saturday it is ready to begin distributing initial funds in the new federal aid-to-science education program which ultimately will cost more than a billion dollars.

The agency also is hopeful that college students will be able to obtain scholarship loans under the program by February before the second school semesters begin.

At the moment, the office is prepared to handle applications on a minor phase of the program —a $500,000 allocation for research projects on use of television, radio, motion pictures and other media to improve teaching methods.

The precedent - setting, seven-year program was approved by Congress just before adjournment in August. It was prompted by Soviet Sputnik successes and reports the Russian educational system was turning out more scientists and engineers than the United States.

The office of Education expects to be ready for business on college student loans, grants for science equipment in public schools, and other major features of the program by Jan. 1.

Six Youngsters Arrested In N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — Six boys ranging from 11 to 13 years old were arrested Saturday in connection with the smashing of six windows in a Brooklyn synagogue last Wednesday. Police said they admitted stoning the windows.

The boys were charged with juvenile delinquency, placed in the custody of their parents and will appear in Children's Court Monday. Because of their age, their names were not revealed.

'GIVE 'EM HELLO'

Ike In Denver For Week End

DENVER (UPI)—President and Mrs. Eisenhower flew to Denver Saturday for a week end break in the Chief Executive's 5,300-mile "give 'em hello" campaign trip.

The President first called on Mrs. Elvira Doud, his elderly mother - in - law, at her Denver home.

Then he planned to check in at the Brown Palace Hotel, and with Denver mortgage banker Aksel Nielsen drive around town.

White House Press Secretary James Hagerty said Eisenhower was not following a formal schedule during the afternoon.

"He hasn't even told me what he is going to do or where he is going on this trip (with Nielsen)" Hagerty said. The President "wanted to see some of the places built up around Denver since his 1955 heart attack at the Doud home.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon is spending the week end at the Broadmoor Hotel at Colorado Springs, 65 miles to the south, to rest a sore throat. He did not plan to see the President over the week end.

Eisenhower, who flew to Denver from Abilene, Kan., was using a soft approach "give 'em hello" with audiences, avoiding strong anti-Democratic utterances in the first stages of his campaign trip.

He will fly from Denver to Los Angeles Monday.

The Chief Executive planned to visit the Columbine Country Club and to tour the Martin Co.'s Titan missile plant at suburban Littleton with Nielsen.

The Eisenhowers stepped from the Columbine III, shading their eyes from the bright Indian summer sun, to the applause of 200 welcomers—including Democratic Gov. Steve McNichols, his wife and their five children.

Among those greeting the President were Sen. Gordon Allott (R-Colo.), Rep. Byron Rogers (D-Colo.), Republican congressional candidates John Harpel and John Mackie, state Republican Chairman Richard Shaw, and two old friends — former Colorado Gov. Dan Thornton and Nielsen.

The President and Mrs. Eisenhower, in a black limousine, led a cavalcade of 15 cars from the airport to 750 Lafayette Street.

After a 40-minute visit with the ailing Mrs. Doud, the President went on to the Brown Palace hotel. Mrs. Eisenhower was to join him there later in the day.

It was in the Doud resistance, Mrs. Eisenhower's girlhood home, that the Chief Executive suffered a heart attack in 1955. His only visit to Colorado since then was an hour-long appearance at Stapleton Field Oct. 20, 1956, at a political rally.

Mrs. Doud, 80, did not go to the airport. A presidential aide explained she is "not strong enough" to bear the excitement surrounding a presidential arrival.

Johnson Hits Republicans' 'Don't Views'

WELCH, W. Va. (UPI)—Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson Saturday night accused the Republicans of "running against Eugene Debs," the late socialist leader, and of taking a "can't afford it" attitude toward the nation's problems.

The Texas Democrat said the GOP record "is a long series of don'ts."

On the other hand, he said at a Democratic rally, the Democratic - controlled 85th Congress passed measures to help the economy and "put people back to work."

He said the GOP is "running against Debs" because "they can beat poor old Gene Debs. He is dead and buried.

"But they can't beat unemployment, they can't beat sickness and disease, and they can't beat Khrushchev by resurrecting a dead man—and a dead issue—and kicking him around," he declared.

Johnson said the most important issue of the congressional election campaign is "to unite Americans for effective action. . . it is whether America will reach back to the past; shrink its frontiers; refight dead issues and quarrel among ourselves or whether America will step boldly into the world of the present and the future."

He said that to Democrats, "the problems of our time present a great challenge to be met with all the initiative, courage, and determination that Americans can muster."

But to Republicans, Johnson said, "the problems of our time are hazards from which Americans should shrink in fear, doubt and timidity."

He denounced as "ridiculous" the "imaginary bugaboos of Socialism and fiscal irresponsibility" raised as issued by top Republicans.

He said the Democrats are confident of regaining two senate seats in this unemployment-troubled state.

Rep. Robert C. Byrd (D-W.Va.) is opposing Sen. W. Chapman Revercomb (R-W.Va.), and former Rep. Jennings Randolph (D-W.Va.) is seeking to unseat Sen. John D. Hoblitzell, Jr. (R-W.Va.).

Johnson reminded his audience that President Eisenhower vetoed a bill to provide federal aid for economically-distressed areas. He said a bigger senate working margin for the Democrats would make it easier to override such vetoes.

Pope's Doctor Is Under Fire From Society

ROME (UPI)—The Rome Medical Assn., Saturday accused Prof. Riccardo Galeazzi - Lisi of unprofessional conduct in selling to newspapers and magazines intimate and detailed accounts of the last hours of Pope Pius XII.

Galeazzi - Lisi was physician to the late Pope for more than a quarter of a century.

He called the society's action a case of "professional jealousy".

The association announced it would hold an early meeting to decide what formal action should be taken. A spokesman said this could range from censure to expulsion from the medical society of the province of Rome.

There was no official Vatican comment but Vatican quarters said there was "virtually no other course" for the society to take.

Galeazzi-Lisi's journalistic ventures were know to have shocked and dismayed many in the Vatican. They were not authorized by the Vatican.

Start Monday On Withdrawal From Jordan

LONDON (UPI) — The withdrawal of British forces from Jordan will begin Monday and is expected to be completed in about three weeks, the Defnese Ministry announced Saturday.

The troops sent to the Middle East country in July to bolster the regime of King Hussein will move out by air and sea. The airlift which will pass over Syria to Cyprus will be under the supervision of United Nations observers.

Withdrawl of American forces from Lebanon is now in its final stages and expected to be completed by the end of October. The United States sent more than 14,000 Marines and soldiers into Lebanon at the urgent request of former President Camille Chamoun following the revolt in Iraq.

Britain dispatched 2,500 paratroops and soldiers from garrisons in Cyprus and Kenya to Jordan.

Details of the airlift and its route were not disclosed.

In New York the United Nations announced it had arranged with Britain, the United Arab Republic and Lebanon for U.N. personnel to help supervise the air evacuation of the British paratroops.

The announcement said U.N. observers, under command of Maj. Gen. Odd Bull of Norway will sit in control towers to help supervise the passage of troop carrier planes over the Syrian part of the U.A.R.

Reports Pope Urged Firmness Of United States

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pope Pius XII declared shortly before his death that the "real peace of the world" depends upon the firmness of U.S. opposition to Communist aggression, Sen. A. Willis Robertson (D-Va.) disclosed Saturday.

Robertson, along with Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson and Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.), had an audience with the Pope a few hours before he was felled by a stroke at Castel Gondolfo, his summer palace.

Robertson, in a United Press International interview, described the pontiff as being "very commendatory" about U.S. resistance to communism. He quoted the Pope as saying he felt the "real peace of the world" rests on the "firmness of our opposition to Communist aggression."

He was a very great man, Robertson said. "A very able man who made a very real contribution" to world peace.

Robertson, Anderson and Fulbright called on the late pontiff when they were enroute to New Delhi, India, as American delegates to the annual meeting of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

The Virginia Democrat also reported that economic conditions in Italy are "much improved." He particularly praised the low degree of inflation and said Italy's "financial situation is to be commended."

Man Breaks Into House, Assaults 18-Year-Old Girl

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — A husky unshaven man early Saturday raped an 18-year-old girl after breaking into her apartment, police reported.

The victim said she was awakened about 4 a.m. when the man shook her and told her he was going to rape her and take her money.

She said he switched on her radio, tuned it up loudly and warned her not to scream. He assaulted her and took her purse containing $3.

He left, with another threat and after a few minutes she armed herself with a butcher knife and went through her back yard to a telephone where she summoned police.

Officers said the man, described as about 30-35 years old, stocky, with short coarse hair and dressed in a sport shirt and dungarees, forced the front screen door and apparently entered with a skeleton key.

Signs Point To Democrat Win In Nov.

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political signposts across the country, checked state by state by The Associated Press, point to strengthened Democratic holds on both Senate and House after the ballots are in Nov. 4.

Some of the signs have been there for months, of course. So the fresh readings, a month before the election, mainly confirm that it is with good reason that Democrats are cantering confidently down autumn political trails.

If the omens are right — and sometimes they aren't — the Democrats seem likely to elbow Republicans out of at least five or six Senate seats and possibly 10 or 12. Their chances look best, though in varying degree, in Arizona, California, Connecticut, Indiana, Maryland, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, which has two contests.

The Democrats command a 49-47 edge in the Senate now. And that doesn't count the seat they picked up in the Maine election last month.

The GOP also dropped a House seat in Maine. It might lose another 10 or 20 in the November election, or even as many as 30 or 40 or more if there is a tremendous Democratic sweep. Best bets for Democratic gains of from one to three or four seats, are in such states as California, Connecticut, Indiana, Michigan and Washington.

Along the way, the Democrats may net another governor or two — they have 29 now to 19 Republicans. They may be able to unhorse Republicans in California, Maryland and Ohio. They have a chance of upsetting a Republican in Nevada. But the Democrats are going to have to fight to keep their men in the statehouses of traditionally Republican Iowa and Kansas.

All in all, the trend coast to coast at this point is Democratic, on the basis of traditional voting habits, scattered polls, and the views of political analysts, writers and experienced AP correspondents in every state.

In fact, Republicans are talking hopefully of Democratic over-confidence — Vice President Richard M. Nixon says this is a big GOP asset — and telling themselves they can retrieve control of the House, at least, if they work hard enough.

Then there is the one, big uncertain element. What will be the effect when President Eisenhower plunges personally into the campaign next week in an attempt to erase Republican apathy and shoulder shrugging?

In the last nonpresidential election four years ago, Eisenhower dived in at the last minute and gave the GOP a lift which unquestionably tightened some races and perhaps tilted a few to the Republicans. But his efforts still weren't enough to salvage a GOP victory and prevent the Democrats from snatching control of Congress from GOP hands.

Nor could the Republicans get Congress back in 1956 when the President won another sweeping, personal triumph.

Thus there have been three Congresses since Eisenhower has been in the White House and two of them have been under Democratic management. And now the Democrats appear to be on the way to making it three out of four.

Along with the evident lack of political power in the presidential coattails, statistical and historical factors also weigh in favor of the Democrats.

Democratic registrations generally have been increasing more than Republicans. Furthermore, the party of the administration in power has lost strength in the House in 10 of the last 11 nonpresidential elections and in the Senate in 9 of the 11.

No particular issues appear to be propelling the Democrats along this line. They talk about foreign policy, the Sherman Adams affair, recession, discontent with administration farm policies among some of the farmers, and a wide range of other topics.

But interest in the election is low over most of the nation. And neither Democrats nor Republicans have been able to come up with any massive national issues capable of pulling voters irresistibly one way or the other.

In the South, Democrats claim and Republicans deny that the integration issue has all but wiped out modest gains the GOP had been marking up in Dixie.

Certainly there isn't any question that Democrats will take all the Senate and governor races in the South, including that of Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas for a third term. Faubus has only nominal Republican opposition.

• HIKE FOR VICARS

LONDON (UPI)—The Most Rev. Dr. Geoffrey F. Fisher, archbishop of Canterbury, announced on Thursday a six shilling (.84) weekly salary increase for Britain's 12,000 Church of England vicars. The archbishop said the average salary of a vicar now was $2,007 a year, plus a rent-free house. He said the wage was not "satisfactory" when compared with the earnings of "other learned professions" but that church commissioners could not authorize bigger increases now.

IT HAPPENED IN AMERICA

Some Of First Teachers In U.S. Virtual Slaves

By G. K. HODENFIELD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the first teachers in colonial America were virtual slaves, working off a term in debtors' prison.

There are many teachers today who insist that times haven't changed a bit.

Perhaps the almost uniquely American attitude of disdain for teachers is the primary reason for this country's teacher shortage. It shows in salary schedules that almost all educators say are too low to lure good teachers into the field and keep them there.

By the latest estimates, U.S. public schools are short some 135,000 qualified teachers. The results are overcrowded classrooms, double sessions, and emergency teachers who aren't really qualified for the job.

The recent report of the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, Inc., said the root problem of the teacher shortage is financial.

"Salaries must be raised, immediately and substantially," the report noted. "Those (teachers) with more than modest financial needs and responsibilities can only solve their problems by becoming administrators, or leaving education altogether."

In 1957-58, the average salary for all classroom teachers was $4,520 a year. But that figure is deceptive. California and New York hire the most teachers, and they pay the highest salaries. That brings the average up.

One out of every four classroom teachers last year received less than $3,500. In eight states the average annual salary of the entire teaching staff was less than $3,500.

KENTUCKY

In three states—North Dakota, Mississippi and Kentucky, one teacher in three was paid less than $2,500 for the school year. The average for all of Mississippi was just over that: $2,525.

If we use the national average of $4,520, it works out to about $120 a week for the school year, or about $86 a week if the salary is supposed to cover a full 12-month period.

On the basis of a 40-hour week, that $120 works out to an even $3 an hour. That's a nice round figure that sounds fairly impressive — but here again the figure is deceptive. The teacher who works a 40-hour week is a rare bird, indeed.

Most surveys show that teachers work anywhere from 50 to 60 hours a week on school chores—teaching, preparing lessons, grading papers, taking tickets at basketball games, chaperoning dances, and organizing and supervising outside activities.

At 50 to 60 hours a week, the pay scale drops to $2 to $2.40 an hour. This is considerably below the pay of the average plumber, carpenter, bricklayer or other skilled workman in the building trades, and even further below the pay scale in most other professions.

HOURLY

These weekly and hourly figures are based on the national annual average of $4,520. If we consider Mississippi's yearly average of $2,520, it comes out to $68 a week for a 37½-week school year, or about $49 a week on a full-year basis. And the hourly rate, even for the school year alone, drops to between $1.13 and $1.36.

To earn this salary, Mississippi requires that a teacher have at least a bachelor's degree from a four-year college or university, with from 18-24 semester hours in professional education courses. Since this pay scale doesn't attract many such teachers, Mississippi and other states have to rely heavily on "emergency" teachers, some of whom have had little more than a high school education.

At the other end of the salary scale sits California, paying its classroom teachers an average annual salary of $5,750. Using the same basis as above, this works out to either $153 or $110 a week.

Even so, California is having trouble finding enough teachers. Officials in other states complain of California raiding parties that scour the plains east of the Rockies, find good teachers and lure them West with the promise of bigger paychecks.

TEACHERS

In any discussion of teachers' salaries, nothing muddies the waters so much as the length of the school year. Someone is sure to say, "I don't think teachers do too badly, considering they work only nine months a year."

And there's no doubt about it, a three-month vacation every year is a very attractive fringe benefit — if you can afford it.

There aren't any exact figures available, but most surveys indicate that two of every three men teachers have to work at summer jobs to make both ends meet. The ratio for women teachers seems to be about one in eight.

That takes some of the gloss off the three-month vacation. So does the requirement in many states that all teachers continue to improve themselves professionally by attending summer school, usually at least once in every four or five years.

Even if they weren't required, summer school courses offer the teacher the only practical way he can advance both professionally and financially.

Russia Plans Two Antarctic Stations Soon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Russia plans to establish two new Antarctic stations during the coming South Polar summer, well-informed scientific circles have told United Press International.

The plans imply that the Russians have modified an earlier project to attempt an overland crossing from Mirny Station by way of the South Pole to the Bellingshausen Sea west in the 1958-59 summer. They still contemplate a crossing on this route in 1959-1960 season.

In the 1958-59 summer, if preparations are completed as scheduled the Russian transcontinental traverse will be made on a route leading from Mirny via the South Pole to a new station which will be established by the ship Lena on the Princess Astrid coast.

SECOND STATION

The other new Russian station will be in a region known as the Ellsworth Highland, inland from the Bellingshausen Sea. Its establishment would await the success of efforts by the Russian ship Ob to penetrate the dangerous ice-laden Bellingshausen area.

The Russians presumably would use an airlift from the Bellingshausen seacoast to an interior point in the Ellsworth Highland during the 1958-59 summer, and the station would be ready for the Mirny - Bellingshausen traverse in 1959-60.

Early in the 1958-59 summer, the Russians will send a supply expedition from Mirny to the present Russian interior station at Vostok. The Vostok station is approximately at latitude 46 degrees 51 minutes and longitude 107 degrees east.

On How To Equip A Dream

By ED MARKAITY

That's what engineers at Lear, Inc., are trying to find out. Lear has been commissioned by the Air Force Wright Air Development Center to design and build a model "crew capsule" for a yet undetermined type of space vehicle.

Recently, the self-styled "Wild Scheme Group" finished cockpit mockups requested by the Air Force for hypothetical aircraft of the 1960s.

Both jobs are sort of like building a skyscraper top floor first, or eating a doughnut from the inside out.

The program may cover a crew capsule for a space ship. Or it might be a space station which would orbit around the earth serving as a space-borne landing strip or aircraft carrier.

This is dream-type stuff. One concept of a space station to serve as a base for defense or reconnaissance vehicles is a doughnut-like structure about a city block in diameter. It would orbit the earth at about 22,000 miles.

"When we set out to provide cockpit mockups for the Air Force's hypothetical aircraft, the main problem was to break thinking loose from conventionalism."

"For example," says Olinger, "ask someone to design a new type lawmower. His first thought invariably will be toward some kind of reel-blade arrangement.

"But maybe a mower should be developed to burn off the grass or trim it in some radically different manner."

When they applied this idea to cockpits for aircraft still unborn, they came up with a pilot-manager principle.

Automatic instruments free the pilot from routine flight tasks. The pilot manages, or supervises, instruments which direct the aircraft. This keeps him on a stand-by basis to cope with unforeseen situations.

22-man grand jury that indicted the five suspects.

Assistant Jury Foreman Robert C. Van Camp said a caller threatened to "kill all of you who indicted those innocent men . . . this is the Confederate underground."

There has been no confirmation of the existance of any such organization and southern Confederate patriot groups have denounced the bombers.

Jury Foreman J. Ben Moore said a caller told him it appeared that Mayor William B. Hartsfield could "get anything he wants" out of the grand jury and that the jury members "are going to pay for it."

Assistant Foreman Van Camp is music director of radio station WB, owned by the Atlanta Newspapers, Inc., which also have been the target of threatening calls. A crowd was gathering around the afternoon Atlanta Journal building but a check showed nothing unusual.

Rabbi Jacob N. Rothschild held the first religious services at the temple Friday night since the Sunday blast knocked an eighteen-foot hole in the rear area, doing $200,000 damage.

Rothschild said the blame for such acts rests not only on the lawless but on "good, decent people who sat idly by and failed to speak and practice the ideals of their religious faith."

"Today our temple; tomorrow a church," the rabbi said. "No one is safe in the jungle of lawlessness."

TRADE HEAVY

Stocks Emerge To New Record High

NEW YORK (AP)—Stock market trading was the heaviest in 25 years this week as stocks withstood tremendous selling pressure and emerged at a record high.

The week's volume soared to 24,402,570 shares, the largest total since the week ended July 22, 1933 when 42,402,783 shares changed hands.

Average daily trading was 4,880,514 shares. On two sessions turnover climbed well past the five-million-share mark.

The market survived two days of extremely stormy weather, Tuesday and Wednesday. The business news remained favorable. Sharp declines on these days were attributed to profit taking.

The feeling became widespread that now was the time to cash in on big gains. Sooner or later the market was due for a correction and many market analysts believed that a correction was overdue. The market had been rising for eight straight weeks and gone to historic peaks on the four previous weeks.

Most of the selling was attributed to traders and the public rather than to the big institutions which have been the backbone of the market's long rise. In fact, one of the biggest brokerage houses reported that institutions such as mutual funds bought considerably more than they sold during the two days of falling prices.

of the national Democratic party."

He declared the Republicans should have clear sailing in the next presidential race.

"After all," Potter said, "the support of a third party is just a vent for emotion and cannot contribute to good government since a third party candidate could not be elected."

Potter tossed a verbal dart at Chairman Paul Butler of the Democratic national party, when he said:

"The only evidence I see of the national Democratic party in the South is the continuing insults by Chairman Paul Butler at the people of the South and recently particularly toward Louisiana."

The GOP official was referring to Butler's statement that he will continue to recognize Louisiana's Camille Gravel as Democratic national committeeman despite Gravel's ouster by the state committee.

"It is evident," Potter said, "that Mr. Butler likes to have his national committeemen hand-picked rather than have them representative of the people of the state."

Free World To Pay Its Final Tribute To Pope

in the church's nine days of deep mourning for its "Pope of Peace." The last of the masses Sunday will be attended by all official representatives of foreign governments.

As she took her place among other dignitaries at the mass, Mrs. Luce smiled slightly in response to nods of recognition from several of the cardinals, including Francis Cardinal Spellman, archbishop of New York.

Some distance from the altar was a catafalque about 10 feet high upon which reposed an empty, symbolic coffin. Surrounding the catafalque were four tiers of lighted candles. On top of the coffin was the three-tiered papal crown.

Brilliantly uniformed Noble Guards, swords at their shoulders, and Swiss Guards in medieval uniforms, holding long halberds, formed the guard of honor.

Those attending were there by invitation. While it was in progress, others were permitted to enter the basilica. Most were tourists, and the routing lectures of their guides could be heard above the low-pitched Latin of the mass.

A considerably larger number will attend the final requiem mass Sunday.

Dulles, accompanied by McCone and Mrs. Luce arrived Saturday morning in a U.S. Air Force jet tanker.

"We are here to represent President Eisenhower at the solemn funeral services Sunday for Pope Pius XII," Dulles said. "We are deeply grieved that the occasion which brings us back to Italy is such a sad one. Pope Pius XII kept faith and justice alive. His passing has saddened the entire world, but his inheritance will never be forgotten."

A local boarding house group, lingering at the dining table after they had finished the meal, got reminiscent as they described bosses they had known. One said: "I thought I'd make a hit with boss one day, so I always got there first in the morning and was the last one to leave at night. Also I always filled a big briefcase before I left.

"For several weeks my boss quietly watched all this. Then he came out with: 'I have watched you for some days, Fred. You stay late, you come early.' I began to puff out my chest a bit. 'You take work home. Either you have too much to do, or you must be highly inefficient.' "

Northeast is one of the three colleges in Louisiana which he will visit. From here he will go to Louisiana Tech, then to Northwestern State College.

He will speak to the Northeast religious activities committee of faculty and students Monday at 3 p.m. at the college president's home, and he will address students of all denominations at a meeting that night. Tuesday's schedule includes a Presbyterian faculty fellowship luncheon at the Westminster House, followed by conferences with students. The minister and teacher also will be available late Monday afternoon for student consultation.

Magruder is visiting colleges and universities on behalf of the Student Volunteer Movement to discuss the nature of the Christian mission and students' involvement in the work. At the Monday night meeting he will speak to students on Christian summer service opportunities, especially abroad.

ON STAFF

During the coming year Magruder will be on the staff of the 18th Student Volunteer Movement Quadrennial Conference, serving as secretary. Completing this assignment, he and his wife will return to Japan to do student work in Kobe.

FAUBUS SAYS

School Corp. Means Business

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Orval E. Faubus said emphatically Saturday Little Rock's plan for private schools is no subterfuge, but an "out and out plan for private segregated schools."

The Little Rock Private School Corp. means business, the governor said. The corporation plans to open classes for white seniors Monday in a move to replace the public high schools closed by Faubus to avoid integration.

The governor's remarks were in reply to a charge Friday by Wiley A. Branton, a Negro attorney for the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

Branton described the private school plan as "merely a subterfuge, in an attempt to evade previous court orders, with which he will deal in due time."

Under Branton's legal attack, the Little Rock School Board has been restrained by federal court from leasing its empty high school buildings to the private school corporation.

The corporation, therefore, was forced to find classrooms elsewhere. When it announced opening plans Friday, the corporation revealed that it had leased a building recently sold by the University of Arkansas to a private individual.

Faubus Saturday had words of praise for plans by Ouachita Baptist College, of Arkadelphia, Ark., to open a high school division here. The Baptists will start registration of students Monday with school scheduled to commence Oct. 27.

Like the private school corporation, the Baptists will admit only white students. No plans have been made for Negro pupils, who also were shut out of their public high school by Faubus' closing order.

"I have no connection with the Baptist plan," said Faubus, a Baptist.

The governor has worked closely with officials of the private corporation and has solicited funds for it in letters bearing his signature.

Three Thousand More Homeless On Tex. Border

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex. (UPI) Three thousand more persons, making a total of 13,000 in less than a week, fled the wildest flood in the Rio Grande's history Saturday.

The churning river, six miles wide at one point, has swamped seven villages and flooded 80 per cent of the land between its levees in the 150 miles between Rio Grande City, Tex., and a point 10 miles north of Brownsville, Tex.

Damage was heaviest on the Mexican side, where 2,500 of the 3,000 who had to abandon their homes fled to the hills with as much furniture and clothing as they could take with them.

The Rio Grande crested in Rio Grande City at 30.1 feet early Saturday and was expected to hit Reynosa, Mexico, early Sunday. Three years ago the river was dry.

About 3,000 persons have left Reynosa in the last two days. Workmen there were shoving up 24-foot high levees against the flood crest.

12 WOUNDED

NAGOYA, Japan (UPI) — Twelve persons were wounded when a 21-year-old mental patient, worked up by a play about the Samurais (knights) of ancient Japan, ran amok with a butcher knife in a theater here Friday night.

FIRST '59 FORD OWNER—Stephen J. Daigle, Jr., associated with Butler Real Estate Company in West Monroe, was the first of several to buy new '59 Fords when they went on display Friday at Brown-Rivers-Scogin in Monroe and West Monroe. The local Ford officials reported that this year's models gained the greatest immediate public acceptance of any model in the dealership's history. Mr. Daigle's reaction in buying a '59 Ford was fairly typical of the general public. He said, "I looked at all new models and was more impressed with the '59 Ford. I like its smooth, clean cut lines and elegant styling, as opposed to extreme changes. I think it's important that my new station wagon has aluminized mufflers, and it sure looks like the new engine will provide economy of operation. Since our choice of models was a 9-passenger station wagon, we especially preferred having the rear seat face forward. We think this will provide greater safety and comfort for our family." Mr. Daigle is shown left, receiving the keys to his Ford Country Sedan from Mike Smith, Manager, Brown-Rivers-Scogin's West Monroe location, 102 Bridge Street, where the first '59 Ford sale was made.—Adv.

750 Lafayette St. Steps In Mind Of Ike?

DENVER (AP) — Those steps President Eisenhower climbed Saturday as the crowd applauded —they must have brought back a grim memory of a day three years ago.

The last time those porch steps at 750 Lafayette St. figured in the President's life was on Sept. 24, 1955.

That was the day he suffered a heart attack, when, as a gravely ill man, he was helped down those front porch steps to his waiting limousine.

That day—murky and gloomy in contrast to Saturday's brilliant sun—he was supported by aides and doctors as he made his way to the car and was hustled to Fitzsimons Army Hospital.

Now it was all different on Eisenhower's arrival at the home of his ailing mother-in-law, Mrs. John S. Doud, 82.

Whatever the president's thoughts were as he climbed those steps, he gave no indication.

This was his first visit to the Doud home since he left it that September Saturday three years ago.

On hand as his car swung into the driveway were some two or three hundred persons—many of them neighbors of Mrs. Doud, friends who saw a lot of the President during the four summers he vacationed here starting in 1952 as the Republican nominee.

The President stayed 35 minutes and then drove on to a downtown hotel. Mrs. Eisenhower remained with Mrs. Doud.

The President, taking the weekend off before resuming a cross-country political campaign, sent word to newsmen that he planned to take it easy the rest of the day.

Stevenson Says He Favors U.S., Russian Talks

MILWAUKEE, (AP) — Adlai Stevenson said Saturday night America "should be ready to talk with the Russians at every level."

"We must not hope for too much from these talks," Stevenson told a Democratic party rally.

The aim, he said, should be "to keep communication open, to exchange views, to break down if we can, little by little, the barriers of ignorance that divide us."

In a political campaign address prepared for a one-dollar a head bean dinner to help Wisconsin candidates, the former Democratic presidential candidate attacked sharply what he termed a lack of U. S. national leadership.

"The tragedy of the Eisenhower administration is that its only weapons seem to be platitudes or paratroops," Stevenson said.

"And this seems to be true whether the situation is Little Rock or Lebanon, South America or Quemoy."

Stevenson charged that Eisenhower leadership was lacking especially in "that great national undertaking in racial equality decreed by the Supreme Court."

"Indeed, he has refused even to endorse the moral rightness of the Supreme Court on desegregation."

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Vatican workmen at Sistine Chapel Saturday put on the special chimney which will carry the plumes of smoke announcing the results of balloting on the new Pope.

A new stove was installed inside the chapel Friday. It will be used to burn the ballots cast by the college of Cardinals when it begins its conclave a week from today.

Paul Martin Looks 'Em Over

Of the two great questions facing our nation's institutions of higher learning today: "How to catch up with the Russians?" and "What to do about football?"—there is some disagreement as to which is the more important. Of course, any old grad knows that first things come first - - - namely, winning that game Sat.

There is little disagreement, however, about which problem is easier to solve. All it takes to catch up with the Russians is a few Einsteins. All it takes to solve football's ills is the wisdom of Solomon, the patience of Job and the power of a czar, all rather hard to get on today's market.

A recent editorial in a national sports magazine revises an old solution to football's troubles — paying the players. Paying them in the light of day, that is. An unnamed prominent coach is said to be advocating this plan. The NCAA would set up a standard salary to be offered by every college in the country and overzealous recruiting would be ended since every coach would have the same offer to make and, all other things being equal, athletes would naturally matriculate to the college that is best suited to him scholastically and geographically.

The loophole in this solution is obvious. Players are paid now, only they call them scholarships, and most schools are in agreement on what can be legally offered a player. All the schools in the Southeastern Conference, for example, have a standard scholarship but somebody is always trying to get that extra edge with under - the - table fringe benefits. They'll continue to try for that extra edge whether the legal payoff is in the form of scholarships, cold cash or Impala convertibles.

However, the above - mentioned coach thinks the cash - on - the-barrelhead system will stop the shady deals. For one thing, he says, the colleges will be putting out as much cash as they care to already and enforcement would be stern enough to "give pause for thought to every college possessing the slightest shred of pride in its reputation."

Well, a lot of colleges, under alumni pressure, are putting out more money now on sports than they care to and as for pride, it usually runs a poor second to a bowl bid.

About the only two ideas we've ever heard of along this line that make sense are not original with us and have been kicked around for some time by sports writers and coaches. One would make a letter of intent binding on every college in the country. Using the SEC for an example again, an athlete who signs a letter of intent with a member school cannot play for any other school in the conference. However, he may jump to a Southwest Conference school.

The nonbreakable letter of intent plan, espoused by Notre Dame's Terry Brennan among others, would end Aug. 31 recruiting raids. But what's to stop the under - the - table deals? That's where idea No. 2 comes in. It would hold the athletes involved responsible for illegal payment. If ace halfback Joe Twinkletoes is discovered to have received a fancy swimming pool for showing up for practice, Joe would be stripped of his scholarship and stripped of his scholarship and barred from intercollegiate athletics. Thus a kin would think twice before hopping on the gravy train with such a derailment possible.

Small colleges may say, with the letter of intent binding all over the country, the big schools will get more than their share of the crop and keep them sitting on the bench for four years. We believe the small school will be better off than ever because most boys will take the little college and probable stardom rather than the big school and a possible four years of oblivion on the bench.

There are also those who say boys should not be penalized for a situation they did not create. True, but greedy athletes are more than innocent bystanders even if over - demanding fans are the root of the problem. The athlete who accepts more than the legal minimum wasn't forced to take it, you know.

These and a thousand other rules won't solve football's problems as long as people demand winning teams and are willing to pay for them, whatever the price. But they may at least bring a situation under control that makes the corruption of old Rome seem tame.

Bastrop's energetic baseball enthusiast, Leonard Pratt, is tackling a big job — promoting an amateur baseball league. Pratt envisions a northeast Louisiana and southern Arkansas loop with Bastrop, Farmerville, West Monroe, Monroe, Rayville, Delhi, Tallulah, Crossett, Lake Providence, Oak Grove and Hamburg as prospective members. He hopes to get eight of these towns in a strictly amateur league with games on week nights and Sunday afternoons.

It'll be a great thing if he can pull it off. More about this next week.

Paul Martin is back at home now after his operation and hospital stay and doing well. After about 20 years on one sort of diet or another, he's tying on the feed-bag.

Another News - Star — World staffer and one of the best auto racing drivers around, Joe Mallard, is still hospitalized after a track accident last week. Popular Joe was on a hot streak before the accident and racing fans are pulling for his quick recovery.

Stay In Thick Of GSC Race With Big Win

LAKE CHARLES, La. (Special)—Quarterback Everett Reynolds steered the Northeast Indians to an important 29-14 upset Gulf States Conference victory over the McNeese Cowboys here last night.

The win was the second in conference play for the undefeated Indians, keeping them high in the 1958 title race. McNeese suffered its second GSC defeat of the season and is now just about out of the running.

Reynolds engineered four Northeast touchdown drives and had a direct hand in the scoring of 20 points.

Reynolds passed 31 yards to Joe Driskill for one touchdown in the second quarter and then ran seven yards for another in the same period. Reynolds passed to Driskill for two points after the final touchdown.

However, the Indians had to battle from 14-13 halftime deficit to pull out the victory. Reynolds tallied the clinching touchdown with 2½ minutes of the third period remaining on a one - yard plunge around right end. The run capped a 66 - yard march that consumed 13 plays.

Northeast padded its winning margin with a four - quarter safety and another touchdown. The safety was marked up when McNeese quarterback Sammy Stribling stepped out of the end zone on a forward pass attempt.

The game's final touchdown was scored in the fading minutes on a one - yard plunge by Terry Head. Head had set up the score two plays earlier with a 31 - yard sprint to the McNeese two.

McNeese jumped off to an early lead when halfback Wally Delia sprinted 70 yards for a touchdown on the sixth play of the game. Stribling's attempt to pass for the extra points failed.

Then Reynolds and his Indian teammates rolled into high gear in the second quarter. Northeast drove 63 yards in 12 plays to score its first touchdown and 53 yards in 15 plays for its second. Jim Laudadio kicked the point after the first touchdown.

McNeese posted its 14-13 halftime margin on a one - yard touchdown run by Harold Thomas and Stribling's run for the two extra points.

Reynolds completed three of five passes for 63 yards and gained 41 yards rushing in 11 carries. He topped a fine performance by punting four times for a 43.3 average.

Head, with 50 yards in 7 carries, and Stewart "Smokey" Stover, with 47 in 17, were Northeast's other main offensive threats.

On defense, the Indians were paced by tackle Luther French, center, Bill McGraw, guards Wally Cox and Alfred Feeney and ends Joe Driskill and Jim Knox.

Booming Bengals Bounce Kentucky Wildcats, 32-7

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR.

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Billy Cannon's two touchdowns triggered a second half Louisiana State drive that crushed Kentucky 32-7 Saturday night as the Tigers won their fifth game before a record 65,000 fans.

Cannon slashed 19 yards and 2 yards for touchdowns as LSU, ninth ranked in the Associated Press poll, won its second Southeastern Conference victory. Kentucky now has won two and lost three.

Quarterbacks Warren Rabb and Durel Matherne chipped in with a potent passing attack good for two touchdowns. Rabb completed a 19-yard pass to end Billy Hendrix in the second quarter to put LSU ahead to stay. Hendrix made a great catch, snatching the ball away from three Wildcat defenders. Matherne pitched five yards to end Don Norwood in the third quarter.

Rabb completed six of nine passes for 50 yards and Matherne connected on four of seven for 71 yards.

Kentucky was handicapped by an injury to quarterback Lowell Hughes, the SEC's leading passer. Hughes played briefly in the third quarter and threw only one incomplete pass.

LSU marched 59 yards in 11 plays after the opening kickoff for a touchdown. Fullback J. W. Brodnax dove over from the two for the score and fullback Tommy Davis kicked the extra point.

Kentucky matched by moving 66 yards after the next kickoff, with

Eisaman connected 24 and 17 yards to halfback Calvin Bird, top receiver in the SEC, to keep the scoring drive rolling.

But LSU took over in the second quarter and Kentucky never seriously threatened again.

Davis rolled a kick out on the Kentucky one. When the Wildcats kicked out, Cannon raced 15 yards to the Kentucky 30. LSU arched to the Kentucky six before losing the ball on a fumble.

The Tigers took the next Kentucky kick and hammered 53 yards in six plays for a touchdown.

Rabb faked a pass and ran 17 yards and connected on a 13-yard pass to Cannon to keep the drive moving.

The scoring play was a 19-yard heave to Hendrix, who was surrounded by Wildcats on the six. The end grabbed the ball, tore away from three defenders and scored to put LSU ahead.

Kentucky fumbled and lost the ball to LSU on the Wildcats 24 on the first play of the second half. End Mickey Mangham recovered for the Tigers. Cannon scored from the 19 one play later. After that, it was no contest.

LSU limited Kentucky to 33 yards rushing and held Kentucky's top ball carrier, halfback Bobby Cravens to a net gain of five yards in four tries.

Kentucky netted 40 yards rushing in the first half but was held to a net seven yards loss after the rest period.

Kentucky connected on two of five passes for 41 yards in the first half, adding eight more completions in 16 tries and 61 yards in the second half.

Davis averaged 47 yards in three kicks for the Tigers, as did end Doug Shively for Kentucky.

Tech took the opening kickoff, and drove to the NSC 28 where the drive stalled. J. W. Slack shortly thereafter intercepted a Demon pass on Tech 25 and returned it to the NSC 32. Max Rudd, Jack Howard and David Williamson alternated in carrying the ball to the two from where Rudd di d over. When NSC was offside on the placement try, Rudd ran over for the two extra points.

NSC took the ensuing kickoff and drove 85 yards for a touchdown. Ralph Conrad and Charley Tolar did the bulk of the ball carrying. Included in the drive was 20-yard pass from Hoffpauir to Conrad and a 7-yarder to Booth. Tolar went over from the three for the score. A pass for the extra point was batted down.

After the half, Tech scored in the first three minutes of the third quarter when end Charles Garris recovered a fumble on the Demon 37. Paul Hynes sprinted 37 on the first play for the score. Howard's kick was no good.

NSC retaliated quickly, moving 80 yards for a TD. Hoffpauir mixed passes with Tolar's running. He passed 7 and 13 yards to Booth and 13 and 6 yards to end George Smith. The touchdown came with 6:40 left in the third period when Don Deen went over from the one. Conrad's run for the extra point was no good.

Tech then drove to the Northwestern 22 where the drive stalled.

In the fourth period, NSC drove to the Tech three before fumbling and Rudd recovered for Tech. Tech, unable to move, punted out to the Tech 37. Hoffpauir passed 31 yards to Tolar to put the ball on the six. Conrad went to the two and Hoffpauir threw to Booth for the touchdown to win it. Hoffpauir's run for the extra point was no good.

Tech took the kickoff and moved out to its own 47 before time ran out.

Warren Easton Stops W.J., 26-0

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Pete Ascani scored three touchdowns Saturday night as Warren Easton blanked West Jefferson 26-0 before 4,000 fans.

Ascani opened the scoring in the first period on a two yard plunge and Mouse Marshall made the first of two placements.

Ascani tallied in the second and fourth periods on aerials from quarterback Bobby Terrell. The other touchdown came on a 24 yard run by Terrell.

The victory gave Easton a 4-1-1 record. West Jefferson now has a 3-3 mark.

FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

Giants Fall In Saturday Upsets

By ED CORRIGAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Wisconsin, Michigan State, Navy and Oregon met their Waterloos in college football Saturday. Auburn barely escaped. And little Maine, which usually doesn't have much to brag about, blew a chance to become the first team in the country to wrap up a conference championship.

But other top outfits, like Army, Ohio State, Notre Dame and Oklahoma—the latter two desperately seeking to regain lost prestige from defeats a week ago—came through.

Wisconsin, which hasn't won undisputed possession of the Big 10 title since 1912 and had won a winning streak of three, was dumped by Iowa 20-9.

The Badgers had been thinking in terms of a championship, but this defeat coupled with a rough schedule ahead, could discourage them.

Purdue chopped down Michigan State 14-6 and struck a telling blow to the Spartans' chances of winning the Big 10 crown. This marked the fourth time in their last six games that Purdue, practically always an underdog, has whipped Michigan State.

Navy was ambushed by Tulane 14-6 with quarterback Richie Petibon directing the attack. This was the Middies' first defeat, and dimmed their chances of winning the Eastern title from the likes of Army and Pitt.

Northwestern stunned Michigan 55-24. It was the worst beating ever inflicted on the Wolverines. The amazing Wildcats, who didn't win a game last year, now have won four straight and the rest of the Big 10 is beginning to sit up and take notice.

As for Maine, well, a victory over Connecticut would have settled the Yankee Conference championship. Maine already had won four straight. But it was not to be, at least this week. Connecticut won 21-6.

The big upset in the Pacific Coast Conference involved Oregon, which dropped a 6-0 decision to Washington State. The Ducks, winners of the championship last year, appeared ready to make a runaway of the league.

As for Auburn, the Tigers, national champions last year and currently No. 2 behind Army in The Associated Press poll, got off with a tie, a 7-7 deadlock against Georgia Tech.

Thus Auburn's string of 17 straight victories was snapped, although the record now stands at 18 games in a row without a defeat. The game figured to be a battle of defense and it was.

Army, hampered by fumbles in the first half, recovered its balance and ground out a 35-6 victory over Virginia. Joe Caldwell, who played only two minutes last season, and Bob Anderson handled most of the running and passing for the West Pointers.

Ohio State, third ranked in the AP poll, continued in the favorite's role in the Big 10 by trouncing Indiana 49-8, while Notre Dame squeaked past Duke 9-7. Oklahoma slaughtered Kansas, 43-0, for its 66th consecutive Big 8 defeatless game. Two ties were recorded.

7-0 VICTORY

Oklahoma State Upsets Houston

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Oklahoma State moved 39 yards for a first half touchdown Saturday night and then called on a magnificent fourth quarter defense to protect a 7-0 lead and knock Houston from the ranks of the undefeated.

A two-touchdown underdog, State's Cowpokes turned a fumble recovery into a 39-yard scoring drive and then stopped second half Houston surges on the State 20, 37, 1, 7, and 22 yard lines.

The hard charging State line disrupted a Houston offense that had averaged 401 yards and 39 points in three games.

Dan Wagner, third string senior quarterback, plunged over for the lone touchdown on the first play after he had hit end Billy Dodson with a 23-yard pass to the 10. End Jim Wood converted.

Houston, ranked No. 15 in the nation after defeating Texas A&M Cincinnati and Wichita, also missed on first half chances that advanced to the State 24 and 27.

In fighting off the second half Houston threats, State ran only 13 scrimmage plays and did not cross midfield until end Don Hitt clinched the victory by intercepting a pass and returning 26 yards to the Houston 27 with just two minutes to play.

Houston's best opportunity came early in the final period when an interference penalty gave the Cougars a first down on the State 5. Four smashes at the middle of the line by quarterback Lonnie Holland failed and the Pokes took over inches from their goal line.

Hawthorn In Top Position In Grand Prix

CASABLANCA (AP) — Mike Hawthorn Saturday piloted his big Ferrari around the ANFA Course at an average of 118.6 m.p.h. and won the No. 1 starting position for Sunday's Grand Prix of Morocco.

Hawthorn was timed in 2 minutes, 23.1 seconds for the circuit which measures 4.71 miles, a new lap record. Juan Manuel Fangio's best time last year, which stood as the lap record, was 2 minutes 25.6 seconds for an average of 116.5 m.p.h.

Stirling Moss of Great Britain, the only man who has a chance to catch Hawthorn in the race for the world driving championship, took the second position with his Vanwall in 2 minutes, 23.2 seconds.

The Grand Prix of Morocco is the last of the year counting for the driving championship. If Moss is to win he must win the race and turn in the fastest lap. Even if he does this, Hawthorn can still win by finishing second.

Other times in the second day of trials included:

Lewis Evans, Great Britain, Vanwall, 2 minutes 23.7 seconds; Jean Behra, France BRM, 2 minutes 23.8 seconds; Phil Hill, Los Angeles, Ferrari, 2 minutes 24.1 seconds; Olivier Gendebien, Belgium, Ferrari, 2 minutes 24.3 seconds; Tony Brooks, Great Britain, Vanwall, 2 minutes 24.4 seconds; Joachim Bonnier, Sweden, BRM, 2 minutes 24.9 seconds.

VMI Captures 13-12 Triumph

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Virginia Military Institute converted two Tampa bobbles for second quarter touchdowns and held on for a rain-soaked 13-12 victory Saturday night.

A conversion by fullback Pete Johnson following the first Keydet score provided VMI with its victory margin. It was the school's 15th straight game without a defeat.

Rice Upsets SMU, 13-7, To Tie For Lead

DALLAS (AP) — A 61-yard touchdown run by Pat Bailey and field goals by Bill Bucek and Gordon Speer brought Rice a 13-7 upset victory over Southern Methodist Saturday night and kept the Owls tied for the lead in the Southwest Conference football race.

Southern Methodist, without its great passer, the injured Don Meredith, made a game of it for three quarters and the score was tied at 7-7 when Bucek, who plays defense mostly for Rice while not doing the place-kicking, went in to boot a 19-yard field goal.

Two pass interceptions in the final period ruined SMU's chances, and one of them set up the field goal by Speer. He kicked the ball through from the 30.

A crowd of 39,000 watched Rice, the defending conference champion which wasn't supposed to be a top contender for the crown this year, throw up a magnificent defense, with a line that the Methodists seldom penetrated.

Meredith, injured in the Notre Dame game, didn't even suit up. But it's doubtful that he could have put SMU over even if he could have played, so tough was the Owl pass defense when the chips were on the line.

Southern Methodist ran into fumbleitis and the Owls gobbled up all the loose balls they saw flying around. Penalties also hampered the Methodists.

Princeton, 40-13

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP)—Sophomore Hugh Scott, starting his first varsity game because two higher-rated tailbacks were injured, scored the first two touchdowns and guided Princeton to a 40-13 victory over Colgate Saturday. Ray Empson, a 150-pound sub tailback, accounted for two more.

FIRST VICTORY

Spirited Greenies Upset Sixth-Ranked Navy, 14-6

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A spirited, hard-driving and shifty Tulane football team, spearheaded by quarterback Richie Petitbon, nudged highly favored Navy into the growing ranks of the defeated, 14-6 in the Oyster Bowl game Saturday.

The Greenies, losers in their four previous games, took a 7-0 lead early in the second quarter. The sixth-ranked Middies score a touchdown late in the same period but failed in their bid for two extra points. Tulane then clinched the verdict by scoring a second touchdown on a 66-yard drive midway of the final period.

Petitbon was the big man on both Tulane drives. He called a smart game, ran with vehemence, and did most of his team's passing. His adroit mixing of plays kept the Middies off balance.

Navy had expected a passing attack primarily. Tulane crossed the Middies by sticking to the ground. On the Greenies' 83-yard drive for their first score, they didn't go to the air once.

The Tulane line proved unusually ferocious, and although quarterback Joe Tranchini of Navy completed 10 of 19 tosses, most of them were short gainers.

The one successful Navy offensive was the exception to Tranchini's failure to click on long tosses. Throwing to Joe Bellino and Roland Brandquist, he advanced the ball from the Navy 29 to the Tulane 25, from where he passed to Bellino in the end zone for the Middies' score. Bellino tried to run for two points and failed. Tulane was content to kick for one point after each touchdown.

A first period break on which Navy failed to capitalize possibly set the pattern for the major upset. Tranchini had recovered Tom McClellan's fumble on the Tulane 21 in the first two minutes, but Navy was stymied.

Tranchini passed to Tom Hyde on the 10, but four plays later the ball still was on the 10. Tulane took it there on downs, and thereafter, except for the Middies' lone scoring drive, stopped the Navy offense.

In the waning moments of the game, seeing their clean slate on the verge of being badly smudged Navy launched a desperation passing attack, with Jim Maxfield doing the throwing. It was checked in the last 40 seconds as Tommy Mason intercepted a pass on the Tulane goal.

Petitbon, whose play thrilled a record crowd of 32,169, was voted the outstanding player by the press. He was ably assisted in the Tulane offense by Percy Colon, McClelland and Boo Mason.

EL TORO INVOLVED

Tag Bout Heads Kallio Program

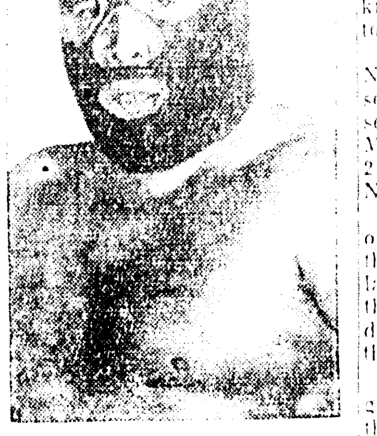
Good guys Bill Barney, Jack and George Curtis will face Toro, Gypsy Joe and Viva Zapata in the 90 minute limit main event on the three-bout card. A couple of short preliminaries will open the program at 8:15.



EL TORO

Gypsy and Zapata appeared here last week with Joe beating George Curtis for the second time and Zapata paired with Ronny Lee in a losing effort against Jack Curtis and Barney.

El Toro, a masked bruiser, packs his 254 pounds on a 5-11½ frame. His chest measures 58 inches, his waist 38, neck 22, thighs 31, calves 19 and biceps 19. His shoulders measure almost three feet across.

Toro's publicity claims he has never been defeated or unmasked. Fast as well as powerful, he uses a deadly elbow smash to good advantage. He has beaten such outstanding grapplers as Georgie Becker, Baron Michele Leone, Nature Boy Buddy Rogers, Yukon Eric, Bill Curry, Rebel Bob Russell, and Frank Sexton.

Promoter Gus Kallio is reviving his offer of $100 to a Louisiana native who can defeat Bill Barney, the state champion, as well as his offer of the same amount of money to the Louisiana girl who can best Monroe's Marjorie Ramsey.

Pitt Passes Give Victory Over W. Va.

By GEORGE ESPER

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pitt cashed in a freak fumble for a touchdown Saturday to beat West Virginia 15-8 before a crowd of 12,266. Both Pitt touchdowns came on passes, one of them a 71-yard play.

The 51st renewal of the football series lacked some of the lustre of previous games but packed a thrill in the closing seconds as West Virginia drove to the Panther 6-yard line on four pass plays that covered 93 yards. With time left for only one play quarterback Chuck Simpson again went to the air and Ivan Toncic intercepted for Pitt in the end zone as the gun sounded.

West Virginia scored first, grabbing John Flara's fumble on the Pitt 3-yard line. Danny Williams cut over right tackle on second down for the score and passed to Dave Rider for a two-point conversion that gave the Mountaineers an 8-0 first quarter lead.

Pitt struck in the second period on a 71-yard pass and run with Toncic throwing to Flara, a speedy halfback. Flara was behind the Mountaineer defense and Toncic's high arching throw led him perfectly at the 35 yard line. Bill Kaliden passed to Mike Ditka for the two points that knotted the score.

In the third period Pitt marched 61 yards in 10 plays, Dick Haley taking a short pass from Toncic and completing an 8-yard scoring play.

Marty Baracca kicked the final point.

But it was the oddity of the game that made this touchdown possible. Pitt was driving when Toncic passed toward Art Gob on the West Virginia 10. John Bowles intercepted for West Virginia but fumbled as he was tackled and Gob recovered for a vital first down. Pitt scored in just two plays.

TCU Defeats Aggies By 24-8 Margin

By FRANK N. MANITZAS

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) —Texas Christian put together a strong offense to defeat Texas A&M 24-8 in a Southwest Conference game Saturday.

The Aggies looked flashy at times, especially on passing by Charlie Milstead and Ed Dudley with end John Tracey making some brilliant catches. But a tight Frog defense squelched two scoring opportunities in the first half.

Coach Abe Martin of TCU used three units successfully in the scoring parade.

Third unit men Carlos Vacek and Harry Moreland sparked two Horned Frog touchdown drives. Vacek carried the ball four out of five times in a 40-yard drive to score from two yards out. Moreland skipped his way through the Aggies on a 45-yard punt return to score.

Tulsa Tramples Drake In Rout

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Tulsa halfback Ronnie Morris ran the opening kickoff 93 yards for a touchdown and moments later returned a punt for 80 and a second score to set the pattern of a 59-0 rout of outclassed Drake Saturday.

Penn Wins First

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Penn's Quakers came from behind with two fourth period touchdowns and halted a Brown try for a conversion to gain their first win of the year Saturday 21-20.

PERENNIAL SPOILERS

Purdue Knocks Spartans From Big Ten Race, 14-6

By DALE BURGESS

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Purdue's Boilermakers, perennial spoilers of Michigan State football seasons, virtually knocked the Spartans out of the Big Ten race Saturday 14-6.

Snarling back from a defeat by Wisconsin last week, Purdue upset Michigan State just as it did last year with ferocious line play that held the Spartans to a miserable 38 yards by rushing and only 65 in the air.

Purdue stymied the varies Spartan offense so completely that Michigan State failed to capitalize on five recoveries of Boilermaker fumbles.

The only Spartan touchdown was pretty much a gift, although Larry Bielat's 11-yard scoring pass to Dick Barker was a beauty. It came in the second quarter after Purdue lost the ball at its 12 on a fourth down bad pass from center.

Purdue immediately drove 59 yards for a touchdown, halfback Leonard Wilson going the last five yards, and the teams carried a 6-6 tie into the second half. Michigan State missed on a conversion pass, but its Ellison Kelly blocked Bob Spoo's extra-point kick for Purdue.

The Boilermakers wraped it up in the third quarter, blasting 53 yards in spite of a fumble punt and a 15-yard penalty. Bob Jarus plunged the last foot, but the big gainer was a 30-yard pass from Ross Fichtner to end Dick Brooks.

Purdue's big two-point conversion, which forced Michigan State to gamble the rest of the way, was a dazzler. Spoo pitched out to Fichtner, who passed to Brooks in the end zone.

Purdue has beaten Michigan State four times in their last six meetings, cutting a 28-game winning string for the Spartans in 1953 and knocking them out of No. 1 national rating last year.

In spite of the fumbles and losing the ball twice on pass interceptions, the Boilermakers completely dominated the game. They gained 223 yards net from scrimmage to Michigan State's 103, got 12 first downs to the Spartans' 8.

Michigan State used 10 ball carriers, and five of them wound up with a net loss.

Purdue had balance — Fichtner picking up 49 yards, Jarus 45, and Wilson 43. Roger Donnahoo and Al Luplow led Michigan State with 37 and 23, respectively.

Sam Williams, the Spartans' giant left end, was outstanding in defeat but was at least matched by Brooks on both offense and defense.

BADGERS RANKED FOURTH

Iowa Upsets Wisconsin, 20-9, In Big Ten Scrap

By CHUCK CAPALDO

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Iowa turned tiger in the second half Saturday after trailing 9-0 and ruined fourth-ranked Wisconsin's perfect slate with a 20-9 Big Ten football triumph sweetened by key fumble recoveries by Kevin Furlong and Jeff Langston.

A howling crowd of 65,241, largest ever to watch a football game in Wisconsin, witnessed the Hawkeyes' abrupt about-face over the favored Badgers in jam-packed Camp Randall Stadium.

The victory—padded by a spectacular 68-yard touchdown pass play from Randy Duncan to Bob Jeter in the fourth quarter—gave Iowa a 2-0 Big Ten record and visions of the title which it won last in 1956.

Iowa, in ringing up its first decision here since 1946, handed Wisconsin its first loss after six impressive victories, three of them this season. Wisconsin is 1-1 in conference play.

Iowa seemed doomed to a one-sided setback after the first 30 minutes of play, but the halftime interlude with Coach Forest Evashevski worked wonders.

Wtih only 3:45 gone Duncan cashed in on the fumble—first loss by the Badgers this season—by plunging over from about six inches out. Bob Prescott hit the first of his two conversions.

The Hawkeyes put over the clincher in jig time in the fourth quarter, Duncan hitting the jet-like Jeter with a three-yard screen pass. Jeter then took off like a rocket down the sideline on a 65-yard touchdown run—first against Wisconsin this year by passing.

Wisconsin, favored by six points in some quarters, started out as it has in earlier games — pouncing on a mistake of its opponents and turning it into points. This time, on the game's first play from scrimmage, Jim Heineke intercepted Duncan's pass on Iowa's 41 while crouching on the ground. With 5:16 gone, Paul Shwaiko booted a field goal from the 15—the 7th of his career—to stake the Badgers to a 3-0 lead.

Hackbart and Ron Steiner combined to make it 9-0 Wisconsin in the second quarter on a 31-yard play.

Duncan, who didn't complete a pass for the first 25 minutes of play, finished up with a flourish for a fair completion record of 6 for 18, good for 135 yards. But in the final analysis it was his backfield horses and alert defensive corps that turned the tide.

Dorn Horn accounted for 41 yards on 10 carries; Ray Jauch, 34 on 9; Jeter 38 on 6; and Furlong 38 on 8.

Iowa, which now has beaten Wisconsin three straight times, including twice at Iowa City, outgained the Badgers 317-288. All told, the usually sure-fingered Badgers lost four of seven fumbles while the Hawks surrendered the ball only once on a fumble.

Wisconsin had run up 101 points against six points, scored against it in the Badgers three previous games.

ACC GAME

Tar Heels Turn Back Terps, 27-0

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Quarterback Jack Cummings rifled two touchdown passes to set the pace as improved North Carolina routed Maryland 27-0 here Saturday in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game televised over a regional network.

A homecoming day crowd of 25,000 saw Coach Jim Tatum's Tar Heels strike 60, 80 and 70 yards for touchdowns and add another on a 46-yard runback of a pass interception by end Al Goldstein.

Maryland, bottled up by the stout Tar Heel defense, reached North Carolina's 28 as the half ended. Another Terps' drive went south Tar Heel 24 in the last period.

North Carolina went 60 yards for a touchdown in eight plays the first time it got possession early in the opening period. Fullback Ed Lipski went over from the 4. In the second period, Cummings flipped a 19-yard touchdown pass to end John Schroeder to climax an 80-yard drive.

Late in the second period, Goldstein intercepted a pass by Maryland's Bob Russevlyan and raced 46 yards to score.

The Tar Heels, who now have a 3-2 season record, got rolling again late in the fourth quarter, driving 70 yards, with Cummings passing six yards to Danny Droze for a touchdown.

A 33-yard pass play from Cummings to halfback Wade Smith featured the first touchdown drive. The same combination clicked for 39 yards on the second scoring march.

Cummings, a 183-pound junior from Lower Merion, Pa., turned in one of his best performances. He completed nine of 13 passes for 151 yards. Halfback Emil Decantis led the Tar Heel rushing with 67 yards in six carries.

Russevlyan sparked Maryland's attack with 13 pass completions in 21 attempts for 126 yards. The teams were even in first downs with 16 each. It was Maryland's fourth loss against one win over North Carolina State, a team that defeated the Tar Heels.

The Tar Heels drove from their 47 to Maryland's 9 in the second period and appeared headed for a sure touchdown when halfback Sonny Folckomer fumbled and Maryland end Ron Shaffer recovered on his 7.

The pass interception by Goldstein was a freakish play. Russevlyan dropped back to pass and as he cut loose, Goldstein hit his arm. The ball shot up into the air and Goldstein grabbed it, and took off for the touchdown.

Texas Still Wins; Beats Ark. 24 To 6

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Rene Ramirez, a limber Latin, scampered 52 yards on a touchdown jaunt in the second quarter to fire up undefeated Texas to a 24-6 Southwest Conference victory over Arkansas Saturday night.

Ramirez' startling bolt was the longest scrimmage for a Texas back since 1954 and came after the Razorbacks had moved in front on a short touchdown drive.

It was the first Southwest Conference game for Texas and was the fifth loss of the year for the Porkers. Some 46,000 watched.

Texas mixed its running and passing games effectively against the light Arkansas line. But the Longhorns looked flat in the first period when the slippery Porker backs churned 103 yards rushing. After Ramirez' run, Texas appeared to be a different club.

Alternate quarterback Vince Matthews' passing set up a field goal try in the second period after thundering Mike Dowdle had scored from the 2. Dowdle's score followed a 35-yard drive which began with Dowdle recovering a Hog fumble on the 35.

With time running out, James Shillingburg, 210-pound tackle, came in to boot a 19-yard field goal.

Texas tacked on its last score after taking a short Arkansas punt on the 37. Two running plays netted five and Matthews hit end Roy Goodman for nine on the 23. Halfback Bobby Matocha ploughed to the 14 and then Matthews found Goodman in the end zone for the score.

Jay Hebert Cops Lead At Franklin

FRANKLIN, La. (AP) — Jay Hebert, one of the top money winners this year, fired a 5-under par 65 and took the lead Saturday in the second round of the Louisiana Open and Louisiana Professional Golfers Organization tournament.

The blistering round, on a course improved by softening rain Friday, saw Hebert birdie five holes on the front nine for a 30 total and make par 35 on the return.

Lionel Hebert of Lafayette, Jay's brother was in third place after breaking even on the 6,262-yard par 70 Belleview Country Club course Saturday for a 69-70—139 card.

Two Lafayette amateurs battled in fourth place with a tie at 140. They were Luca Barbato and Shirley Picard. Barbato added a 67 to his 73 and Picard had two 70s.

Bert Weaver of Beaumont, Tex., was sixth with 141, and Vernon Thwaites, of Covington, who was tied for first going into the second round, was one stroke back at 142.

Syracuse In 38-0 Rout Of Cornhuskers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Two powerful Syracuse football units pounded Nebraska into submission 38-0 before 22,000 spectators here Saturday.

The Orange scored in each quarter and allowed the Big Eight visitors to touch Syracuse turf only three times.

The triumph was the third of the season for the host eleven against one setback. Nebraska now has a record of two wins and three defeats.

Syracuse scores came on drives of 68, 43, 13, 52 and three yards.

For the second week in a row, the Syracuse bench was being cleared of substitutes as the game drew to a close.

The game concluded a two year contract and gave Syracuse a 5-4 edge in the series which began in 1917.

Bears Turn Fumbles Into 14-12 Victory

By BOB MYERS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback Joe Kapp guided California's second step toward the Rose Bowl Saturday as the Golden Bears knocked off the fumbling Trojans of Southern California 14-12.

The victory was the first for California over Southern Cal in eight years in Memorial Coliseum. A crowd of 34,872 saw the Berkeley team chalk up its second Pacific Coast Conference triumph against no defeats.

The artistic technique of Kapp —running, passing and punting—spelled success, but five Trojan fumbles added to the California cause.

All five of the bobbles were recovered by California and one set up the first Bear touchdown.

The Bears took the lead in the first quarter, led 14-6 at the half and never were behind.

Southern California, with halfback Angelo Coia carrying much of the load, provided some thrills for their supporters in the second half. The Golden Bear defense was woefully weak.

Kapp was promptly thrown back to the 15-5yard line on a pass attempt but the Trojans were guilty of piling on and the ball went back to the 1.

Fullback Bill Patton smashed through from that point and the Bears were on the way.

Wildcats Top Southwestern By 27-8 Count

ABILENE, Tex. (AP)—The Abilene Christian College Wildcats scored two quick first quarter touchdowns and went on to defeat Southwestern Louisiana Institute 27-8 here Saturday.

Quarterback H. P. Hawkins passed 39 yards to end Keith Davis for the first score in the first three minutes of the game. Fullback Bill Lovelace climaxed a 63-yard drive with an 8-yard touchdown run for the second score of the first quarter. Moody Conner converted for a 13-0 lead.

SLI came back in the second quarter with a 60-yard drive which found fullback Ronnie Roberts scoring from the 3. Halfback Steve Gossen ran for the conversion to make it 13-8 at the half.

Abilene Christian scored two insurance touchdowns in the last half. Quarterback Don Harber passed 19 yards to end Don Raney for one score, and Lovelace ran 19 yards for the other. Hawkins ran for two points after the final touchdown which came in the fourth quarter.

Air Academy Turns Back Stanford, 16-0

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Striking for a touchdown the first time they got the ball, the Air Force Academy Falcons maintained their undefeated record with a 16-0 victory over Stanford Saturday.

After halfback Mike Quinlan plunged two yards for the score with the first quarter at its midway point, the crowd of 40,000 saw the battle develop into a defensive struggle for two periods marred by frequent fumbles.

Early in the fourth period the Falcons added a 20-yard field goal by George Pupich who previously missed tries from the 28 and 32. Minutes later the Air Force mounted a 66-yard scoring drive, the touchdown coming on a 15-yard pass from reserve quarterback Rich Mayo to fullback Steve Galios.

Should College Professors Be Second Class Citizens?

Perhaps this sounds like a silly question. Yet, judging by the salaries of many college professors, it looks as though we hold them in low esteem. That's why too many of them are leaving their jobs.

What a tragedy!

For today, more than ever before, the future of our country is being shaped by the kind of thinking these men inspire in the classroom.

We must encourage them to stay on. You can do your part. Help the college of your choice now. The rewards will be greater than you think!

If you want to know more about what the college crisis means to you, write for a free booklet to: HIGHER EDUCATION, Box 36, Times Square Station, New York 36, N. Y.

QUARTERBACKS STAR

Ole Miss Downs Hardin-Simmons

By JAMES SAGGUS

UNIVERSITY, Miss. (AP) — Quarterbacks Bobby Franklin and Billy Brewer guided machine-like Mississippi to a 24-0 football victory over outmanned Hardin-Simmons before 16,500 fans Saturday.

Brewer passed five yards to halfback Jimmy Hall for a first quarter touchdown and Franklin sprinted 23 yards around end in the second quarter to put the game on ice.

Hardin-Simmons fought gamely but had no weapons to match the balanced Mississippi attack that kept the Rebs in complete control throughout.

Although the eighth-ranked Rebels lacked brilliance, they turned in a workmanlike performance that was more than adequate.

Mississippi drove 65 yards in 14 plays for its first touchdown, 74 yards in eight plays for its second and 71 yards in 10 plays for the third, which came on a three-yard burst by Hall.

Robert Khayat kicked the three conversions and added a 29-yard field goal late in the second period.

Hardin-Simmons' only effective weapons were the passing of quarterbacks Jim Tom Butler and Harold Stephens and the running of fullback Pete Hart.

Hardin-Simmons threatened only twice, moving to the 19 in the first quarter and to the 13 in the third.

The first drive featured the passing of Stephens, who completed passes of 8, 24 and 7 yards, and the running of Hart. The march, which started at the H-S 18 with a fumble recovery, ended when Hall intercepted a Stephens' pass on the two and ran it out to the 26.

Butler's passing and Hart's running kept the other threat going from the 21 to the 13. Mississippi took over on downs on its 20 with the aid of a 15 yard penalty to stop the threat.

Mississippi's attack was effective throughout and the Rebs were seldom held for no gain. Coach John Vaught started his second team and Brewer, Hall and sophomore fullback James Anderson kept the push going with consistent gains. The only pass was a touchdown toss to Hall.

The first unit did the damage on the next touchdown with Franklin completing passes of 17 and 13 yards for the key plays before his brilliant scoring sweep.

Franklin's passing and the running of fullback Charlie Flowers sparked the 52-yard drive to the 19 that set up Khayat's field goal.

The final scoring drive was built around the running of Anderson and Hall and the passing of Brewer.

FSU Downs Va. Tech In Rain, 28-0

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Virginia Tech's Gobblers bogged down in the rain and mud Saturday and Florida State drove to a 28-0 win behind the spectacular running of Fred Pickard and Bobby Renn and the passing of Vic Prinzi.

A stout defense thrown up by Florida State's sophomore-studded forward wall was combined with the elements to hold Tech's Billy Holsclaw, the nation's No. 1 total offense leader, in check in the air and on the ground.

The Seminoles struck for two quick touchdowns in the first half and added an insurance pair in the final quarter.

With Pickard picking up most of the yardage Florida State drove 74 yards on the first series of plays. Halfback Jack Espenship took an 8-yard pass from Prenzi for the touchdown.

On the first play of the second quarter Renn faked a kick, then raced 72 yards for a touchdown.

BIG TEN UPSET

Wildcats Swamp Michigan, 55-24

By JOE MOOSHIL

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Northwestern's undefeated Wildcats rose to unbelievable heights Saturday in handing Michigan one of its worst beatings in history, 55-24.

It was the fourth straight victory and the second in Big Ten play for the Wildcats, who last year didn't win a game.

Five touchdowns in the second quarter—four within a period of 7 minutes almost demoralized the Wolverines, who entered the game four-point favorites.

Cheers from the crowd of 41,345 turned into uproarious laughter as the Wildcats started turning Michigan errors into touchdowns. Interceptions, fumbles, some great running by Ron Burton and Willmer Fowler, and exceptional ball handling and passing by quarterback Dick Thornton all played a part in the Wildcat victory—one that will be remembered for years.

In Michigan's records, the defeat will go down along with a 40-0 loss to Minnesota in 1935 and a 46-0 loss to Yale in 1883 when the Midwest was still toying with the game of football.

Northwestern's total was the highest ever scored against Michigan, which lays claim to 18 Big Ten championships and has been one of the nation's greatest gridiron powers in the last 50 years.

Northwestern gave an early indication of things to come when the Wildcats kicked off and tossed Michigan for three successive losses, forcing the Wolverines to kick.

On the third play from scrimmage, Thornton hit Burton with a 34-yard pass and a touchdown. Michigan managed to contain Northwestern until the final minutes of the quarter when Fowler tackled Fred Julian in the end zone for a safety.

Then came the slaughter. With Thornton completing two passes for 36 yards, Burton plunged over from the 1 with the second of his three touchdowns. Thornton passed to Elbert Kimbrough for two more points and a 17- lead. Michigan fumbled the next time it got the ball and Northwestern made it 23-0 seven plays later. A 35-yard touchdown run by Thornton after intercepting a pass by John Spidel left no doubt of the outcome.

Before the half ended, Northwestern led, 43-0. It would have been worse if a touchdown on a pass interception by Kimbrough hadn't been called back.

Correction

The Saturday World's story on Block's 28-6 win over Columbia credited several touchdowns to the wrong players. For the record, here's the way the scoring went: Clarence Richard went 15 yards for the first Block touchdown and Tommy White went 11 yards for the second with a pass interception; Richard went around end 15 yards for the third and then up the middle from 12 yards out for the final touchdown; Billy Edwards kicked all four extra points; Butch Darden scored on a five-yard run for Columbia. The World regrets the errors.

IN MORAL VICTORY

Stubborn Georgia Tech Holds Auburn To 7-7 Tie

By MERCER BAILEY

ATLANTA (AP) — Underdog Georgia Tech threw up an impregnable clutch defense Saturday and held unbeaten Auburn, the nation's second ranked football power, to a 7-7 tie in their Southeastern Conference battle.

Thus the Yellow Jackets gave Auburn a taste of its own medicine—for Auburn's string of 17 straight victories was built on a defense rated the nation's best.

Auburn dominated the first half and scored early in the second period. When Tech crashed through for its touchdown in the fourth quarter, Coach Bobby Dodd played it safe rather than gamble for the two-point conversion, which would have brought victory if good, or defeat if missed.

Tommy Wells, a sophomore kicking specialist, cooly booted the tying point.

In the final seconds of the game, Wells tried a field goal from the Auburn 39 but it was short and off line as the final whistle blew.

But even a tie with the titanic Tigers was hailed as a moral victory for Tech by the capacity crowd of 44,726 and the Yellow Jacket fans went wild.

Until Tech quarterback Fred Braselton intercepted an Auburn pass and returned it 16 yards to the visitors 36, Tech had never seriously threatened. The Jackets were held to a lone first down in the first half.

Two Braselton passes to Frank Nix and Jerome Green took the ball to the Auburn 11. Then Braselton took aim at Jack Rudolph and the Tech end made a falling catch at the one after Auburn's Tommy Lorino tipped the ball into the air but couldn't bat it down.

It took Braselton three quarterback sneaks to ram it the final yard. And that was the first time anyone had scored on Auburn on a ground play from scrimmage since Alabama did it in the final game of the 1956 season.

The flashing feet of Lorino and sophomore fullback Ed Dyas broke Tech's defense briefly in the first quarter. Dyas zipped 18 yards to the Tech 29 and Lorino zigzagged 26 more to the three as the first period ended.

Dyas lugged it two yards into the end zone on the second play of the second quarter, going through a gaping hole opened by tackle Cleve Wester and guard Frank Larussa. Quarterback Lloyd Nix, who kept the pressure on Tech with his deadly roll out option plays, kicked the point.

With giant linemen such as guard Zeke Smith, center Jackie Burkett and end Jerry Wilson, Auburn then dug in and repelled every Tech thrust until Braselton put on his aerial circus. Tech completed eight of 10 passes for 71 yards.

Auburn piled up a lot of yardage on Tech—236 on the ground—but after Tech got its touchdown, the Jackets just wouldn't yield.

The Tigers, desperate now, took to the air but Tech guard Leon Tye intercepted one that enabled Tech to make its last gasp field goal try.

Auburn completed only four of 12 passes for 26 yards. Tech was held to a net of 58 yards rushing.

Sub fullback Jimmy Reynolds was Auburn's top gainer with 55 yards while Dyas had 40, Nix 42 and Lorino 41. Cal James led Tech with 32.

STICKLES STARS

Irish Field Goal Beats Duke, 9-7

By JERRY LISKA

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Monty Stickles, 225-pound end, snagged an 8-yard scoring pass and booted a 23-yard field goal for all penalty-bogged Notre Dame's scoring in a tough 9-7 football triumph over Duke's spry Blue Devils Saturday.

In the first gridiron meeting between the two schools, Notre Dame—a two-touch-down favorite—trailed 7-6 until Stickles booted his perfect three-pointer midway in the third period.

Irish quarterback Bob Williams, who tossed the touchdown shot to Stickles early in the first quarter, also held the ball for the field goal.

Duke's touchdown came later in the first quarter. Quarterback Bob Brodhead looped a neat 4-yard pass to halfback Dane Lee in the end zone. The Blue Devils went ahead 7-6 when Wray Carlton booted the extra point.

Notre Dame had a whopping assessment of 135 yards in penalties, compared with only 10 for Duke which was an alert, scrappy foe all the sunny, pleasant football afternoon.

The Irish, rolling to 266 yards from rushing with sophomore Red Mack carrying the load, bounced back from last week's 14-2 setback by Army for a 3-1 season record.

Duke, winning its last two starts over Illinois and Baylor after losing to South Carolina and Virginia, now has a 2-3 mark.

Notre Dame started in complete charge of the game, controlling the ball the first 4½ minutes and scoring on a 57-yard drive in five plays.

Prior to Williams' clever aerial shot to Stickles for the game's first score, Mack had scampered 64 yards for a Notre Dame touchdown which was recalled because of Irish holding.

Then Mack started the Irish scoring drive rolling with a 45-yard run to Duke's 13. Four plays later came the payoff toss from Williams to Stickles.

Duke 7 0 0 0—7
Notre Dame 6 0 3 0—9

UCLA Whips Washington In PCC Contest

SEATTLE (AP) — The UCLA Bruins generated a head of touchdown steam at the opening kickoff Saturday and combined passes with a slashing defense to whip Washington 20-0 for their first Pacific Coast Conference football victory.

With Don Long and Kirk Wilson pitching, the Bruins put on a spectacular show in the regionally televised tussle. A homecoming day crowd of 33,500 saw six UCLA seniors lose out their half-season of eligibility.

Long was one of the half-dozen and he celebrated the end of his collegiate career with three touchdown passes. The last one, a 9-yard toss to Dick Wallen, was thrown in disdain of an earlier hand injury. Long had been trapped on an intended pass early in the third quarter and his hand was injured when he was smashed down by Washington tacklers on the UCLA 1.

Wilson got the Bruins out of that trouble with a 66-yard quick kick.

UCLA scored in all but the final period, when a roaring wind storm swept through the field and almost stalled proceedings.

The Bruins had the touchdown route well mapped from the start. Thrusting by ground and air, they marched 78 yards in 12 plays to score after the opening kickoff. Long hit Marv Luster with a 22-yard pass for that tally, and in the second quarter targeted Jim Steffen with a 25-yard tally toss.

DAWKINS INJURED

Army Rolls Over Virginia, 35-6

By WILL GRIMSLEY

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP)—Joe Caldwell, a ball-faking Houdini who played only two minutes last year, and bullet Bob Anderson passed and ran Army's top-ranked football team to a 35-6 victory over Virginia Saturday at Michie Stadium.

Hampered by fumbles in the opening half, the Cadets recovered their poise behind their 160-pound quarterback Caldwell and turned what started out as a close game into a rout. The game was so fiercely played that two of Army's stars, halfback-captain Pete Dawkins and fullback Harry Walters, were sent to the sidelines with leg injuries.

The extent of the ailments was not immediately determined.

Caldwell personally scored one of Army's five touchdowns with a six-yard run. He set up another with a 30-yard sprint on a fake pass, and sparked two other touchdown drives with accurate passes, one of them a 60-yard play to the fabled Army "lonesome end," Bill Carpenter.

Anderson, hard-running junior halfback who was the team's chief offensive weapon a year ago but who has been overshadowed most of this season by teammate Dawkins, came into his own with a brilliant display of ball-carrying.

Army's defense, lethargic in the early stages, also finally rose to the occasion by twice stopping Virginia within its 10-yard line in the second half.

Late in the third period, Virginia, led by quarterback Arnold Dempsey and halfback Fred Shepherd, drove to the Cadet's 3-yard line. There Army's line rose up to stop Shepherd three times on running attempts and finally took over the ball on the 55 after knocking down a depserate last-play pass.

Baylor Bears Crush Texas Tech, 26-7

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP)—Baylor, sparked by the slick quarterbacking of Billy Humphrey and the power of fullback Larry Hickman, crushed Texas Tech 26-7 Saturday.

The Bears scored in every quarter but the third to spoil the day for a Dad's Day crowd of 24,000 and give a regional television audience a display of one-sided football.

It was Baylor's third victory of the season and gave the Bears a thorough warmup for next week's clash with Texas A&M. Tech's record dropped to 2-3 with the Red Raiders' third straight loss.

Baylor dominated the game completely, keeping Tech on defense in its own territory throughout the game and holding the Red Raiders scoreless until the final minute of play, when a long pass connected for Tech against Baylor's reserves.

Humphrey scored twice and piloted the Bears to a third touchdown before turning the quarterback job over to second and third stringers.

Hickman tallied once, gained yardage steadily in aiding the other Baylor drives and boomed kicks deep into Tech territory on the rare occasions when Baylor had to punt.

The other Baylor score came on a 60-yard pass play in final period, when reserve quarterback Robert Starr, hurling from his own 40 caught halfback Merton Fuquay on the Tech 34 and saw him trot into the end zone.

Third-stringer Ken Talkington passed from inside his own 20 to halfback Mickie Barron on the Baylor 45 and Barron lurched away from the Baylor secondary and reached the end zone with 41 seconds left.

Pete Dawkins Injured In Virginia Tilt

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP)—Pete Dawkins, captain and star halfback of Army's top-ranked football team, suffered a knee injury in the second period of the game Saturday against Virginia. Apparently the injury was not serious.

He fell to the ground seemingly in great pain. West Point trainers worked on his left knee and finally he limped off the field. He returned later in the period.

Dawkins did not start the second half. Army coaches, communicating by phone from the bench to the press box, said they were sure the injury was not serious. "It is a bruise on his hip," one of the Army coaches said. "We figure he will be all right."

Colorado Turns Back Iowa State

AMES, Iowa (AP)—Undefeated Colorado shook off an affliction of fumbles and a strong Iowa State defense to turn back the Cyclones 20-0 Saturday.

The Buffaloes, the nation's No. 1 offensive team, concentrated mostly on their running game and marched 51, 65 and 50 yards for touchdowns.

The Cyclones were not without scoring opportunities but a stronger Colorado defense crushed four drives, one ending on the 15 after Iowa State had inched to the seven in the fourth quarter.

Ohio State Rolls Over Hoosiers

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Blockbusting Bob White scored four touchdowns Saturday to lead Ohio State to a 49-8 victory over an out-classed and out-manned Indiana team in a Western Conference contest before 82,964.

The 207-pound White bulldozed his way to the first four scores, two of which were set up by intercepted passes and another by a fumble.

Indiana's misplays also gave the ball to Ohio twice for other scores.

The Hoosiers' only entrance into Ohio territory came against the fourth-stringers when Norm Mackin passed six yards to Dick Bradford for a touchdown with only four seconds to play.

Indiana was unable to contain the devastating Ohio ground attack and could make little headway against the huge Buckeye forward wall. Beset by fumbles, pass interceptions and penalties, the Hoosiers never had a chance as they lost their seventh straight game to Ohio. The aggregate score of the seven is 257 to 60.

It was Ohio's 27th win against six losses and two ties against the Hoosiers in Big Ten play.

Buckeye Coach Woody Hayes, who created a furore early in the week by charging that laxity of officials was condoning dirty play, created the game's big diversion in the fourth period when, leading 35-0, he shed his cap and coat and rushed onto the field to remonstrate with the arbiters.

Woody's only reward was a 15-yard penalty against the Bucks.

Turley, Spahn Selected As Top Hurlers

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Bob Turley, Warren Spahn, Jackie Jensen and Ernie Banks Saturday were named by the Sporting News as the outstanding pitchers and regular players in their respective leagues.

Turley, a 21-game winner for the New York Yanks of the American League, opposed the veteran Spahn, a 22-game winner for Milwaukee of the National, in the recent World Series. Each won two games in the Series.

Banks, Chicago Cubs shortstop, led the National League in runs batted in with 129 and in homers with 47. He also topped the major leagues in both categories. Jensen, Boston Red Sox outfielder, led the American in RBI with 122.

BEHIND MAJORS

Vols Power Way To 14-7 Victory

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Tennessee, led by sophomore tailback Bill Majors, stuck to straight single wing power plays Saturday to punch out a 14-7 football victory over Alabama.

A sun-splashed crowd of 34,200 found little to cheer about as these ancient Southeastern Conference rivals dueled chiefly on the ground.

With improved blocking in the line, Tennessee marched to touchdowns in the second and third periods. Alabama, turning briefly to the air, scored in the final quarter.

Majors, held to a net of six yards in three previous games, found some nice holes in the Bama line and ran for 58 yards.

The slender 167-pound speedster scored both Tennessee touchdowns, punching over from the 1 for the first and racing six for the second. Sammy Burklow kicked both conversions.

The first Tennessee six-pointer came on the opening play of the second period and capped a 50-yard drive, aided by a 15-yard penalty.

Majors returned Gary O'Steen's kick 22 yards to Alabama's 34 to set up the second Vol score. Six running plays carried to the 6 and Majors raced over.

Quarterback Bobby Jackson directed Alabama to its score midway in the final period in a beautiful 80-yard drive. The big play was a pass from Jackson to O'Steen covering 44 yards and placing the ball on Tennessee's 26. Another pass from Jackson to tackle Carl Valletoo, playing end in an unbalanced line, was good for 10 yards and another first down. Running plays carried it to the 1 from where Jackson scored. Pete Reaves converted.

The touchdown was the first an Alabama team scored on Tennessee since Bowden Wyatt became coach at his alma mater in 1955.

The victory gave Tennessee a 2-2 mark in the conference. Alabama has won 1 game, lost 2 and tied 1.

Tennessee outgained Alabama on the ground 131 to 98 yards. But 'Bama had a wide margin of 129 yards to 12 in the air, most of it in the final period.

Missouri Upsets K-State, 32-8

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP)—Phil Snowden and Mel West of Missouri upset Kansas State's dream of a homecoming victory 32-8 Saturday.

Underdog Missouri stunned a shirt-sleeved crowd of 12,000 with a slam-bang attack that never gave a previously-potent K-State offense an opportunity to get under way. The Tigers so dominated play in the first half that K-State never got out of its own territory as Missouri rolled to a 25-0 intermission lead.

It was the Big Eight Conference opener for Missouri.

Snowden scored two of Missouri's first half touchdowns on one-yard quarterback sneaks and passed for two more.

HAWKS, CELTS FAVORED

NBA To Open Thirteenth Hoop Schedule Sunday

By JOHN CHANDLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The National Basketball Assn opens its 13th season Sunday with three coaching changes and a host of rookies calculated to strengthen various league members and bolster ranks of the regulars.

One game is on the schedule, the Detroit Pistons playing the Nationals at Syracuse in a nationally televised, NBC game at 1:30 p.m., EST.

The Boston Celtics play the world champion St. Louis Hawks and Detroit meets the Royals at Cincinnati in an exhibition doubleheader for the benefit of Maurice Stokes, Cincinnati ace who has been hospitalized since last winter.

Cincinnati then opens the Lakers' home season at Minneapolis on Wednesday night, while on Thursday St. Louis plays host to Detroit.

All eight teams will get into action Saturday night, with Boston meeting the Knickerbockers in New York, the Philadelphia Warriors at Syracuse, Minneapolis at Cincinnati and St. Louis at Detroit.

Andrew "Fuzzy" Levane, onetime Milwaukee pilot, replaces Vince Boryla, New York coach last season. George Senseky, who coached Philadelphia, went into the front office as assistant to Eddie Gottlieb, owner-manager.

St. Louis should win the Western Division title again, while Boston is the favorite to repeat in the Eastern Division.

The Hawks obtained Clyde Lovellette, one of the game's best centers, in a trade with Cincinnati who joins such scoring stars as Bob Pettit, Easy Ed Macauley and Cliff Hagan. Phillip also expects big things from Dave Gambee, a rookie from Oregon State.

Boston's big three of Bob Cousy, Bill Sharman and Bill Russell figure to make it tough in the Eastern Division. Coach Red Auerbach will have K.C. Jones, who was playmaker with Russell at the University of San Francisco. Jones has been in the Army two years. Gene Conley, Milwaukee Braves' pitcher who played at Washington State, joins the Celtics. Boston also has a top rookie prospect in Ben Swain from Texas Southern.

Sooners Wallop Jayhawks 43-0

By SKIPPER PATRICK

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP)—Oklahoma rebounded sharply in a bid to regain its national football prestige by bouncing the outmanned Kansas Jayhawks 43-0 in a Big Eight game played before 30,000 fans here Saturday.

The Sooners, who experienced a rare defeat, 15-14 to Texas last week, sent five different players on scoring jaunts for their 64th conference victory without defeat. Two ties have been charged against them in that string.

John Pellow, a blazing fast 161-pound senior, who gained fame as a member of the Sooners' sprint medley relay team, put the finishing touches to the Jayhawks with a 38-yard touchdown run on a punt return and a 78-yard scoring trip on a pass interception.

Actually Pellow's feats were no more than added attraction for the Sooners, dumped out of the top 10 into 11th place in the national Associated Press ratings last week. Oklahoma scored twice in the second quarter, once in the third and three times in the fourth.

Oklahoma looked anything but a champion in the first period as it opened its campaign for an 11th consecutive Big Eight title. Kansas lost a scoring chance early when a penalty nullified a Jayhawk play that went to the Oklahoma 7.

The Sooners rolled up a total of 507 yards rushing and passing. They scored in the second quarter on a 1-yard plunge by Jackie Holt and a short pass play from quarterback Bobbie Boyd to Jerry Tillery. From that point it was pretty much a matter of how big a score Oklahoma wanted to make it.

Last Quarter Score Beats Wolfpack, 13-6

By ED YOUNG

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — William and Mary's gritty football team threw back the best punches of North Carolina State's multiple offense Saturday and then used a recovered fumble to set up a last-period touchdown that beat the Wolfpack 13-6.

Pinned deep in their own territory most of the last half after staking out a 6-0 lead at intermission, the depth-shy Indians seemed on the verge of yielding to State's belated comeback when the critical break came, eight minutes deep in the final quarter.

State halfback Ken Trowbridge, who moments earlier had ruled off a run that set up a State touchdown, tying the count at 6-6, fumbled on the Wolfpack 25. Halfback Dave Edmunds pounced on the bobble for the Indians.

On W&M's first play, Edmunds pitched a running pass to end Ed Brusko, who snagged the ball on the State 7. Four plays later, quarterback Bob Stoy plowed over for the touchdown that won the game.

It was the second time in as many years the Indians had ambushed State. Last fall they nudged the Wolfpack 7-6 for the only loss State suffered.

Until the fumble recovery, the Indians had held off State's cunning offense repeatedly in the shadow of the William and Mary goal. The Indians held on their 8 and on their 15 in the first half, then on their 1 and on their 5 in the third period before finally yielding the Wolfpack its only score.

Fullback Arnold Nelson cracked over from the 1 for State's touchdown in the final quarter, climaxing a 42-yard State advance that was featured by Trowbridge's dash from the 22 to the W&M 1.

Quill Takes Filly Duel Over Khalita

R. N. Webster's Kentucky-bred juvenile proved his class in pegging back the California contender for the divisional title, William N. Modglin's Khalita, who finished fourth after setting all the pace in the mile and one sixteenth race.

Quill earned $81,576, boosting her 1958 earnings to $140,502. It was her sixth win in eight starts. She was second choice in the field of 12 and returned backers in the crowd of 34,873 fans, $6.40 $3.60 and $2.80.

Meanwhile, Khalita, ridden by Eddie Arcaro, led by 4 lengths after half a mile and was still 3 to the good after three-quarters.

But once Quill worked up a full head of steam there was no stopping the fleet filly. She sped past Khalita at the top of the stretch as the West Coast horse began to tire.

As Khalita faded, Resaca challenged for the lad but failed by a length and a half. Ruwenzori was third and Khalita wound up fourth.

Quill raced the distance in 1:45.1. Resca paid $7.80 and $5.80 and Ruwenzori $13.40.

In two trials for next Saturday's $250,000-plus Garden State Stakes First Landing, an odds-on favorite, and Rico Tesio, a rank outsider, triumphed.

Illinois Hands Minnesota Fourth Loss

By JIM KLOBUCHAR

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Bob Hickey, a rifle-armed quarterback who once appeared headed for football's junk heap, hurled two mighty touchdown passes and guided Illinois to a 20-8 victory over Minnesota Saturday.

It was the day of deliverance for the Illini, losers of three straight games, and another jarring disappointment for a winless Minnesota team.

Hickey teamed with end Rich Kreitling on identical-play touchdown passes that covered 83 and 66 yards, the first giving Illinois a first period lead and the second rubbing out an 8-7 Gopher advantage.

It was a weird homecoming battle, played before a crowd of 58,174 that saw the officials march off 155 yards in penalties in the first half. Despite Illinois' first period touchdown and offense-killing penalties, Minnesota looked capable of handling the Illini until Hickey's passing arm and a procession of errors caught up with the Gophers.

Hickey, who put in a troubled sophomore season last year trying to live down a bad opening game against UCLA, enjoyed a blue ribbon day. His 66-yarder to Kreitling, coming two plays after a sophomore Minnesota backfield had shot the Gophers into the lead late in the third quarter, shook the Illini out of the second half doldrums.

Minutes later Illinois applied the crusher by sending sophomore Dick McDade over from the 8 after guard Bill Burrell intercepted a Gopher pass and carried back to the Gopher 20.

Outgained on the ground Illinois rolled up 201 yards through the air with Hickey doing almost all the firing.

Villanova Takes 9-7 Win Over Wake Forest

VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP)—Villanova Saturday won its third straight football game as a 15-yard field goal provided the slim margin for a 9-7 victory over Wake Forest.

Though sub tackle Dick Keyser accurately split the uprights for the decisive three points mid-way in the third period, it was the running and pass-catching of halfback Dave Intrabartolo that actually sewed up the Wildcat victory.

Intrabartolo just couldn't—and wouldn't—be stopped. From the game's first play, when he crashed through for 12 yards, until he tore open the middle of the Wake Forest line for a 2-yard touchdown plunge near the end of the third quarter, Intrabartolo kept the 11,439 partisan fans cheering.

He carried 25 times for a gain of 105 yards—more than half of Villanova's 202 total—and caught four passes for 51 of the 96 Wildcat aerial yardage.

Harvard, 26-0

NEW YORK (AP) — Harvard smothered Columbia Saturday, taking advantage of numerous fumbles on the way to a 26-0 victory before 23,000 fans. Four different backs scored the Harvard touchdowns.

Florida Ties Vanderbilt In Last Minute

By F. T. MacFEELY

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Little Jimmy Dunn saved Florida's homecoming from utter disaster Saturday when he threw a 6-yard scoring pass to Dave Hudson in a driving rain with only eight seconds to play and gave the Gators a 6-6 tie with Vanderbilt.

The steady rain stopped the attack of both teams until the final desperate minutes after Vandy's Boyce Smith had run a punt back 53 yards for the Commodores' score.

Dunn, 142 pounds of spunky quarterback, raced his Florida team back to the huddle after each play and methodically covered those 32 yards just inside the time distance.

He threw a 12-yard pass to halfback Billy Booker two plays before the scoring heave. And those two passes were two of just three completions in the whole game for Florida.

Both teams tried to kick an extra point after their touchdowns and both were blocked. Guard Edwin Johns of Florida broke through to spoil Vandy's effort and Tom Moore ran into Florida's attempted boot.

Wash. State Drops Oregon In 6-0 Game

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Washington State bounced back into the Rose Bowl picture Saturday, showing surprising ground strength as it upset Oregon 6-0 in a Pacific Coast Conference game.

The Staters, who now have three conference victories against one loss, also came up with a stubborn defense that completely frustrated Oregon.

Washington State scored in the second quarter, driving 88 yards in 16 plays. Only two of these were passes.

Quarterback Bob Newman went over on a one-yard plunge. His pass for the conversion was too long.

Newman, suffering from a knee injury, had entered the game only moments earlier when the Washington State drive appeared to be faltering.

It was third down and eight yards to go on the Oregon 43 at the time. He promptly tossed a 17-yard pass to fullback Chucl Morrell.

Thereafter he called ground plays and the Staters methodically ripped off short gains.

Oregon managed only one serious drive. IIt came in the fourth and covered 73 yards before Washington State stiffened and stopped the march on the 8.

State had shown defensive strength after Oregon picked up a State fumble on the Washington State 11. In four plays, the Staters threw Oregon back to the 22.

Browns Favored To Top Steelers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Cleveland Browns, almost perennial champions of the Eastern Conference of the National Football League, are 9½-point favorites to win their fourth game of the campaign Sunday when they play a return engagement with the Pittsburgh Steelers at Cleveland.

The Browns swamped the Steelers in their earlier meeting, 45-12.

The unbeaten Baltimore Colts, topping the Western Conference, also will be playing a return engagement, and also are favored to win, although by a lesser margin. The Colts meet the Detroit Lions at Detroit, and the dopesters give them a four-point edge. In their previous game Baltimore took a 28-15 decision.

The New York Giants, current runner-up in the Eastern Division with two victories and one defeat, are given a 6½-point edge over the Chicago Cardinals, who have lost their last four games to the New York club.

The second-place tie in the Western Conference is due to be broken when the Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Rams, each with two victories and one defeat, meet at Chicago. The Bears are given a six-point edge.

Two games matching Eastern and Western Conference clubs are on the schedule. Washington, the home team, is rated a 6½-point choice over the Green Bay Packers, and the Philadelphia Eagles, host to the San Francisco 49ers, are given a slim 1½-point margin.

The Giants and Cardinals also will be playing a return engagement. In the earlier game, played at Buffalo, the New York team registered a 37-7 victory, and now leads in their series, 26 games to 7.

Stacy Stars As Maroons Cop 38-0 Win

STATE COLLEGE, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback Billy Stacy polished Mississippi State to precision for next week's Southeastern Conference clash with Alabama by firing the Maroons to an easy 38-0 victory over Arkansas State Saturday.

Arkansas State, which hasn't won a game this season, succeeded in bottling up Mississippi State's offense in the first quarter. But after the first period the Maroons punched gaping holes in the Arkansas State line to score two touchdowns in the second quarter, one in the third and two in the final.

With Stacy handling the ball like a magician, Mississippi State marched 54 yards in three plays to score the Maroons first touchdown in the second period. Gil Peterson capped the drive by bucking over from the one. Stacy poked over right guard for the conversion.

The Maroons' Ned Brooks recovered an Arkansas fumble by Billy Caldwell on the 11 to set up Mississippi State's second score. Billy Schoenrock marched to the one and then Bobby Bates smashed right tackle for the touc' down. Tommy Miller passed to Robert Neaves for the conversion and Mississippi State held a 16-0 halftime lead.

The second half was even easier for the hard-driving Maroons. They opened the second half by driving 53 yards in eight plays to score their third touchdown as Shoenrock went over from the five. Stacy's conversion run failed.

A 46-yard pass from Billy Tohill to Pat Shute counted for the Maroons' fourth touchdown. Bob Collins ran over for the conversion. Frank Skipper scored the final tally on a three yard smash and Tohill ran over for the extra point.

Cotton Is Lower For Past Week

Active contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange took net losses ranging from 50 cents to $1.80 a bale. Bucking the trend was the October 1958 contract which expired at 12:30 p.m. (EDT) Wednesday. It went off the board with a gain of 45 cents a bale over the previous week's closing.

Selling in the active months reflected profit-taking and some hedging. Liquidation was stimulated, too, by favorable weather reports from the cotton belt.

Losses were held in check by price fixing and some buying based on loan considerations.

Traders noted that the amount pledged to the government loan through Oct. 10, although relatively high at 996,000 bales, was exceeded in 1956 when entries totaled 1,015,000 bales, and in 1953 when a total of 1,055,000 was recorded.

Also of interest to brokers was the latest official government report on consumption of cotton in this country. Use of the staple by U.S. mills in September averaged 32,400 bales a day. This represented a contraseasonal gain of 1.6 per cent over the August rate of 31,900 bales per day.

While below the September 1957 average of 33,000, the 1.6 per cent rise over August ran counter to the trend of recent years. During the past five years, the New York Cotton Exchange pointed out, September consumption has shown an average decline of 2.5 per cent from the month before.

Exports of U.S. cotton for the week ended Tuesday were estimated by the Exchange at 50,000 bales, compared with 64,000 the previous week and 117,000 in the like week last year. For the season through Tuesday, exports were estimated at 660,000 bales vs. 888,000 a year ago.

Government Bonds Drop

NEW YORK (AP)—U.S. Government bonds declined sharply this week and corporate securities closed lower on average.

Trading was light in governments and heavy in the corporate market. Corporate convertibles were sharply higher on heavy volume in line with the boom of their stock counterparts.

IInvestment quality corporates and foreign dollar bonds eked out small advances. This was more than counterbalanced, however, by sharp declines in rails and industrials. Utilities were unchanged.

Volume mounted to $33,025,000 par value for the week on the New York Stock Exchange from $30,098,000 the previous week and $24,148,600 for the corresponding week in 1957.

Monroe Firm Buys Ins. Co. In Arkansas

Ouachita Securities Corporation, of Monroe, today announced the purchase of the charter and control of an Arkansas life insurance company to be known as Life of Arkansas.

Nick Mantrozos, president of Ouachita Securities Corporation, said that necessary organizational details are being worked out to launch operations of the Arkansas company.

The purchasing corporation, which also controls Ouachita Security Life Insurance Company, "will expedite considerably our long - planned expansion into Arkansas."

The Arkansas insurance commission recently authorized Ouachita Security Life to expand into Arkansas. At that time Ouachita Life announced it would concentrate first operations there in the southeastern sector.

With the purchase of the established charter of the Arkansas company it was pointed out that operations would be extended much faster into all sections of the state.

The company, Mantrozos said, will be licensed as a full capital stock old line legal reserve with a reciprocal reinsurance arrangement with Ouachita Security Life of Monroe and other contractual arrangements which will prove beneficial to both companies.

Although Ouachita Securities Corporation will own the Arkansas company, Mantrozos said, much of the management and board of directors will be comprised of prominent and influential Arkansas citizens.

A definite decision on a permanent domicile for the company has not been made. The company was originally chartered in Little Rock.

Famous Slips In Bible Type Pointed Out

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Religion Writer

"Printers have persecuted me without a cause," lamented King David in Psalms 119:161.

He was right. "Printers" really were persecuting him in this Bible printed in 1653. The word should have been "princes."

The so-called Printers Bible was neither the first nor last edition of the Scriptures to be plagued by that curse of the print shops—the typographical error.

Probably no edition of the Bible has been published without a misprint. Yet the Bible is one of the most carefully proofread of books.

"The last time I was involved in publishing a Bible," says Miss Margaret Hills, librarian of the American Bible Society, "at least four people read it all the way through. And one of them read it three or four times.

"Still it came out with errors. Oh, we spelled names like Nebuchadnezzar right every time. But there were such things as 'now' for 'not' and so forth."

Most Biblical misprints are of no textual importance. Some, however, have brought about complete reversals of scriptural meaning.

Picture the consternation in 17th century London when it was discovered that the latest version of the Seventh Commandment instructed: "Thou shalt c o m m i t adultery."

The printers of the edition, men named Barker and Lucas, are said to have been fined 300 pounds for the typographical misstep and that particular Bible has been dubbed the "Wicked" or "Adulterous" Bible.

Only a few years later, another London printer, one J. Field, flubbed St. Paul's message to the Corinthians. Asked the saint in Fields' version:

"Know ye not that the unrighteous shall inherit the kingdom of God?" (1 Corinthians 6:9)

About the same time—the 17th was a bad century for Bible printers—Barker was blamed for slipping on another typographical banana peel.

This time the edition had the Lord directing Moses to "Vex the Midianites, and smite them: For they vex you with their wives." (Numbers 25:18). It should have been "wiles."

Methodists Here Observe Laymen's Day

The Gordon Avenue Methodist Church has invited Fred Huenefeld to deliver the layman's address today in recognition of Methodist Layman's Day, according to W. M. Allen, minister of the church.

Jack Hesketh is lay leader of the Gordon Ave. church, located at the corner of Dixie Street and Gordon Ave. in Monroe, and he will introduce the guest speaker.

Methodist churches through Arkansas and Louisiana will join other Methodist churches across the country in observing today as Laymen's Day.

Dr. Robert G. Mayfield, Chicago, general secretary of the Methodist Church's Board of Lay Activities, has called upon all of the denomination's churches to observe the day by having laymen conduct the services and speak from the pulpits.

Indications point to a wider observance of the day than any year in the history of the board, Dr. Mayfield said. He cited larger orders of program helps for the observance and pointed out that the board's supply had been exhausted and additional materials had been ordered to satisfy the demand.

"Seek Ye First" is general theme for the day.

Dr. Mayfield said he saw in Laymen's Day an opportunity to urge church members to:

—Deepen their own spiritual lives in order that they may be a channel through which the Holy Spirit can work.

—Develop a new realization of the importance of people.

—Rededicate themselves to the task of taking Christ to the whole world.

Laymen's Day, when rightly observed," he pointed out, "will be a time of real witnessing to a man's faith and Christian convictions.

Local Delegates Attend Assembly Held In St. Louis

The following delegates from the two local Christian Churches attended the 1958 Assembly of the International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ) at St. Louis, Mo. during the past week: Reverend and Mrs. John O. Stewart, Reverend and Mrs. Carney R. Burcham, Dr. and Mrs. D. L. Anderson, A. H. Gerson, and Robert Smith of Phillips University, Enid, Okla.

All sessions of the six-day Assembly will be held in Kiel Auditorium, St. Louis.

Convention executives noted a record attendance from the 8000 churches and approximately 2 - million members of their brotherhood in the United States and Canada. Contributing to the heavy registration is the fact that Missouri is near the geographical center of the country and in the midst of states with the heaviest concentration of Christian Churches.

President of the 1958 Assembly of the convention was Granville T. Walker, minister of the University Christian Church, Fort Worth, Texas. Chairman of the Program Committee is Hallie G. Gantz, minister of First Christian Church, Tulsa, Okla.

No Religious Revival In Russia Seen

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Religion Writer

"I'd like to challenge anyone who says there's a religious revival in Russia," says Tommy Hicks, a Texas-born evangelist who recently made a 32-day preaching tour of the Soviet Union.

The Rev. Mr. Hicks, who has spent the greater part of the past five years evangelizing on foreign shores, draws a bleak picture of religion outside the large Russian cities of Leningrad and Moscow.

"Back in 1955," he says, "the newspaper Pravda announced that Christianity would be dead in Russia within 10 years. From my latest observations, I'd say they don't need that long."

How are the Soviets doing it?

"They're taking the children out of the church," says the Rev. Mr. Hicks. "They're luring them away by giving them an esteemed place in the nation.

"They hace children's clubs and the members get to do things and go places that nonmembers do not get to do. If a boy or girl is a Christian he or she is ruled out of membership."

The Rev. Mr. Hicks preached at 23 services during his tour. Arrangements were made through local pastors. The evangelist says he does not know precisely how the pastors obtained permission.

"I preached as simply as I could," he says, "mostly from John 3:16 — 'Fod God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.'"

He preached through interpreters.

"The only time I was sure I was getting a good interpretation was when I had a Christian interpreter. Some were atheists and some just had no comprehension of Christian phrases."

"Churches are tolerated in Moscow and Leningrad," he says, "but it seems to be only a show for tourists. In the smaller cities, church attendance is small and quiet.

MY ANSWER by Billy Graham

QUESTION: My friends claim I am not a Christian because I do not attend church. Can one be just as religious and good if he is not a member of a church? G. J.

ANSWER: I suppose it could be said that going to church will not make one a Christian. But of this we are even more sure: refusing to fellowship with believers will not make you one either.

I suppose you could live up to the principles of the Masonic Lodge without joining it. You could subscribe to the principles of the Rotary Club without being a Rotarian. But it seems to me that if you sincerely wanted to be a good Rotarian, or good Christian, you would do well to fellowship with those who have kindred goals and motives.

The church is the family of believers. Christ died, not only for the individual, but for the church. The Bible says; "He loved the church, and gave Himself for it." If Christ loved the church enough to die for it, we should love it enough to associate ourselves with it.

By joining a good spiritual church, we are letting the world know where our loyalties are. Even you admit that "your friends say you are not a Christian because you do not belong to church." If we really believe in Christ, the least we can do is to identify ourselves with others who believe. In this way your faith is strengthened, and your witness is buttressed.

Dedication Set For New W. M. Church

Special opening services will be conducted this afternoon at 3:00 at the White's Ferry Road Church of Christ in West Monroe.

Today will also mark the beginning of a series of Bible lessons to be given by Dewey McDowell, local evangelist. McDowell is now working with the new congregation after preaching for about two years for the church in Belle, Missouri.

There will be congregational singing directed by verious song leaders in the afternoon and Harvey Starling of the Slack Street church is scheduled to speak.

The new building is a modern brick structure seating some 400 in the auditorium. There are nine classrooms, a nursery and study, and the building is completely air-conditioned. The parking area adjoining the building will park over 175 cars.

The building was constructed by the Slack Street church in West Monroe before the new congregation began. R. F. Downey, A. W. Brashears and Q. T. Hollis were the elders of the church. The building committee was Russell Jordan, Leo Walsworth, R. F. Downey, Alton Howard, and Tommy Goyne. The contractor was Ted R. Woods of West Monroe.

The White's Ferry Road church is the fifth church of Christ established in the Twin Cities. Alton Howard, member of the new congregation, remarks, "We are happy to be in our new building and we welcome you to worship with us and learn more about the churches of Christ.

Barbirolli To Tour U.S., Canada, Lead Symphonies

By GEOFFREY ILLER

LONDON, Oct. 19 (AP)—Britain's oldest symphony orchestra, The Halle, is preparing to get along for a few months without its conductor, Sir John Barbirolli, and in Manchester that's just awful.

He leaves in November for a three-months tour of Canada and the United States. And for Manchester, proud home of the Halle Orchestra for more than 100 years, that is almost as if the city were losing its lord mayor.

Barbirolli gave up the plum job of conductor of the New York Philharmonic during World War II and took over the famed Halle when its fortunes were at a low ebb. He has brought it back to fame and prosperity. He is a local idol in Manchester and one of Britain's national figures.

After conducting the old orchestra night in and night out for 15 years, Barbirolli announced [illegible] March he was going to spend part of each year conducting overseas.

He starts in Canada in December and plans a coast to coast tour of the United States after that. He will conduct his own former orchestra, the New York Philharmonic, as well as the Philadelphia, Boston Symphony and other leading American bands.

Manchester is the butt of English music hall comedians on account of its wet weather and smoky atmosphere. But the Halle is its glory. The orchestra belongs to Manchester as surely as the White House belongs to Washington.

BAND'S BIRTH

It grew out of a band sponsored by 19th Century cotton merchants —who made Britain the world's richest country and Manchester Britain's second biggest city.

In October 1957 the orchestra celebrated its centenary. The occasion brought a new flash of brightness to the glories that light up the murky old city, and brought home to Britons everywhere just what the famed orchestra has meant to the nation's musical traditions.

The orchestra is a vital part of the community. It contributes to the educational program of Manchester and other cities by giving regular concerts for school children. Every week, too, it plays at industrial concerts, attended exclusively by factory and office workers and sponsored by more than 200 firms in and around Manchester.

These activities are in addition to the orchestra's regular routine public concerts and tours.

Yet it was a German who began it all. One hundred years ago the rich German merchants who were attracted to Manchester by the expanding cotton trade sent for Carl Halle, a musician from Hagen, Westphalia, to come over and develop musical activities in the city.

He formed an orchestra to play at an art exhibition in Manchester in 1856. It was such a success that he stayed on to direct it on a permanent basis.

Halle became an Englishman by adoption, anglicized his name and died Sir Charles Halle in 1895.

BRITISH RULE

From World War I the orchestra has been in British hands. First Sir Thomas Beecham, then Sir Hamilton Harty kept its fame bright. But when Harty died in 1933 the orchestra went into a decline. For 10 years it played under guest conductors but had no permanent chief of its own.

World War II nearly killed it off. German bombs wrecked the city's free trade hall, which had been the orchestra's home. Key players began to drift off to the forces or to other orchestras.

That was where Barbirolli came in.

For seven years he had held one of the highest paid jobs in the musical world — conductor of the New York Philharmonic, were he had succeeded the great Arturo Toscanini.

Manchester businessman Philip Godlee sent for Barbirolli to come home to war-bruised Britain and rebuild the Halle. It meant a smaller salary than he was getting in New York but Barbirolli hurried back.

He rebuilt the orchestra, hiring musicians who had been playing in restaurants and music halls.

"They play the same notes," he said in answer to critics. "It's the quality of their playing that counts, not their background."

Under Barbirolli's leadership, the orchestra started earning its keep by playing in theaters and cinemas around the outskirts of the bomb-scarred city — buildings where not a note of serious music had been heard before.

The dynamic little Anglo-Italian upset concert organizers by declaring war on celebrity soloists, regarded as the safest box-office attraction in a world of rising maintenance costs.

"I have not travelled from America and spent frantically keyed-up days and nights assembling and rehearsing a new orchestra merely in order to have the opportunity of accompanying guest artists," Barbirolli said.

He won. A star pianist or violinist played with the orchestra from time to time, but Barbirolli mostly went on pulling capacity audiences into his concerts without the help of personality glamor.

Fighting against ill health, he has continued leading the orchestra from success to success for 15 years. A year ago he was looking worn and frail after a major abdominal operation. Now, at 68 he has regained some of his old toughness and vigor.

KNIGHTED

He was knighted in 1949 and a year later received the gold medal of the Royal Philharmonic Society—an honor bestowed on only the greatest figures in music from Beethoven onwards.

In 1950 he had to choose between the Halle and the biggest job in British music — conductor of the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) Symphony Orchestra.

The pull of the Halle tradition won. He turned down the BBC job and stayed in Manchester. The free trade hall was restored and reopened in 1951, and the Halle returned to its old home.

When the Orchestra gave a special series of concerts to celebrate its 100th birthday, trumpeters stood atop the roof of the Free Trade Hall and summoned music-lovers inside with a fanfare that resounded over the downtown area of the grimy city.

Inside, the concert started with another brass flourish. Composed specially for the occasion by Britain's leading composer, Ralph Vaughan Williams, it was entitled "Fanfare for Glorious John."

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

New Book By Keyes Awaited

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

A new book by Frances Parkinson Keyes is always eagerly awaited by her many admirers. This week her novel "Voctorine" was released. This is another story of the Louisiana rice country and is a sequel to "Blue Camellia." it carries on the story of members of the family whom we met in the former book. As usual Mrs. Keyes is weak in character portrayel, but she does tell a good story and her power of description is remarkable. Everyone who read "A Many - Splendored Thing" by Han Suyin will want to read her newest novel, "The Mountain is Young." It has its setting in the Himalayan mountain kingdom of Nepal and is concerned with the experiences of a western girl when she visited this far away and strange country. Han Suyin has a wonderful gift and has used it to the full in this book.

Neville Shute has a long list of novels to his credit, but his latest one, The Rainbow and the Rose" has been hailed by the critics as one of his most moving stories. It deals with a subject with which he is particularly fond, that of aviation. It is the story of two aviators and how their lives were connected. It is a man's book and will appeal to many readers. "Spanish Stirrup" by John Prebble is the story of the first great cattle drive northward from Texas, through Commanche country to Kansas, a distance of more than a thousand miles. It is a book of complete immediacy and of continuous pounding excitement. It adds to John Prebble's reputation as a master story teller.

Those who are devotees of the work of Francis Scott Fitzgerald will welcome a new collection of his stories called "Afternoon of An Author" which contains many of his stories which have not been published before.

In the field of non - fiction there is a great variety of new material. "Paper - Mache" by Lillian Johnson is a very practical book with many suggestions for those interested in this art. Everyone who read "The Diary of Anne Frank" will want to read the book "Anne Frank" by Ernst Schnabel which adds new information about the life of this tragic young girl. "Peace or Atomic War" is the title of the new book written by Albert Schweitzer. In this book one of the great minds of our age, urges us to make peace or risk destruction. This is the book for the man or woman who is not afraid to face facts.

Another broadway play has just been released in book form. It is "Romanoff and Juliet" by Peter Ustinov. Those who like the theatre will want to read it. A most interesting book written by Marie Donovan is called "The Far Eastern Epicure." This is a discussion of the foods of the far East and gives many recipes for preparing them. It is a most unusual and interesting book and will be enjoyed by all those who like unusual foods. "A Dictionary of Contemporary American Usage" by Bergen and Cornelia E[illegible]ans is a very interesting addition to our reference collection and will be eagerly read by [illegible]se who are interested in language and semantics.

The book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library is growing rapidly. We are doing our best to meet the needs of the people of the parish with the funds which we have available. Please remember our memorial book plan, for it is a big help to us.

War Is Theme Of Top Novel

CRAZY IN BERLIN. By Thomas Berger. Scribners, $4.75.

Carlo Reinhart, despite his ambiguous name, is an American born and grown to military age at just the right historic moment to make him a noncom member of the 1209th in occupied Berlin — so we read in this novel, an extraordinary work as first novel and extraordinary, too, at this late date for saying something new about the war about which so many other novelists have begun to repeat themselves, or repeat their colleagues.

When we meet, Carlo's chief virtue is "adaptability." He is no one to question other people's notions. It isn't so much that he conforms as that he doesn't react: First he thinks Roosevelt could hardly be worse, but he's willing to reconsider when he hears it said that at least he's better than Hoover. In the same fashion, he goes to Germany cherishing the idea that his forebears, Germans only a generation removed, were brutes. With this, Berger masterfully takes over his education and shows what can happen to a man who, standing well over six feet, enters a world where it is hard to keep from throwing his weight around occasionally, and where some weight is thrown at him.

He has a buddy, Marsala, one of the toughest - talking Yanks to get into any book, the equivalent of a whole college course for anyone helplessly exposed to him. But there are more somber comrades and friends. Marsala primarily is gravelly surface, but the others are skillfull above all at concealing what they are. It is a world of continuing confusion, where a loyalty that once made a man a fortune may now cost him his life, where nothing succeeds like hypocrisy and pretense. There are Lori and her incredible beast - like, brainlike husband; her doctor brother, perhaps her twin; Trudchen in her irresponsible teens; nurse Veronica Leary; Schild the lieutenant who favors communism; Schatzi, the unscrupulous opportunist.

In this "crazy" world, motives lie far from the surface. A neo - Nazi finds words to justify himself, a man is a hero by chance. Just how impure is the ardent Nazi, how pure the anti - Nazi? A complex cross - hatching of obscure impulses, urges and restraints, unfolded in colorful language by a born writer, here is one of our best war novels, and one of our best recent novels no matter what kind.

Painter's Letters Collector's Item

THE COMPLETE LETTERS OF VINCENT VAN GOGH. Introduction by Johanna van Gogh-Bonger and Vincent W. van Gogh. Translated from Dutch and French by C. de Dood and Mrs. Robert Amussen. 3 vols. New York Graphic Society. $50.

No modern artist, including Gauguin on his South Seas island with his nudes, has lent himself to the lurid Hollywood treatment so utterly, from birth to death, as the hapless genius Vincent van Gogh.

And no man deserved this cheap distortion so little. He was one of the historic tragic figures, unfitted personally for the life which he enriched beyond words for the rest of us. Born in 1853 in the Netherlands, son of an impoverished preacher, nephew of a successful art dealer and also broher of one, he was himself a teacher, amateur preacher, sickly romantic who indulged in some tawdry loves, and then consecrated painter, the man of all 19th century men most selflessly absorbed in an ineffable vision.

Fortunately his troubled life is abundantly documented. He died only in 1890 of a self - inflicted gunshot. His brother, Theo, who so staunchly supported him, was still alive, and so was Theo's wife who, with her son, the heir to the estate, has provided the introduction to these generously illustrated volumes.

Some of this has been available here before. Now for the first time it is all here, plus letters to some artists and a sister and from Theo to Vincent. These tell the van Gogh story almost alone. There are some poignantly revealing quotes:

About his place at home: "I have become more or less a kind of impossible and suspect personage in the family." About love: "She (Sien, the woman from the streets whom he wanted to marry) is not nice, she is not good, but neither am I;" and, "in order to love, I think it absolutely necessary to believe in God." About art: "Most people do not admire enough" — and at the start his own taste was faulty, though later he narrowed down his likes to the best artists, and the illustrations show plainly how he progressed from ordinary and commonplace to unique.

The flavor of this collection, which is a collector's item, is what we would have expected, only it is greatly intensified. For 150 years the art world has produced nothing to compare with this except Delacroix's "Journals," a classic that still awaits English translation.

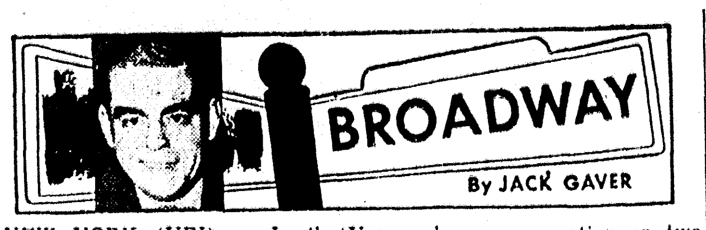
WILEY MAKES VISIT

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Sen. Alexander Wiley (R-Wis.) Friday visited Portuguese Prime Minister Dr. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar at the latter's summer residence in Estoril. He was accompanied by U.S. Charge d'Affaires Robinson McIlvaine. Wiley is in Lisbon as an observer on the American delegation to the conference for the revi[illegible]n of the convention for the protection of industrial property.



NEW YORK (UPI) — In the case of Eugene O'Neill you could say that the timing was wrong.

How much better it would have been had "A Touch of the Poet" been presented a couple of years ago as his first posthumous production followed by "Long Day's Journey Into Night," instead of the other way around.

For "Long Day's Journey Into Night" was a blockbuster: the master's best, many will vow. "A Touch of the Poet," just opened on Broadway, is merely good O'Neill.

Which should be good enough. Good enough, that is, to win most of the season's drama prizes seven months from now, come Tennessee Williams, Arthur Miller or any other lightweight you might care to nominate.

O'Neill is his own competition. You make a reservation or two about "A Touch of the Poet," and someone immediately jumps to the conclusion that you think it's not good or you didn't like it.

Not so at all. If there are other O'Neill plays that you think are superior — why quibble; that you know are superior — it is only necessary factual reporting to say so in order that readers may have some standard by which to judge.

"A Touch of the Poet" has been given a magnificent production by Robert Whitehead and the Producers Theater at the Helen Hayes Theater. This house, by the way, not only has been redecorated but re-designed into a more commodious and comfortable theater.

Miss Hayes, Eric Portman, Kim Stanley and Betty Field are admirable in the top roles of this play. By now Portman, who has the major part, no doubt will have corrected the only thing that marred the premiere performance—a tendency to growl a number of his speeches into inaudibility. His conception of his role is beyond reproach.

"A Touch of the Poet" is one of the plays O'Neill planned as part of an 11-play cycle covering more than a century of American life under the over-all designation of "A Tale of Possessors Self-Dispossessed." He felt it was a finished work and could stand alone, so did not destroy it in his last illness-ridden years as he did other works in the cycle.

Portman has the role of a would - be gentleman, English style, who has come upon evil days in 1828 New England where he finally learns that a new way of life has made him obsolete. His rebellious daughter wisely joins "the enemy" by marrying into the new "aristocracy" of successful businessmen.

The play has a number of vibrant moments, yet it needs the utmost in acting and direction—the latter supplied ably by Harold Clurman — to be at its best. It does not have an inevitable, mounting power of its own; there is a feeling of fabrication about it.

Yet there is, in the last of the four acts, a scene that is one of the finest O'Neill ever wrote. As played by Miss Hayes and Miss Stanley, it is a thing of truth and beauty and humor and pathos.

As a matter of fact, Miss Stanley, in the role of the daughter, does the best work she ever has done in the theater, and that is a considerable statement, as those who have followed her commendable career will realize.

Miss Hayes, for a change, does not have the dominant role — in fact, she ranks third to Portman and Miss Stanley. But she is so right and so fine that you are scarcely aware of this.

There are several grades of O'Neill. Any of them is welcome. And this is in no way the meanest of the lot, although a few reservations may be in order.

Hardhitting Tale Of World War One

IN FLANDERS FIELDS: The 1917 Campaign. By Leon Wolff. Viking. $5.

"In Flanders fields the poppies blow" — so begins John McCrae's poem, probably as popular as any verse to come out of World War I. It commemorated the half million casualties suffered, mostly British in the campaign doggedly, implacably pressed by Sir Douglas Haig to win a final victory on the Western Front. It was, except for a sharp tough revival of France's aggressive spirit at Verdun, the last major effort before the United States was prepared to fight in 1918.

A lot of Americans crossed that wretched No Man's Land on the trail of withdrawing Germans in the couple of months before the Armistice. The ruins of the Cloth Hall at Ypres used to be a symbol of the "vandalism" of the Hun, Boche or Fritzie boy. Americans will remember the names with which the Tommies got around Flemish tongue-twisters: Pop for Poperinghe, White Street for Wytschaete, Plug Street for Ploegsteert, and Wipers for Ypres.

They will remember, too, as they read these absorbing pages, those incredibly bloody assaults by unbelievably brave Englishmen over impossible terrain in unendurable weather. Two phases of the 1917 assaults succeeded — the attempt to wipe out the deadly Ypres salient and the irresistible rush up to Messines after the mines blew up the ridge with a blast felt in London. For the rest it was one step forward and two steps back. The English, the Anzacs and the Canadians were hurled into the affray, and it was just about a miracle that the battered British did not revolt as the French had after Nivelle's disastrous offensive on the Aisne.

It was a series of colossal blunders — tanks wasted, German strength ignored, disregard of elementary security rules, fatal delays, and the flouting of basic tactical principles. Lloyd George fought Haig every inch, but it took the Germans to crush him.

This is a merciless exposure of how inadequate the military mind can be — Wolff might ask, what d'ya mean, mind? One curious virtue of World War I is that it has given rise to so many books, fiction as well as non-fiction, that apply just as pointedly to World War II and even III. This is one of them. Hundreds of thousands of soldiers shed blood because of the rivalries, calousies, ambitions and failings of their leaders. Wolff takes us dramatically from the heat and passion of the conference table to the anguish and agony of the battlefields. This is the whole rounded picture: The few select statesmen and generals, their blunders, and the awful price paid for them by the multitude of common men.

Pakistanis Going Big For Jazzed Bingo

By LEMMY PINNA

KARACHI (UPI) — Traditionally economical Pakistanis have fallen hard for a jazzed-up version of bingo.

The game-known here as tombola—has been made attractive with the addition of a few promotional frills and $1,200 in prize money. As such, it is packing the playing houses.

The Karachi Railway Institute, the most successful sponsor of the game, draws more than 1,500 persons twice weekly to its sessions.

The British Tommies introduced the game to the Indian subcontinent as housie-housie. It never caught on in Pakistan until the government outlawed organized public gambling.

PLAY ON TENNIS COURTS

The law didn't apply to tombola when sponsored by clubs and restricted to club members. The game soon flourished into a legalized sport sponsored by a number of clubs, like the Railway Institute.

On Thursday and Sunday nights, automobiles, motorcycle rickshaws and horse-drawn carriages stream into the institute's compounds. There, on the tennis court, approximately 1,500 members gather, sit and scratch out numbers on their cards-and hold their breaths for the prizes.

Tombola's main attractions are the promotional "snowball" and "silver pool" numbers on its program. The "snowball" offers an accumulated prize of nearly $300 to the winner within a fixed amount of numbers called. The "silver pool" offers four prizes of $150, $100, $75 and $50.

On any one night, prizes given away total $1,200.

'Attila The Hun' Giant Production

The story of Attila the Hun, whose name is synonymous with one of the most savage and ruthlessly brutal eras in the history of humanity, is re-created in "Attila," a motion picture production large - scaled enough to encompass the momentous events of his time. Co - starring Anthony Quinn and Sophia Loren, "Attila," presented by Joseph E. Levine, arrives today at the Jim Theatre with important supporting roles enacted by international favorites Henri Vidal, Irene Papas and Eduardo Ciannelli, plus a cast of many thousands.

It took producers with the imagination and courage of Carlo Ponti and Dino De Laurentiis, who were responsible for the mammoth presentation, "War and Peace," to duplicate on the screen in "Attila" the barbaric battles involving thousands of invading Huns led by the power-mad Attila fighting countless Roman legions; the corrupt, lavish court of Ravenna, capital of the Western Roman Empire, which Attila was determined to conquer; the scene after breathtaking scene depicting Attila's bloody onward march as city after city in Gaul and Germany were overrun and sacked by the Hun hordes.

Against this vast panorama of history is told the personal, passion - charged story of Attila the man and Princess Honoria, a woman as ambitious as he, ruthless as he, who offered herself to him in marriage, knowing that half her brother's Roman Empire would go with her as dowry. Anthony Quinn, holder of two Academy Awards thus far, has the strongest role of his brilliant career as Attila the Hun. Co - starring him with one of the world's most beautiful and talented actresses, Sophia Loren as the covetous, Honoria, was a stroke of casting genius. The curvaceous, sensual beauty of Miss Loren is the perfect foil for the brute power and lust embodied in the world's most famous Hun, as portrayed by the wonderful performer, Quinn.

Technicolor adds to the excitement of "Attila," reproducing in magnificent color the splendor and opulence of the Roman court, the riotously colorful accoutrements of the barbaric Hun hordes.

ONIONHEAD — Walter Matthau and Felicia Farr receive wedding congratulations from Andy Griffith, right, in a comedy scene from the laugh riot "Onionhead." Based on the famous best-selling novel the film finds Andy in the Coast Guard and causing as much trouble and as many laughs as he did in the Air Force. The film opens today at the Paramount Theatre.

RIDE A CROOKED TRAIL — Forced into a masquerade as the town marshal, Audie Murphy takes up arms at the side of the fighting judge Walter Matthau in a tense moment from "Ride a Crooked Trail," which opens Wednesday at the Jim Theatre. Also starring in the adventure are Gia Scala and Henry Silva, Joanna Moore and Eddie Little.

STARS — Cary Grant and Ingrid Bergman are the stars of the motion picture "Indiscreet" which is starting today at the Joy Drive In.

UNDER ATTACK

Hungarian Boss Fights For Life

By RUSSELL JONES

VIENNA (UPI) — Hungarian Communist party boss Janos Kadar, the man who called in Soviet tanks to crush the 1956 revolution, is involved in a fight for his political—and perhaps his actual—life.

Iron Curtain experts here believe Kadar is under an attack by a group led by Premier Ferenc Muennish, who succeeded Kadar in the premiership, and may well be purged within the next few months.

While many factors enter into the battle, the experts cite these points of Kadar's vulnerability:

1. More than any other current leader, Kadar was identified with the revolutionary government of executed "freedom" Premier Imre Nagy and can be attacked for many of the "crimes" for which Nagy was executed.

2. Conversely, he was the tool used by the Soviets to overthrow the Nagy government and, as such, is the focus of the peoples' hatred.

GOVERNMENT

3. While trying to end the revolution and the general strike which followed it, Kadar made many public promises which now are embarrassing to the party and government.

4. Despite his role in crushing the revolution, Kadar's whole record lays him open to the charge of "revisionism," currently the worst heresy in the Communist book. Although the expression was not then used, it was for just this crime that he was imprisoned and tortured by the Stalinists in 1950.

5. Aside from Gyorgy Lukacs, now in obscurity, Kadar is the last surviving founder of the Hungarian Workers Socialist Party, set up by Nagy when the old Communist Party collapsed under the impact of the revolution. Of the other founders, Nagy was executed, Ferenc Donath was sentenced to 12 years imprisonment and Teza Losonczi died while awaiting trial.

Experts here believe the battle between Kadar and Muennich started when the latter forced the trial and execution of Nagy and his colleagues. They say the trial opened last Jan. 28 with Kadar resigning from the premiership in protest the next day.

AGAINST TRIAL

Kadar, they say, was against the trial as both unjust and unnecessary, and—as events proved correct—likely to revive memories both in Hungary and the rest of the world. He is said to have believed that Nagy and the others should have been left in custody until forgotten.

While the trial and the executions were victories for Muennich, the experts say, the fight has not been entirely one sided. The government "white book," which gave the official version of the proceedings, carefully never mentioned Kadar's association with the defendants, and the fragments of testimony which were reproduced did not include anything that might have embarrassed him.

Since then, several Kadar supporters have been removed from high positions and replaced by Muennich men, but the experts are not yet ready to write Kadar off.

They cite two good reasons for this:

1. Soviet Premier and Communist Party Boss Nikita S. Khrushchev, in talks with foreign visitors, has described Kadar as a friend, and friends of the Soviet leader are not likely to be purged.

2. The Hungarian economy is worse off this year than last, and the Soviet loans which have kept it afloat, come due next year. Barring an economic miracle, Hungary cannot pay them. A scapegoat will be needed. Muennich as easily as Kadar could be chosen.

There's nothing so effective in party decor as a timely motif at the start of a new season—particularly for the first few affairs. At this time of the year ye old pumpkins and gourds and browns and golds are the greatest.

Consider, for example, the table at ANNE BERNHARDT's luncheon party Wednesday at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club. Centerpiece was a straw cornucopia, overflowing with fall fruits — apples, avocados, lemons — interspersed with sprays of pyracantha and dried oak leaves. Each place was marked with a card decorated with a miniature dried arrangement. Seed pods and dragonflies were used, with each design different. All of this made a most charming picture against the dull gold cloth. Ham mornay was the main course of the meal, accompanied by asparagus, stuffed oranges, and green salad. The unusual dessert was individual baked Alaskas, cooked and served in small flower pots, with a real flower "growing" in each. Seven guests attended this party.

Another seasonal table was seen at the JACK TERZIAS when they entertained guests for dinner last week end. Ornamental gourds, Indian corn, and chrysanthemums were used in the centerpiece. Eleven guests enjoyed the meal of chicken curry with suitable side dishes — toasted almonds, chutney, rice, cocoanut.

Several interesting visitors in town have been the occasion for a number of parties. MR. and MRS. R. M. MARTIN of Baltimore, Maryland, are the guests of their son and his family, TOM MARTIN, wife PAT, and son, TEM.

First party honoring Mrs. Martin was the luncheon hosted by EVELYN MOORE on Wednesday. The bare table was centered with a large loaf of French bread filled with pyracantha branches. Brown place mats were used. Evelyn served shrimp burgers on individual French loaves, topped with a curry sauce, and cucumber boats filled with a congealed vegetable salad. Hot apple turnovers with ice cream were dessert. Also attending this party were Pat Martin and VERA TROY.

On Thursday CHRISTINE GRAY invited some friends to have lunch and to meet Mrs. Martin. Those enjoying this opportunity for a chat were MIRIAM RUBEY, JOEL JOHNSTON, ALICE PEAT, GAY ULRICH, and MARGARET ALVERSON.

MARY MOBBERLY of New York City has been the guest of her sister, ELSIE STANDLEY. A number of parties have been given in Mary's honor, including a conversational hour last Saturday at the home of IRMA BELLE HUSTED. Co-hostess was MARY LEE SAUNDERS. An arrangement of dahlias, straw flowers, and sage in lavender tones, used with pink roses, centered the dining table. Shrimp dip with chicken salad sandwiches, cheese straws, and cookies were served to about twenty guests.

DOLL RANSOM honored Mary with a dinner party last week. A fruit arrangement was used on the table, where a chicken spaghetti supper was served. After dinner, the group played canasta. Guests in addition to Mary and Elsie were CARRIE PARKER, DOROTHY FULLER, and VANCE BREARD.

Doll was also hostess at a family party at the Ransom camp which honored her husband CHICK on his birthday Saturday. 'Twas a real holiday dinner with fried chicken and birthday cake and ice cream. Guests included Chick's three grandchildren and their parents, the PAUL RANSOMS and the RICHARD PIPES; plus ALICE and DOC WADDELL, and DOROTHY FULLER.

Guests of LELA SHATTUCK in her home on K street this week have been MRS. W. F. SHATTUCK of Evanston, Illinois, and her daughter, MIRIAM SHATTUCK. A number of parties have been given for these visitors.

The EVANS ETHRIDGES hosted a home dinner party last Saturday night. Guests included several couples who stopped in on their way to the Cotillion club record hop, and thirteen who stayed for dinner. Magnolia leaves and pine cones were used on the buffet, where barbecued chicken, rice casserole, and green beans were served. The group enjoyed a "home dancing party" after the meal.

Another group of Cotillion club members stopped by the LEALIS HALES' before the dance . . . And an intimate group went out to dinner in honor of the BILL SMITHS wedding anniversary . . . All of these, and others, totalling some sixty couples, met later at the Knights of Columbus hall for the informal dance.

A new dance club has been formed about town, made up of approximately one hundred couples. Plans are to have two formal parties each year, one in the spring and one in the fall. The name of the group has not been definitely decided, but the first dance is scheduled for November 6 at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club. Jan Garber's orchestra will play. The evening will begin at 7:30, with the members gathering for a drink and snacks before music for dancing starts at nine o'clock.

Another club as yet unnamed is the newly organized fun club for the seventh grades. One hundred and eight youngsters are members of the organization, which had its first party last night. This first affair was a hay ride, which began at the Neville High School. Trucks filled with hay took the group to Bancroft camp, where they unloaded for games and supper. The box lunches of po-boy sandwiches and pie were served with soft drinks. The members suggested names for the new club, and a cash prize is promised for the one to be chosen.

KARIN WHITE and her daughter MELISSA left on Wednesday for New York. They will visit relatives for about two weeks, when R. C. will join them for the trip home.

The FRED HEUNEFELDS, JR. are leaving today for a week's trip to the East. They will go direct to Boston, where they will rent a car for a drive through Massachusetts, Vermont, and New Hampshire. The New England states are at their most glorious this time of year. By Wednesday, the Heunefelds will be in New York for the American Cancer Society meeting. In addition to the business of the meeting, they plan a round of sightseeing and theatre going. They will take a plane home at the close of the meeting Saturday.

□ □ □

An advance Hallowe'en party honored JERELYN RYAN on her fourth birthday last Friday. Witches and goblins decorated the premises, and the young guests were in costume. The birthday girl was a leopard. Judged the best girl's costume was PATTY SPENCER's witch outfit, while best boy was TOMMY DIXON — a pirate with a knife through his head . . . The children played a target game of shoot the cat, with CINDY WILLIAMS and NED COURTMAN proving to be the best marksmen. Ice cream, cake, punch, and candy pumpkins were served to about thirty children.

Whoever said it, no one else has ever said it as well as William Shakespeare. Here is a right modern psychology lesson by the Bard:

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove.
O, no! It is an ever-fixed mark
That looks on tempests and is never shaken:
It is the star to every wand'ring bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rose lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error and upon me proved,
I never write, nor no man ever loved.

Evening shoes go exotic this season. Look for lots of beads, sequins, and sparkles. Delman shows a red satin pump with a high vamp, resembling a boot, which is cut out and traced with sequins. Beaded flowers decorate toes, and large rhinestones sparkle everywhere. Daytime shoes have a dressy look, and some are lined with gold kid. At - home mules come in printed cut-velvet, outlined in multi-colored sequins, gold lame, and paisley cut-velvet, or are studded with brilliants.

Her veil of imported silk illusion, fell in a circular swing from a lace and tulle capulet that was encrusted with pearls and irridescent sequins. She carried a white orchid with dainty traditional bridal flowers surrounding it in a crescent.

Your Basic Clothes Need Accessories

By BETH BLAIR

Plan a basic look in your new winter wardrobe so that you can vary the look of a dress or suit with different accessories. Remember also that a fur accessory as a hat, muff or handbag will give it an air of elegance. A reader writes—

Dear Miss Blair:

I have a gray flannel suit from last winter but I have worn it so much I am tired of it. It has a hip-length jacket cut straight and finished with pearl buttons; skirt is straight. Can you suggest some way to make it look different?

Your gray suit sounds like a wonderful basic costume but you may have gotten into a rut as far as accessories for it are concerned. This could be a soft gray suede or perhaps a cocoa tone with shoes to match. The belt should hit your normal waistline and reach about four inches above it. Another idea would be to add a little fur collar of mink or fox. This could be in white or gray to go with the suit. Altering the suit jacket might help give it new interest too — perhaps shortening it to waist-length or slightly shorter to show interesting leather belts.

Dear Miss Blair:

Will you suggest a basic foundation wardrobe? I am a teen-ager and have only recently begun to wear pantie girdles in addition to bras.

I suggest you have about a half dozen brassieres perhaps in white for the most part. Have one of these in black if you wear it a lot and one in a strapless style or with straps far over to sides for cut-out necklines. The number of pantie girdles should number enough for a fresh one each day — a minimum of three would make it possible to have one always ready to wear with one drying (the third one you have on). Of course, add to this group if you can afford more.

FEED THE KIDS

It's a good idea to have children's snacks ready for them when they come home from school. If sandwich, crackers, fruit or usual fare is at hand, they will not interrupt you in the event you are busy with other chores or entertaining guests in the afternoon.

USING THE NOODLES

NEW YORK — Exotic noodles pep up a dull menu. Heat 2 tablespoons olive or salad oil with 1/4 cup butter or margarine.

Add 8 ounces (about 4 cups) cooked fine egg noodles, 1/2 cup chopped onions and 1 garlic clove, finely chopped. Cook over medium heat, string constantly, until noodles are lightly browned and onions are tender.

Add 2 1/2 cups chicken bouillon, 1 cup light cream, and 1 package (10-ounce) frozen peas. Cover and cook until noodles are tender. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serves 4-6.

Career Women Make The Best Wives

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Writer

Career women make the best wives, says Wesley Simpson, who is married to one.

Despite the fact that his wife Adele is one of the world's busiest women, Wesley radiates husbandly happiness and pride. Sayshe: "I'm sick of hearing the old argument about whether a woman should choose between a career or home. My wife handles both with one hand."

Adele Simpson, one of the top names among American fashion designers, is a tiny dynamo of 4 feet 10, who has managed to run a town house and a country estate, raise a son and a daughter, and conduct one of the country's biggest dress businesses, all without getting a hair out of place.

During the week, she gets to her office on 7th Avenue shortly after dawn, has lunch at her desk, copes with temperamental models, buyers, fashion editors and store owners all day and then goes home to entertain anywhere from two to a dozen guests at dinner.

Weekends she takes off for the Simpson country home at Greenwich, Conn., where the house usually is full of weekend guests from Paris, Rome, London, Los Angeles or points between.

In between times she always has time to help settle the problems of her 19-year-old daughter Joan or her 21-year-old son Jeffrey and welcome their friends at either domicile. Sometimes this amounts to an influx of 15 or 20 young but the Simpsons manage to take them all in stride.

"If I ever had, had to make the choice between home and business, I would have given up the career without a second thought, Adele says. "But I never had to. Maybe I'm fortunate in having a well-adjusted family, or maybe I've just learned to budget my time, but I'm sure neither Wesley nor the children ever have felt neglected. In fact they seem to thrive on all the excitement and the hectic kind of life we lead."

"I wouldn't want a wife who had no interests outside of cooking and housekeeping," says her husband, a banker. "The world's most glamorous women always have been the busiest ones. And they're the ones who know how to be wives, mothers and hostesses too—with no sweat."

TEMPT 'EM

Do not fret trying to get the children to eat cooked cereal in the morning. Sprinkle a few cake decorations over it, and you will find they will welcome the cereal bowl.

Scatter Pillows Lend A Hand In Romance

Scatter pillows can make a steady-dating pair in the room of any young modern. These little girl and boy pillows are beguiling and a nice change from animal motifs that have been around for a time. If you get busy on this project early, you can make pillows for all the starry-eyed teen-aged girls on your Christmas list, one way to solve that "what-can-I-give-that-she-doesn't-have" problem.

Cotton feed or flour bags are ideal for stuffed pillows of this sort, say the experts at your local sewing center. Select two 25-pound print sacks in bright prints. Prepare them for sewing by ripping the chain-stitched seams and soaking the bag in warm, soapy water to remove labels or printed brand names, then dry and press.

It's a good idea to embroider the pillows before sewing them together. Cotton rug yarn is used for the hair. Hair styles may be changed to match the teen-ager who will own the pillows. Such styles as pigtails, pony tails, or crew cuts can be done easily with black, brown, red or yellow yarn.

If you have one of the automatic slant-needle sewing machines or an automatic zigzagger, you can applique the features; otherwise, hand-embroidery is your best bet.

If you are giving a set of pillows to a girl with a string of beaux, make a series of interchangeable neckties for the boy pillow, each with a name embroidered on the bow. Then Sam, or Jim, or Tom, can be sure he's first in her heart, if his name is on the tie when he comes to call.

UNUSUAL JAM

Wash, peel, core and mash Bartlett pears to make 3 cups. Combine with 4½ cups undrained crushed pineapple, ¼ cup lemon juice, 7½ cups sugar and ¾ teaspoon whole anise seed. Bring to full rolling boil, stirring occasionally, and boil 10 minutes.

Remove from heat, stir in ½ bottle liquid fruit pectin, and skim. Pour into hot sterlized jars and seal. Makes about 10 half-pints.

The bidding:

South, 2 spades; West, 3 hearts; North, Pass; East, Pass.

South, 4 clubs; West, Pass; North, 4 spades; East, Pass.

South, 6 spades; West, Pass; North, Pass; East, Pass.

Opening lead: Heart ace.

When it is to your interest for an adversary to make a certain play you must not place any obstacles in his way. If he is trying to enter dummy to take a finesse which you know will lose, by all means let him get there. Observe the battle of wits between South and West in today's hand.

South's final bid was unsound, and the slam contract should never have been reached. After North's preference bid of four spades, gambling that his partner had the king of that suit, South leaped to six. His proper call at this point is five spades. This announces to partner the ability to take 11 tricks.

Any card that North has that will certainly produce a trick will justify his going to six. If North holds the king of spades he must conclude that partner is counting on losing that trick and should, therefore, bid a slam himself.

West led the ace of hearts and South's queen fell. There could be no question that it was a singleton, because declarer could not have bid a slam with two losing hearts in his hand.

It was evident therefore, that declarer could not enter dummy, but West graciously placed him there by continuing a heart.

Declarer heaved a sigh of relief and reached for the nine of spades about to try the trump finesse, when it suddenly occurred to him that West had been much too generous.

Why had he so kindly put the declarer into the dummy when it must have been evident that declarer had no means of getting there on his own?

This was one gift horse that must be looked in the mouth. West's only reason for wanting declarer to lead from dummy was to permit the spade finesse. On this line of reasoning, South went up with the ace and dropped the singleton king.

Girl Scout News

Congratulations to the winners of the eleven ribbons won by Girl Scouts at the Caldwell Art Festival. Two blue ribbon winners were Mary Alice Pankey, last year in Troop 61, now a member of the new Northside Junior High troop, not yet numbered, for a tile decorated with slip trailing in an abstract design, and Becky Middleton, Troop 24, for a bowl made by the coil method. These girls made their prize winning pieces as part of their work on the Pottery badge in a special class last June, as did several other winners.

Red ribbons went to Jeanette Bush, Troop 17, for her tile with leaf imprint, made at day camp last summer, to Mickle Varnado, Troop 24, for her figure of a poodle dog, to Mary Alice Yeldell, Troop 48, for her figure of a dog, breed unknown, and to Marilyn Denoux, of the same troop, for her coil - method bowl.

Three members of Troop 44, which worked on the Pottery badge last year under the direction of their leader, Mrs. Louis Breard, Jr., earned white ribbons. They are Jane Cook, for her figurine, Virginia Starnsey for her pinch pot, and Renee Breard for a small ash tray decorated with a modern design. Susie Wright, Troop 48, won a white ribbon for her pinch pot decorated with an incised Indian design, and Valerie Fike, youngest of all the winners and the only Brownie Scout to win recognition, earned a place with her pinch pot made in Troop 51 last spring under the direction of her leader, Mrs. W. W. Hathorn. Valeria is now a member of Troop 35 at Plum Street School.

Needless to say, all work was original, meeting Girl Scout standards which allow no copying, no patterns, no molds. One young girl who was having fun with her first experience with clay, was heard to remark "Just think! This started out as a lump of clay!" The program committee is grateful to all the girls who brought their pieces for the festival. Visitors made many favorable comments on the whole Girl Scout exhibit. Prize - winning pieces and others are on display at the office this week.

We're hearing of outdoor activities galore these pretty days, which is as it should be Troop 41, second year Brownies, Mrs. John Salisbury and Mrs. R. L. Kiper, leaders, visited a cotton field on a sunny day and received permission to pick some. All had fun. Troop 15 Mrs. Norman Deaton and Mrs. Charles Schneider, leaders, went on a hike to the Indian Mound one pretty meeting day. The girls were curious about the mound and would like to know more. Anyone know any details?

Troop 51, fourth grade Brownies, learned to cook breadtwists at one of their regular meetings. Making a fire in the little park behind their meeting place, the girls waited until the coals were just right, Mrs. Hathorn said, and cooked their twists to a turn, filling the hole with butter and jelly, and finding them so-o-o good.

Only local adult meeting this week is the neighborhood meeting at Plum Street School at 1:00 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. There are some important matters to come before it. A neighborhood meeting means all registered Girl Scout adults living in that section of town should attend.

The Models Not Royalty Are Aloof

By MARY PRIME

Miss Connor is "rather icy" when she models, never smiles, and follows the British pat'ern of "drifting in and out aloofly."

But Princess Margaret is like any other girl—"very human. She rushes up to us afterwards and wants to feel the material," said the tall, leggy blonde in an interview on her first trip to the United States. She had never modeled a swim suit ("I'm the fur coat type") until the Jantzen Company brought her to New York for an international style show.

SELECT AUDIENCE

When royalty views high fashions, a select 40 or 50 persons attend. Shows are held in private homes or plush hotels. Most frequent requests for the showings come from Princess Margaret or the Queen Mother, occasionally from the Duchess of Kent and the Duchess of Gloucester but rarely from Queen Elizabeth.

Because the Queen's clothes must be exclusive, designers go to Buckinhgam Palace. But Princess Margaret expresses great interest in what other women are wearing and wants to see what's new in the salons. If she or the Queen Mother choose a gown from a collection, duplicates are taken out of circulation.

"Margaret has bought things I've modeled, usually evening clothes, summer dresses or tweed suits. I've never seen her buy a fur coat—I don't know where she gets them," said Miss Connor.

ADAPT WHEN POSSIBLE

Although the princess and the Queen do not always find fashion suitable, such as the current 19-inch hemline, they adapt when possible and have shortened their skirts "two inches."

When showing to any royalty, the models walk in one at a time, and curtsey to all royalty — "in varying degrees."

"There's much practicing before one of these shows. There's always a great, great carry-on, all very solemn, unless someone loses a petticoat, falls while curtseying, or opens a jacket when they forgot to put on a blouse."

Miss Connor also meets other celebrities, such as Winston Churchill (he's sweet) Robert Taylor (He's divine, I must say) and titled bachelors (I'm not interested in titles).

PEAR PIE TIME

NEW YORK — It's Bartlett pear pie time again.

For a 2-crust 9-inch pie, you'll need 3½ cups sliced, peeled, cored pears.

Mix pears with 1 tablespoon lemon juice, grated rind of 1 lemon, 3 tablespoons flour, ¾ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon nutmeg and a few grains of salt. Spoon pear mixture into lower crust, dot with 1 tablespoon butter, cover with vented upper crust and seal edges. Bake in 425 degree oven 40 to 50 minutes.

Empire is the magic word for fall millinery, say stylists for Women's Wear Daily, a trade publication. The high drum crowns of Directoire inspirations, poke bonnets, bloused mop caps, modified postillion crowns with close side - rolled brims all ride the current fashion band wagon. One recurrent shape for fall is the lofty toque with manipulated crown — draped, pouffed, or tiered. Every possible medium is used for these hats, from furry fabrics, to real fur, satin, gold lame, and soft felt.

Teenagers Plan Careers In Dress Designing

NEW YORK (UPI) —The younger generation seems bent on making the housewife extinct.

In a questionnaire sent to girls in the United States, Canada, Hawaii, and Alaska, not one girl expressed a desire to be a housewife, rear children, or follow any non-salaried career.

The girls, considered typical teens, are 70 regional winners chosen from 50,000 youngst·'s who entered the annual teen-age dress-making contest, sponsored by the Singer Sewing Machine Co.

"In the six years we've held the contest, this is the first time the finalists have voted strictly for careers. We think it's particularly startling in view of the fact that so many of the girls are within a year or two of the current marriage age," said a spokesman for Singer. The contestants range from 10 to 17 years.

SOME UN"ECIDED

Some youngsters in the 10 to 13 year group put "undecided" after their career choices. One girl simply said, "I'm too young to know yet." But only 5 per cent of the girls from 14 to 17 years were undecided.

If the girls continue with their present plans, they should help relieve the teacher shortage. More than 25 per cent want to teach a variety of subjects, from home economics to music. One 11-year-old, Sheryl Angstman, of Denver, Colo., wants to teach handicapped children.

Many teen-agers plan on careers in fashion or dress designing. Others aim to be airline hostesses, scientists, doctors, nurses, actresses and models, and one girl hopes to be a pharmacist.

There is a small trend toward spiritual careers, the survey showed. Mary Lou Smidt, of Britt, La., listed missionary work as a possible choice. Beverly Love, of Montgomery, Ala., said she plans to go to a Bible college, and Stephanie Robinson, of Welch, W. Va., wants to be a Christian education director. All girls questioned are active in local church work.

UNDAUNTED

The young ladies also believe in testing their career-girl wings early, and proved undaunted by a general shortage of jobs during the summer. Nearly 90 per cent spent their vacations earning hard cash.

Baby sitting was the most popular way of earning money in the younger age group.

These also tended to do more chores around the house for money. One enterprising youngster, Marikay Kinney, 13, of Scranton, Kan., was responsible for meals and housework while her mother held down a job. Another, Claudia Cook, 12, of Akron, Ohio, reported wearily that she did "everything—from helping with dishes to mowing the lawn."

Older girls preferred to work outside the house, as dep: tment store sales clerks, waitresses and office clerks.

Love Will Find Way To Mail Bag

By VIVIAN BROWN

Is it possible for a couple to live happily ever after, when the man is younger than the woman?

That's a question bothering a teen-ager 19, who is dating a boy 17.

"It seems," she says, "that my mother and father enjoy criticizing my relationship with the boy who is two years younger, although we get along beautifully. We may never marry, so why should they worry about it, and if we do marry isn't it our own business, about our ages, I mean?"

Parents do worry about such things, and there is no way to stop it. At age 19, a girl is likely to look more mature than a 17-year-old boy, and the contrast may worry parents. Many couples have found the age discrepancy no barrier to happiness, however, and if you feel that you have a meeting of minds with this boy, then do not worry about the opinions of onlookers. As you say, you may never be interested in marrying him anyway, if he proposes.

"My boyfriend asked me to go steady with him a few years ago. We have been doing that ever since. Now it seems he takes out other girls occasionally, although we have discussed marriage, and he resents the fact that I look at other boys or dance with them."

Grandma was a lot smarter than today's youth, because she wouldn't have been silly enough to tie herself down to one boy unless he showed concrete evidences of his affection, such as an engagement ring. The advantage of symbol was not so much its cost, but rather an indication of his intentions so that other girls knew that he had been taken. In those days other girls kept hands off a boy who had proposed to a girl, but these days anything can happen. There are some girls who wouldn't have the slightest qualms about flirting with a boy who is engaged, but on the whole there is less risk than just the steady-dating arrangement, which just seems to tie the girl up, letting her rely on chance to keep the romance alive.

"My 16-year-old sister who is a year younger than I flirts with all my boy friends, and every once in a while she manages to take away someone I like. Don't you think it is pretty dreadful of her to deliberately try to snatch my dates. She never gets a boy on any other basis."

There are girls who specialize in stealing other girls beaus. Your sister may not be doing this intentionally, however, so you had better decide whether the boy or Sis is to blame.

DOWN TO EARTH

NEW YORK — Plant bulbs now for flowers next spring.

Dutch bulb importers recommend planting bulbs until the end of November, or until frost hardens the ground. Follow planting rules on the package or booklet which comes with the bulbs. For example, place tulips six inches deep and six inches apart.

Don't plant bulbs in a single line. Clumps of five or more give a better effect, especially if all the bulbs in a clump are the same color.

Tensions and pressures in our ever changing world is a challenge to parents and teachers to create better communities in which to rear our chilldern in honest values. The major problem in health taday from the age of one to the thirty-fourth year is credited to accidents. This chief threat reverts back too often to our children's training and environment.

Unit voted to continue sending monthly contribution to Veteran's Hospital in Shreveport for coffee.

Toys and gifts must be in by December 8. These gifts are made available free of charge to patients in the Veteran's Hospital. Mrs. Gimler asked all members to contribute a gift.

The November meeting will be held at the Highland Park Country Club. All members can make reservations by phoning Mrs. Sam Orchard, chairman.

The new officers of the year are: Mrs. Fred Ragland, 1st vice president; Mrs. V. Benison, 2nd vice president; Mrs. Dewey Mobley, secretary; Mrs. Sam Orchard, treasurer; Mrs. Ted Mahr, chaplain.

Sprig & Twig Garden Club Holds Meeting

Members of the Sprig & Twig Garden Club of Monroe met in the home of Mrs. E. D. Slaughter. Mrs. M. H. Kulcke assisted as co-hostess.

Mrs. J. W. Keller, club president, called the meeting to order and Mrs. R. F. Wilson gave the horticulture report.

Each member brought a composition designed for a particular room setting, coordinating rooms and flowers. One of the most pleasant compositions was created by Mrs. J. A. Coleman in a low green container using casta bean foliage, sibiscus buds and dahlias. As her accessory she used a rooster of the same colors as in her foliage and flowers.

Another beautiful composition was made by Mrs. R. F. Wilson using the tones and shades of red with rolled canna leaves, coreopsis, celosia and artifical grapes. An oriental accessory was placed in the center of this composition.

Mrs. D. L. Allen composed an all white composition using gardenias. She used a most unique accessory consisting of an old - fashioned girl holding an umbrella and two french poodle dogs.

Refreshments were served to the following members: Mrs. R. F. Wilson, Mrs.B. L. Talton, Mrs. M. H. Kulcke, Mrs. D. L. Allen, Mrs. J. W. Bailey, Mrs. J. A. Coleman, Mrs. J. W. Keller, Mrs. Travis Davis and Mrs. E. D. Slaughter.

THE HOME SHIFT

Root Pruning Autumn Chore

By MILDRED SWIFT

Are you like some who feel that fall is a sadtime of year? Probably it's because falling leaves seem so final. The children are sad because of the confinement of school walls. One husband says it's a sad time of year because the leaves start falling before the grass stops growing.

Any way you look at it, fall is a time when there are garden jobs to be done. Many of these we've told you about in our columns. But — when talking to you, you tell me to keep on telling you lest you forget. Here goes! This is a good time of year to root-prune many large, fast growing shrubs. Privet hedge is a good example. It's just impossible to even grow St. Augustine close to these plants because the roots are so greedy and spread so far.

Sharpen the spade. Plunge this as deep as you can, about two feet from the main body of the hedge. This severs the large roots, yet doesn't damage the plant. New feeder roots start growing again.

This root pruning is a yearly process if you want any vegetation to grow near these large plants.

Mrs. Winnona Guidry, our state garden specialist, says why bother with privet when there are so many less greedy evergreens. Peggy Garnett says privet berries attract some of our loveliest birds. Wisteria is root pruned for a different reason — to encourage blooms.

MORE JOBS

In answer to the question, "Are snapdragons easy to grow from seed?" No! Not easy but it can be done. Your safest bet is to buy the plants from the nursery.

Plant calendula seed now. They'll bloom right through the winter months. Don't forget pansy plants. Sweet peas can be planted from now until Thanksgiving. Wisteria growers say fertilize this vine, now, instead of in late winter. They claim you get more blooms and less vine. You can use 8-8-8 but 5-10-5 would be better. There's less nitrogen in the latter, and growth is certainly not needed, when it comes to wisteria. They grow too much. Mr. Hunt says probably every other year is often enough to fertilize. If you're not having blooms, use bone meal.

OTHER REMINDERS

It's not too late to plant the spring blooming bulbs. Why not include some ranunculus and anemones? But hurry.

When planting ranunculus and anemone bulbs place the claws down. If you can't remember whether they go up or down, plant them on their sides. They'll bloom. Claws down is best and is the proper method. It is fatal to get them upside down.

GOOD NEWS

Yes, a new method for whitening discolored nylon garments. Here are the instructions:

Wash garments thoroughly with soap or synthetic detergent by hand or in a washing machine, depending on the construction and type of the garment.

Into approximately one gallon of hot water (160 degrees) in an enamel container, add one package of color remover and immediately add wet garments. Stir gently while maintaining temperature. If after 30 minutes whiteness is restored, leave in 30 additional minutes. Temperatures in excess of 160 degrees may set wrinkles that are difficult to remove by ironing.

Into approximately one gallon of warm water add two tablespoonfuls chlorine bleach and two tablespoonfuls of detergent. Immerse garments and with occasional stirring let soak for 30 minutes. Rinse thoroughly in warm water.

For final rinse, immerse garment in approximately one gallon of warm water containing a tablespoonful of perborate bleach. (Borax will do.)

Drip dry and iron with a steam iron or a dry iron at "rayon" setting.

Any precautions supplied by the manufactures of any product used should be followed.

SPOTLIGHT

Now that shorter skirts are back, your legs will be much more in the spotlight. If they are near perfect you may want to play them up with those glamorous new colors. If you're on the conservative side you can still emphasize them with very dark or extremely pale hues.

On the other hand, if your legs are not your most intriguing feature, minimize them. DO IT with a stocking shade that blends well with your costume and shoes. Remember, too, that plump legs look trimmer in seamed hose.

COLOR, COLOR!

This is a very colorful season. Red in all tones is top choice. Red is followed by soft greens, bright electric blues, purples and a wide range of beige and gold tones. Soft brown fur tones are high in favor. Naturally the little black dress and suit are always with us.

When you choose your color this fall, however, the dress is not enough. Hat, gloves and shoes should match exactly, to carry out the important one - color look.

Bracelets, if you choose them with care, can accentuate one's attractive features, so the fashion and beauty experts tell us. They say the bulkier and higher the bracelet, the smaller the wrist and hand will seem. However, if your wrist bone is prominent, avoid a plain bracelet. One with bright stones would be good — and they tell us to wear the bracelet low on the arm. A narrow band is best. One too wide will make the hand look bony.

If your wrist is pleasantly slender, it can take a more eye arresting bracelet. It could even be tighter fitting.

If your hand is short, or if your nails are long, set your bracelet somewhat higher on the arm. This will allow the wrist to blend with the hand and give the effect of length. This will counteract any stubbiness at the tips of the fingers.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Mrs. Barbara called to tell me about a very beautiful candle tree in bloom. Drive by Mr. C. W. Caraway's, 3609 Gordon Avenue. This gentleman is an excellent gardener and one of the first to grow this tree.

See you next Sunday.

Green Brick Assets May Be Avoided

People buy green bricks as well as gold bricks.

The green bricks are the landscape "assets" that sometimes induce home seekers to buy established dream castles. Then the assets turn out to be duds.

A. F. Rumph, field representative of the Davey Tree Expert Co., points out that such plantings frequently contain items of doubtful worth. Old shrubbery may be badly overgrown. Trees may be long neglected and seriously weakened by disease, decay and passing storms. Existing landscapes often include species no longer recommended because they are prone to disease and expensive to maintain. Off with the old and on with the new greenery can make large holes in an already strained family bankroll.

Instead of getting trouble-free and relatively work-free grounds the home owner inherits a Pandora - box of groundskeeper woes. Chances are the previous owner was happy to get out from under.

It's relatively simple to avoid the headache and purse-break. Consult the best qualified tree expert, landscape architect or nurseryman available before purchasing. His appraisal may have as much bearing on the price you should pay as the value of the land, neighborhood, house construction, improvements and other items of consideration.

EXTENSION NEWS AND VIEWS

Cuttings Yield Winter Blooms

By AUDREY DAWSON

I've had a number of calls this week about the strawberry barrel. We, in the Agricultural Extension, recommend it only as an interesting novelty for the gardener. We have the instructions for making one and you may get a copy by calling our office FA 3-2551. The barrel should be about a 55 gallon iron bound wooden barrel. The varieties of strawberries recommended to use in the barrel are Konvoy, to Marion Bell, Klonmore or the Progressive Everbearing. Now is the time to order strawberries if you are going to plant them this year.

GARDENING

There are many ways in which you may have winter blooms in your home. One of the quickest ways is using cuttings. Look over your flowers as geraniums, coleus, lantana, verbena or begonias that are growing in your yard. Select new growth but be sure branches or stalks are stiff enough to snap back when bent sharply. Use a sharp knife and cut off just below a leaf joint. Don't use your shears for this job as the shears will crush the plant tissue. Trim the tops back and make each cutting about 3 to 4 inches long. Let them wilt slightly then dust with a rooting hormone. Place in container or pot filled with half sand and half peatmoss.

Bury the pots up to the rims in a partly shaded spot outdoors and cover with inverted pot or plastic and keep moist. In a few weeks you'll find most of the cuttings have rooted and you can move into individual pots of regular potting soil and by mid winter your house will be bright with blooms.

JUST TALKING

I saw a good definition of glamour in some of my reading a few days ago that interested me so — I'll pass it on to you. Lilly Dache, one of the great leaders of the fashion world today gave this definition:

G — Good grooming
L — Love
A — Ambition
M — Making the most of yourself
O — Originality
U — Understanding
R — Realism

HINTS

Save your worn out nylon hosiery to stuff the cuddle toys you plan to make for Christmas. Clipped into one inch pieces, the stockings make a light, soft stuffing that is washable and dries quickly.

When removing spots from dark garments, apply the cleaning fluid or tepid soap mixture with a piece of old nylon stocking. It is excellent for this purpose as it leaves no lint.

Fold pillow slips together in pairs when you iron them. You won't have to search for matching ones when changing your bed linens.

Wash your nylon underclothes with just the white laundry as even washing them with a pink slip — it will pick up the dye from that slip. Nylon can take hot water just like your white cottons.

EXHIBITS

Two of our Home Demonstration club women entered a clothing exhibit at the State Fair in Shreveport, which opened yesterday. Mrs. Luttrell won the sweepstake prize in this division at the parish fair with 11 blue ribbons, 5 red and 2 whites. Mrs. Luttrell was one of the top winners at the parish fair. She received over fifty dollars in cash award.

Mrs. Cleburne White, of the Cadeville Club, entered a tailored dress, a house dress, church dress and a coat in the state exhibit.

The 4-H members from the parish have an exhibit of clothing and food preservation at the state fair. If you have the time, be sure to go in the Agriculture Exhibit Building and look for Ouachita's exhibits.

A THOUGHT

Wanting to spend a quiet evening at home — isn't a sign you're old and ready to be turned out to pasture. It may mean you're already living in clover.

Leaf Burning Smoke Signals Note Of Alarm

The skies of almost every home community will be black with distressing smoke signals during the weeks ahead. These signals are by - products of the leaf burning season and horticultural authorities are upset because it hinders rather than helps the landscaping.

Tree men in particular are concerned because leaves have special virtues as vegetable matter so important as compost, according to O. S. Simpkins, field representative of the Davey Tree Expert Co. They return trace elements, such as iron and magnesium, to the soil — too often depleted of these nutrients.

The leaf - burning practice usually is initiated by the home owner who feels justifiably or not he has no facilities for composting tree leaves. Actually, he has the means at hand for painlessly converting leaves into material that will benefit both trees and lawns.

Leaves can be ground or shredded right on the lawn by a rotary mower. Action is the same as in cutting grass. Shredded leaf particles will work their way down around the grass roots and eventually decay. There is only one precaution. Make sure the leaves are comparatively dry. This can be done by first scattering the leaves over the lawn for even distribution and better drying. Too much of this do - it - yourself compost over any one area may prove harmful by choking the grass.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Clubs To Meet At Winnsboro

By MARY M. JARDINE

One of the highlights of the garden clubs season is the coming annual meeting of the Federated Garden Clubs of the Fifth District of Louisiana. The meeting will be held in Winnsboro on Thursday, November 6, 1958 at the Winnsboro Court House.

Mrs. J. W. Huckabay of Tallulah, Fifth District director, has planned a most interesting day. Registration begins at 9:00 a.m. followed by the business meeting and election of officers. Luncheon at noon. Mrs. Roy Davis, Shreveport, will do a flower arrangement demonstration at 1:00 p.m. Mrs. Davis is a very talented designer of floral arrangements and has lectured all over Louisiana, Texas and Alabama and Mississippi.

She is an Accredited Flower Show Judge and is currently serving as Director of the Fourth District of Louisiana. Be sure to send your registration to Mrs. Roy Taylor, Winnsboro by October 31, 1958. This is an event you all will want to attend.

BERRIED SHRUBS

Our display at the Garden Center this week featured the use of berried shrubs in arrangements. As a follow through to our program last week, gardeners are urged to plant berried shrubs as an invitation to the wild song birds.

Mrs. Max Kulcke designed a most colorful arrangement in orange and brown tones. A leaf shaped brown container was placed on a polished palette base of mahogany. A graceful triangular design was effected with a bold placement of the brilliant orange love - apples (solanum) in a vertical position. This line was strengthened with orange pyracantha berries. Two graceful curved sprays of pyracantha formed the right angle of the triangle. The line was further emphasized with low placements of glossy Buford holly foliage and a spray of green holly berries following the right hand placement. A heavy cluster of pyracantha berries in brilliant orange formed the center of interest. Very colorful. Gladys designed this to be used on a mahogany desk in a wood panelled room.

The bright violet berries of French Mulberry (Callicarpa americana) were featured in the next design. A background of soft pink was the perfect setting for this arrangement. I selected a redbud colored bowl low and square in shape. The needle point holder was placed in one corner so that the triangular design would fan out over one corner of the container. The design was very simple. Three triangular placements of the berried branches of the mulberry. These lines were strengthened by shorter placements of the same berries. Fatshedera foliage was placed low unifying the design and the bowl. The lovely French Mulberry is a colorful note for gardens. This is one of our native woodland plants. If you dig in the woods for one I would suggest selecting a fairly small plant. They grow fast.

FEATHERS

Red - birds made of real feathers (very realistic) were the highlight of a composition using a gray weathered log. A ligustrum "tree" appeared to be growing behind the old log. Spanish moss was draped over a curve of the wood and a cluster of ligustrum berries growing through. The two cardinals, one with his wings spread for flight, contemplated the feast of berries growing before them. The composition was placed on a piece of gray, weathered board and staged against a gray background.

Our display of bird houses and feeders created much interest. In addition to the wide variety available at local shops many can be made at home by the do-it-yourself fans. On display this week was a most attractive blue-bird house made by Barney Lipscomb.

This was the official size and painted in brown overlaid with black to create a rustic finish. Barney selected one-half inch marine plywood for his material. The top of the peaked roof is hinged so that the rest can be cleaned, after Mr. and Mrs. Bluebird have raised their family and moved away.

I did not know that different birds liked different size houses until I started studying them. The blue - bird likes his house about five feet from the ground. Approximately fence post height. If you live at the edge of town or in the country by all means have some blue-bird houses available.

BIRD FEEDERS

A most attractive bird feeder was made by Mr. L. M. McBryde. Made of pine it was about 16 inches long and 9½ inches high with a peaked roof, also hinged for easy filling. Inside the "house" was a glass trough to hold the feed. The birds just love this one, as the roof keeps the grain dry and they can feed and visit out of the weather.

Be sure to turn in to Open House next Wednesday at 12:15. Jo Evans will talk to us on Bulbs for Louisiana gardens.

We are most fortunate in securing a copy of Elizabeth Lawrence's book "A Southern Garden" for our garden center library. This book is now out of print. Also we have Miss Lawrence's latest book, "The Little Bulbs." Be sure to stop by and look them over.

THE SOUTHERN GARDENER

Tractor Best For Subsoiling

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The sunshiny days from now till Christmas are the best time of the year for gardening activities in the south. Such good weather and cool days give everyone a yen to dig if they are ever going to have such a yen!

Deep digging is the very best preparation we southerners can make against the several different droughts we are sure to have though we never do know exactly when they will come between April and November. We have mentioned several times in the column that a tractor with what is called a sub - soiler will do more deep digging for you than you can get done in any other way. Where you can get in to use it, a subsoiler will do deep soil preparation better and at one third the cost of having it done by hand.

SUBSOIL

New areas where you are going to plant shrubs, perennials bulbs or grass should be subsoiled as deeply as you can go. Rocks and roots will be brought to the surface, and the deep stirring of the soil will allow the moisture to rise quickly during dry times. After the sub - soiling has been done, some kind of humus (soaked peat moss, thoroughly rotten saw dust, rotten leaves, compost or any other decayed vegetable matter) should be spread over the area from four to 10 inches deep. Then the same tractor that has done the sub-soiling can first turn the humus under and then mix it with the soil. These two operations are more thorough after subsoiling.

Most of our soils are deficient in phosphorous and will benefit from five pounds of bone meal to the 100 square feet.

From three to five pounds of a complete fertilizer should be scattered over each 100 square feet, also. Some people like to turn their fertilizer under and some have it harrowed into the top five or six inches with a disc harrow. Where it is possible to get coarse — not fine — sand, heavy clay soils can be kept open and made easy to work in by discing in four inches of coarse sand in addition to the humus. In flower beds that are likely to be permanent, it is a joy to have this perfect soil where you may dig and plant flowers for the rest of your life. Even when it is raining, you can work in such dirt!

PREPARATION

If you have been struggling along, trying to grow plants in soil that has never been really prepared, you will be surprised that gardening can become a joy in soil that is "right." Keep a mulch over well prepared soil, and your watering is cut down to a fourth. Only in real droughts do you have to water. When you do water, the results are very surprising.

Ike Designates Farm - City Week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower Friday designated the week beginning Nov. 21 as National Farm-City Week.

In a formal proclamation, the President said "continued mutual understanding among those who produce this bountiful supply of farm products, those who process these products, and those who consume them" is an important part of American life.

ANCIENT POTTERY FOUND

CHIBA, Japan (UPI)—Japanese archeologists said Friday that eight ancient eathern jars [illegible]ered in a Chiba schoolyard might be the oldest in the world. Scholars of Tokyo and Meiji universities said the jars might be more than 10,000 years old, or at least 3,000 years older than the Egyptian find considered to be the most ancient earthenware discovered so far. The scholars planned chemical tests to confirm their estimates.

The bold bright yellow flowers of the candle tree were placed in a triangle pattern. Foliage of eleagnus, camellia seed pods and the berries of the pyracanthea was just the right texture and color for this distinctive design.

The president, Mrs. W. G. Haynes, called the meeting to order and welcomed our guest, Mrs. A. Dickerson.

The Tallulah Book Club Holds Meeting

The October meeting of the Tallulah Book Club was held at the Book Club building with Miss Clara Mize presiding in the absence of the president, Mrs. A. L. Sevier. Bouquets of Guernsey lilies decorated the hall and the president's table held an arrangement of blossoms of the candletree, caladium leaves and a bloom of the banana tree.

Mrs. E. B. Schicker, as program leader on "The Louisiana Library System" spoke briefly on the Madison Parish library and introduced Mrs. W. C. Starrett of the local library staff who gave an interesting talk on new books available in our library.

PIANO SOLO

Glenna Sevier, rendered a piano solo, "Fur Elise" by Beethoven, and the program was concluded with an address by Miss Elizabeth Cammack of Lake Providence. She gave a sketch of the development of the Louisiana Library System, the advantages of bookmobiles in library service and the need for more trained librarians.

A soci ' hour followed when the hostesses, Mrs. J. E. Neill, Mrs. Albert Sevier, Mrs. Richard Almond and Mrs. Erle Read served pie and coffee.

Divers Find New World Of Beauty Under Water

Coral Reefs, Caverns Are Ports Of Call

By BOB EWING

The advent of the SCUBA (self-contained - underwater - breathing-apparatus) has made it possible for anyone in fair health, free of heart trouble, to explore safely the wonders of the world beneath the surface of the sea.

Good SCUBA consists of a fully automatic two - stage demand type regulator that couples with a tank designed to hold compressed - air. The regulator is designed to give air from the tank to the individual easily in any position (upside-down, etc.) at any depth to which man may safely descend and to fully equalize the pressure within the diver to the surrounding pressure at all times irrespective of the depth.

Because of this, the diver has no constant ear - pains — as he descends and his ears begin to hurt, he merely has to swallow to "clear his ears" which is in reality equalizing the pressure in the eustachian tubes in his ears to the outer pressure. He then has an equal amount of pressure pushing out on his ear-drums as there is pushing in and this, of course relieves all pain in the ears.

A single - tank lung will hold about 70 cubic feet of air at 2700 pounds pressure per square inch which will give the diver about an hour's supply of air near the surface but only about fifteen minutes of air at a much greater depth, say 150 feet. The tank has a foolproof air reserve that warns the diver when he is running out of air by becoming hard to breath. The diver then pulls the reserve lever which releases another 500 pounds pressure per square inch of air which is equivalent to approximately 5 minutes of breathing time and is plenty of time to surface from a dive as deep as 250 feet.

REGULATOR

Should any part of the regulator fail to function properly, it is constructed to give a constant free-flow of air rather than fail to operate altogether. This is true of all two - stage regulators but if anything goes wrong with a one-stage regulator, it is likely to produce a negative action which could result in serious trouble. Although other units have had a few unfortunate victims over the past few years, on the greater numbers of diving accidents are caused by unfamiliarity with the use of equipment, not respecting the water (it only takes an inch of water to drown in), and plain carelessness.

The diver must use flippers to propel himself for without them, he is like a bird attempting to fly without wings. A mask enables the diver to see in clear water as well as on the surface and is another necessity in the diver's gear with the SCUBA on, it is possible to clear any water out of the mask that might get in by a simple procedure.

The mask covers only the eyes and nose. A neoprene rubber hose fits in the mouth that is attached to the SCUBA regulator to supply air to the diver. The last necessity is a weight belt. The weight belt is the diver's provision for perfect balance in the water. This usually takes from 2 to 8 pounds of weight depending on the build of the individual and the type of water (salt-water is more bouyant than fresh - water). Once the diver has determined the correct amount of weight to use, he will find that he can hang suspended in the water with no gravity pulling him down and no bouyancy pushing him up — it is a wonderful sensation to move unhampered in any direction with an almost effortless kick of the flippers.

FIRST DIVE

Just a short six years ago, I donned mask, flippers and a SCUBA for the first time and slipped into a crystal - clear fresh water spring in northern Florida along with a friend of mine who had also just purchased some new diving gear. Cousteau (the inventor of the SCUBA) described his first dive as the most exhilarating experience he had ever known and further said that it cured him of a twenty year dream of being able to fly through the air like a bird — I can say that he did not exaggerate in the least. Since then, I have been diving all through the Bahama Islands in the West Indies, in all of the major fresh water springs throughout Florida, all along the cost of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Florida, and I have never ceased to be amazed at the beauty and wonders of the underwater worlds.

BAHAMIAN VOYAGE

Following is an article that I wrote for the Skin Diver Magazine in September of 1957 about a five - week diving and underwater photography expedition that I went on in the West Indies in the summer of 1956 entitled "Bahamian Voyage":

"Last year, I talked on a long distance telephone call to Jordan Klein of Underwater Sports, Inc., in Miami, Florida from my home in Monroe, Louisiana. We were discussing a special underwater camera case with twin flash units for my 33mm Nikon. During the conversation he mentioned a month - long expedition to the British West Indies that he was planning to make and asked me if I wanted to come along to work on some underwater photography with him. Well, that took care of that — I arrived in Miami about two months later to help get the eighty - foot diver - rigged cruiser, the "Mako," ready for its voyage through the outer Bahama Islands and coral reefs.

During the past few years, I had done quite a bit of underwater photography off the Louisiana coast while diving at the oil rigs there. I had also taken pictures in several of the inland fresh-water springs throughout Florida and in the waters around the Florida Keys but had never satisfied my desire to work with my camera around good virgin coral reef.

Preparing the boat to be ready on time was a hectic job. A new ship-to-shore telephone, fathometer, and other electrical equipment had to be installed plus our diving gear, fuel, water, extra batteries, and food for the deep freeze.

GROUP

Frank Satenstein (Jackie Gleason's director) and Paul Heller from New York City, Pat Boatright, Joe Thomas (the fellow attacked by a barracuda two years ago while diving off the Miami coast — he received a fractured rib and lacerations requiring 23 stitches), Jordan Klein from Miami, and myself comprised the party for the undersea adventure.

Preparations completed, the 'Mako" churned out of the Miami port on a hot summer day headed for Bimini, fifty miles east of Miami. We arrived there at dusk that evening, went ashore and ate dinner at a small restaurant where we inquired about a cook or steward to go with us for the duration of the trip. Fortune was with us as we were able to hire a good cook there on the island.

We dived a little the next day around a shallow water wreck a few miles from Bimini and then moved on to the town of Spanish Wells, Eluthera Island where we hired a guide to take us safely through the islands without ending up on top of a reef. He really knew the islands well and I doubt if the "Mako" could have made it without him. There's a lot of reef out there and many boats have realized it too late — those are the ones we search for and explore today.

The reefs around Eluthera Island are some of the most beautiful I have ever seen. The next morning when we left Spanish Wells to begin the day's diving there was no wind whatsoever. The diving conditions were perfect and the water fantastically clear. The "Mako" dropped anchor in 60 feet of water. I grabbed my camera, flashbulbs, and lung then slipped beneath the surface of the crystalline sea.

As I neared the bottom, the reefs were like skyscrapers towering above me, growing to within several feet of the surface. The ocean floor was teeming with fish of every size, shape, and kind. The colorful marine tropicals greeted me along with the larger species of fish. I started taking color slides as fast as I could focus and all was fine until I got back to the "Mako." I hadn't tightened a screw in the bottom of my camera case and it was full of salt water. I immediately put the camera in fresh water and then dried it and worked on it. By the time I got to sleep that night, I thought I had saved it. The next morning, however, I was a sad photographer as all the parts were frozen. For the next week, my photography was confined to the surface using my Leica. I had another camera flown to one of the islands from Miami. When we arrived there several days later and picked it up, I was well again.

I had a good time during the days I wasn't taking any underwater pictures. Pat Boatright and I landed a 78 pound record grey snapper (he didn't like being speared and knocked my mask and mouthpiece off in ninety feet of water) near Rocky Point, Abaco Island.

SHARK SCARE

The very next day, Satenstein, Boatright, and I were diving quite a distance from the boat with out double - tank lungs when we ran into a seven - foot "fish" shark (so called because they have taken fish from a few divers throughout the neighboring waters . . . the actual species is unknown to me but they are considered as very dangerous sharks to divers in the West Indies . . . they resemble the black - tip shark). I first saw it rush out from under a ledge along a beautiful strip of reef in about thirty feet of water. I motioned to my two companions but they didn't understand me until they looked up and saw it coming straight at us at a tremendous speed.

Our eyes must have gotten as big as our masks as it rushed to within five feet of us. Suddenly, it veered off and disappeared into the blue. A moment later, it reappeared coming straight at us from a different direction. By this time, we were back-to-back in a circle sort of like a wagon train preparing to ward off an Indian attack. I got in a coral "foxhole" wondering what the devil was wrong with the shark.

It made several more runs toward us and then disappeared again. We waited for it to come back for a few minutes and when it didn't show up, we nodded silent agreement to leave the area. Pat then remembered something he had left at the edge of the reef — a 50 pound grouper on a spear. I suppose that may have accounted for the shark's excitement.

Boatright picked up his grouper and about that time we saw a tail protruding from under a ledge. Our acquaintance was still with us. I was ready to leave it in peace but I was voted down. Boatright took the first honors with speargun followed by Satenstein. To our surprise, it merely wedged itself further under the ledge rather than rushing out as we had expected. After about an hour and a half, it began to weaken and a short time later the shark was high and dry after being hoisted up onto the Mako's deck with half a dozen spears protruding from its once streamlined body.

The only other shark killed on the trip was a ten - foot sand shark. I had my new camera by then and photographed the undersea battle. The credit for this shark goes to Satenstein and Boatright. They put the large shark out of commission in a very short time.

SHIP WRECK

Several days later, we dived around a ship wreck farther on down the coast line of Abaco in 85 to 100 feet of water. As soon as we anchored, we were over the side and into the water. Hordes of fish greeted us as we descended toward the hull of the wreck. It was the remains of an old freighter and appeared to be in fairly good condition. We went to work exploring and photographing the wreck and its inhabitants. We ended the day's diving by collecting some of the spiny - lobster lurking around the torn hull for our dinner that evening.

After dinner, we decided to leave for Munjack Reef near Green Turtle Cay. We heard it was one of the most unusual strips of reef in the Bahamas — and that it was, being about two miles long and two hundred yards wide. It broke the surface and dropped straight off on either side to depths of over a hundred feet deep. Beautiful staghorn coral covered much of the seascape here and to add to the scenery were huge silver tarpon and jewfish. Tremendous caves ran through the reef and thousands of transparent pilchers or glass minnows gave me the impression of huge sparkling glass chandeliers suspended in midair in the room of an old mansion. The sea seems almost a fantasy rather than a reality when one witnesses such picturesque scenes as this.

The days passed all too rapidly and almost before I realized it, we were on the last leg of the journey. Only four days of diving remained when we arrived at our final pre - planned diving destination near Grand Bahama Island. The sea life seemed to be exceptional here. We dived at a ship wreck where we saw everything from sharks and schools of extra - large barracuda to a six-foot wide sting-ray and two green sea turtles that we caught, the largest one weighing over 400 pounds.

We left Grand Bahama the next afternoon. We took our turns at the helm and sailed through a beautiful moonlit night and on into the next day's sunlight across the Gulf Stream arriving in Miami and terminating a wonderful trip about noon that day."

LOUISIANA DIVING

You don't have to go all the way to the Bahamas to enjoy diving at its best — just hop in your car and head south to the coast of our own state of Louisiana. The off-shore oil rigs have an abundance of big game fish for the diver that is comparable to the very best places known to man. The bottom of the oil rigs is the dwelling place of the enormous jewfish which sometime exceed a thousand pounds. When you hit one of those big babies with a spear and try to hold on, it's like trying to hold on to a locomotive. I have seen up to thirty jewfish under one oil rig and at the same time felt as though I was in a herd of elephants.

The rigs all have an abundance of amberjack, jack crevalle, sheepshead, spadefish, red-snapper, grouper, and some of the rigs farther out have an abundance of large barracuda.

The waters there do not have the beautiful scenery that coral reef offers but more big fish won't be found anywhere.

Ocean diving offers the greatest variety of thrills because of the abundance of life there. Contrary to popular belief, sharks and barracuda are not nearly so dangerous as some old tales of the sea would lead you to believe. Sometimes a shark or barracuda will make a pass at an object on the surface of the water but rarely, if ever, will they attack beneath the surface. The chances of being hit by lightning are far greater although the killer whale and sharks in very deep water (several thousand feet deep) are considered very dangerous because of the wild depths in which they live. The giant octopus may exist, but not in the depths accessible to man in the SCUBA and the diving record is 475 feet deep with a lung. Actually, the biggest hazard in diving in the ocean in clear water is getting cut on coral reef.

CAUTION

There are as many if not more diving enthusiasts in the United States today as there are water-skiers. This rapid development of the sport has occurred for the most part in the last four years and today there are far too many teenagers jumping in the water without proper instruction. It is easy to panic in water when you don't know what to do in a tight spot and these situations will occur once in awhile, but even more so if you don't know what you're doing in the first place. Diving in the crystal - clear fresh water springs that dot the state of Florida bears this out. There are many beautiful underwater caves in these springs that go to almost bottomless depths and they are quite intriguing to explore, but this is a dangerous sport without the proper precautions such as taking underwater flashlights, safety lines, and above all, experienced divers. There have been 4 or 5 deaths due to drowning this past summer in Florida springs caused by inexperience or carelessness. Two 17 - year - old boys were drowned in one spring because they entered a cave and could not find their way out in time when they began to run low on air. A third youth with them barely got to the surface in time. If these boys had tied a rope or cord to the entrance of the cave, they would probably be alive today. Another spring drowning occurred during the late summer in the very spring that one of these pictures was taken in. An Air Force sergeant from Eglin Air Force Base was deep in the caves of Morrison Springs in Northwest Florida when his underwater flashlight went out and he got separated from his diving companion. Divers recovered his body in 280 feet of water about two weeks later. A friend of mine and I were the very first to explore the depths of this particular spring back in 1953 and I know that this was a silly sacrifice of human life.

FUN

Diving is as much fun and just as safe as any of our sports if caution and care prevail over carelessness. It has opened up a whole new beautiful world for man to enjoy to the fullest.

SPECIAL WEEK SPOTLIGHTS ACTIVITY

Patriotic Education Work Observed In Classes Here

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

Time: 3 p.m. Place: Neville High School. Sound: The rush of students through the halls . . . the warning ring of the school buzzer, sounded twice . . . then complete silence.

The first notes of "Retreat" are sounded by the school bugler, as a color guard composed of four students lowers the Stars and Stripes.

Each person in the school or on the campus stands facing the flag, in reverent silence.

The brief ceremony ends — and the halls immediately are filled with teenage Americans, heading in all directions.

Begun during World War II, the ceremony of raising the flag at 8:20 a.m. each school day, and lowering it just before classes are over for the day is a normal occurance to the students.

"But this ceremony, observed day in and day out, can't help but instill reverence for the flag and the nation," pointed out one teacher.

EXAMPLE

It's also one forceful example of patriotic education in action.

Starting today, and continuing through Saturday, Oct. 25, "Patriotic Education Week" will be observed throughout the United States.

Mayor W. L. (Jack) Howard proclaimed the week for special observance in Monroe, and stated:

"Patriotic Education is sponsored by the Society of the Children of the American Revolution, an organization which for a number of years has been interested in the dissemination of patriotic, historical and educational material pertaining to the founding and growth of our glorious nation."

Mrs. Sherod W. McLean of Monroe, senior state president of the Louisiana Society of the Children of the American Revolution views the week as a time to stress the meaning of this nation's history.

"Learning to appreciate what our forefathers fought for is the best inspiration for upholding these ideals. It's the only way to fight communism in the United States, and to make people better Americans . . . by learning what principles this country was founded on," she stated.

Do today's students know the history of the United States?

In Louisiana they do.

American history is a required subject for each high school student in the state. They also study civics, and world history . . . spending one full school year on each of the three subjects.

At Neville, typical of many American high schools, "most of the students are aware of a need for American history. They see the social need for it — as citizens, they want to know about their country, and what its past has been," pointed out Leon Marx, history instructor.

"These students, in their late adolescence, have an acute social awareness, and if they have the opportunity and are not thwarted, they carry on stimulating discussions of current events, keeping in mind the historical background for today's situations," he stated.

AGREE

Instructors agree that students can understand and interpret present-day events by tracing back into American history for the cause or for similar situations.

But is history difficult, compared to other subjects?

"I don't think it's any more difficult . . . but with modern day education, students are not accustomed to reading as much as they did in the past; and in history, you need to read quite a bit," Marx commented.

Students themselves tell you that they realize they will soon be voters — and they hope to vote intelligently. They believe that a thorough knowledge of American History and Civics will help them.

At Neville, the students start the fall term by reading pre-American history . . . the factors in Europe which resulted in exploration and colonization of the United States.

During the first six weeks of school, they study the material leading up to the Revolution.

1776 . . . the Revolution . . . the founding of the government . . . the Constitution, how it was written, what it explains . . . and the period of time up through the administration of President Adams make up the second six weeks.

Students go over the events leading up to the Civil War, to conclude the fall semester, then during the second semester they study the history up to the present time. The subject is also taught with an emphasis on term paper writing, which students will face in college.

"We use current events to stimulate interest during the class. Anytime you can tie the past to the present, it makes the entire thing more meaningful . . . history shows the basis for or simularity to startling current events and world tensions," history educators explain.

"You can't just run through the dry facts of history, though, you have got to make it come to life for the students," Marx added.

The daily flag ceremony, one of the most patriotic actions which any school can carry out, began at Neville High in 1932. During the second World War, 1941-45, President Franklin D. Roosevelt asked all the people of the country to observe one minute of silent prayer for the United States each day.

Paul J. Neal, at that time Neville principal, thought that the best way to carry this out would be to incorporate the minute of silence with the flag raising and lowering.

CONTINUES

The entire ceremony continues today . . . absolute silence falls upon the school when the first note of the bugle sounds.

"It's the only way possible to stop everyone from moving, at the same time, in the school," instructors agree.

Another example of good citizenship in action occurs at each school assembly, when all the students pledge allegiance to the flag.

In their civics classes, they learn the different types of government, the services available through the community and the Constitution, and just what citizenship means.

Condition Of Wreck Victim Still Critical

Because a mule wandered onto the highway, pretty 13-year-old Rhonda Gail Sims, who has battled the effect of a polio attack since she was a baby, lies unconscious, in critical condition after she suffered severe head injuries in a wreck late Friday.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Z. Sims of Route 1, Calhoun received a fractured skull and a brain concussion in the mishap.

She had recently undergone the second of two operations to make it possible for her to walk normally on the polio - afflicted leg.

Rhonda was the only person who received major injuries in the accident. Eight other persons, including her brother, James Dale Sims, 22, driver, escaped harm although a 15 - year - old girl suffered minor injuries.

A loose mule caused the wreck, authorities said.

State troopers who investigated said that the mule wandered onto U. S. highway 80, about 8 miles west of Monroe, and was directly in the path of the oncoming car.

The driver saw the animal seconds before he struck it. The mule was flung back, around, the car, careened through the right rear window and crashed into Rhonda. It was killed instantly.

Dr. L. Boykin Is Speaker At Grambling

GRAMBLING (Special) — In a keynote address at the eighth annual Blalock Education Day here yesterday, Dr. L. L. Boykin, professor of education at Florida A. and M. College, Tallahassee, declared that the classroom teacher can solve many current school problems.

Speaking before the largest group ever to attend the confab, Boykin said teachers can give new hope and status to the cause of education in America.

Morelle Emmons, superintendent of schools in Lincoln parish, noted that work and understanding are essential to problem solving.

Grambling College President R. W. E. Jones urged teachers to apply information gained from the conference in attempting to upgrade the quality of teaching.

A number of other educational leaders appeared on the program also, and the Grambling High School Choir provided a musical interlude.

James Folsom To Cruise River

Folsom made the trip with other Alabama officials and his friends. He said the purpose of the trip was to point out Alabama's interest for inland waterways development.

"We in Alabama have always looked to Memphis as the commercial capital of the South, due to its great inland waterway."

The cruise will take the party to Cairo, Ill., via the Mississippi, and back to Alabama on the Tennessee via Florence and Decatur. The yacht is expected to reach Decatur about noon Tuesday.

Urges Careful Vote Decision

JACKSON (UPI) — The Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation called on cotton farmers Saturday to weigh carefully their decision to vote for or against an optional plan of the 1958 farm bill giving them a choice in price supports and acreage for next year.

The federation noted less than 20 per cent of farmers affected in such referendums have voted in the past. It said two thirds of the farmers who do vote must favor the plan for it to be put into effect.

NE Instructor Passes Exams

A Northeast instructor in accounting, Will T. Smith, has recently passed the examination for certified public accountant as a Texas candidate and has applied for a reciprocal certificate in Louisiana. Smith is a graduate of Louisiana Tech with a B. S. degree in business administration and of the University of Denver with a master of business administration and a major in accounting.

Candidates for the CPA must pass a two - and - one - half day examination in accounting practice, auditing, commercial law and theory. The examination is given by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants. Walter Frank Jr., assistant professor of accounting at Northeast, and Diehlmann C. Bernhardt part-time instructor in accounting, also are CPA's.

Atom Device Is Exploded

A device packing a bit less power than 1,000 tons of TNT was detonated at dawn from a 75-foot wooden tower. It was the ninth test in the current series.

The AEC schedule puts two shots on the program for Sunday, but a spokesman said one would probably be postponed. Both shots are to be fired from balloons 500 feet up.

Truman Says Nixon Would Lose Race

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Truman Saturday indirectly called Vice President Richard M. Nixon a character assassin and said Nixon would be "the easiest to beat" of prospective Republican presidential candidates in 1960.

He also had some harsh words for Sens. Harry F. Byrd (Va.) and James O. Eastland (Miss.), members of his own Democratic Party, and for rebellious southern Democrats who have hinted they might form a third party based on "white supremacy."

In a typical "give-em-hell news conference, Truman predicted the South "won't have a third party" in the 1960 presidential race. He said he thought rebellious southerners would stick with the national Democratic Party because they would not want to give up the seniority that entitles them to the chairmanships of powerful congressional committees.

"It might be better for the country if they did" give up such posts, he said.

Truman came to Washington Fri-day to speak and unveil portraits of Democratic presidents at the National Democratic Club. He also spoke at a Democratic fund-raising dinner at which Mrs. Truman and Mrs. Elanor Roosevelt were honor guests.

Saturday he lunched with members of his staff when he occupied the White House and attended a tea at the women's National Democratic Club. The tea also was in Mrs. Truman's honor and commemorates Democratic women's day.

In response to questions, Truman named Byrd and Eastland as among those he would like to see out of committee chairmanships. Byrd heads the powerful Senate Judiciary Committee.

But the ex-President specifically excluded Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), leader of the Senate's southern bloc and chairman of the Armed Services Committee. He said he considered Russell to be "one of the ablest men in the Senate."

As for Nixon, he made it clear he feels no more kindly toward the vice president than he ever did.

Recalling past political campaigns, the former President said: "I never did any character assassination in my life. It's the lowest form of politics."

Asked if he thought Nixon were engaging in "character assassination" in this year's congressional campaign, Truman said Nixon had achieved political prominence "in the first place by such tactics."

"I see by the Republican press that he's reformed," he added. "I don't believe he has. He called me a traitor and that's about as far as you can go. When he slanders a man, that's a compliment to him."

(Nixon has denied ever calling Truman a traitor.)

As for the 1960 presidential campaign, Truman said Nixon "is my candidate on the Republican ticket. I think he would be the easiest to beat."

U. S. Radar Picket Plane With 29 Aboard Crashes

11 Persons Are Feared Fatalities

ARGENTIA, Nfld. (UPI) —A U. S. Navy radar picket plane carrying fresh American personnel for duty in Newfoundland crashed into Placentia Sound just short of a runway Saturday while trying to make an instrument landing with 29 persons aboard.

Eleven persons were believed killed, but only one body had been recovered from the frigid North Atlantic waters.

Heavy rain and winds hampered search and rescue crews. A Navy spokesman said 12 hours after the crash that "it will be rough going from now on."

PICKET DUTY

The four-engine Super Constellation was carrying personnel from the Patuxent, Md., Naval Station to the U.S. base at Argentia for assignment on radar picket duty. It tried to make an instrument landing shortly after midnight, but for some unexplained reason came down short of the water-edged runway and plunged into the sound.

Base officials immediately ordered rescue craft into the darkened sound.

SUPPLEMENT

The plane is the mushroom-top type used by the Navy on radar barrier patrol flights between Argentia and the Azores. The powerful radar devices aboard are used to supplement the stationary radar stations in the Atlantic and on the U.S. and Canadian shores which serve as the nation's warning system against surprise enemy attack. The planes usually carry a large complement of personnel to operate the complex radar equipment.

Names of the missing and dead were withheld pending notification of kin.

RELIEVE JAIL CONGESTION

Several Parishes Use Penal Farms In Rehabilitation

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following dispatch is the first of a series of articles The Monroe Morning World will present showing the importance of parish penal farms in law enforcement work. Ouachita parish is badly in need of such an institution to eliminate the crowded conditions of our jails. Today's dispatch deals primarily with the parish penal farm at Lake Providence. Subsequent articles will outline operation of penal farms in Caddo, Webster and East Baton Rouge parishes as well as showing the need for one in Ouachita and how it can be obtained.)

By RECA JONES
State Editor

Want to work eight to nine hours a day in the great outdoors, eat three square meals a day, live in a cottage or barrack-type quarters and receive a possible furlough home for Christmas?

Sound like a good job?

It really isn't. It is penal farm life for some who have violated the law in a few of Louisiana's 64 parishes. But in comparison to what most parish prisoners face in Louisiana, it is a paradise.

There are four parish penal farms in Louisiana, including the East Carroll Parish Prison Farm near Lake Providence. The others are Webster Parish Penal farm near Minden, Caddo Parish Penal Farm near Shreveport and East Baton Rouge Penal Farm near Baton Rouge.

While scattered in different sections of the state, all parish penal farms have many things in common. East Carroll and Webster penal farms are self - supporting. Caddo expects to be next year.

PREFER

Prisoners prefer the open life to being cooped up in crowded, smelly, closed - in parish and city jails. It is easier for all concerned and cheaper.

Judge Frank Voelker, who has jurisdiction over the East Carroll Parish Farm, explained it thus: "Such a farm provides the court with a facility that permits incarceration for both misdemeanors and certain types of felonies. The sentences for misdemeanors ordinarily would have to be served in jail, mostly in idleness; whereas the sentences for felonies would have to be served in the penitentiary.

"Incarceration on the farm for a felony avoids the stigma attached to a term in the penitentiary as the prisoner at the farm is not considered 'a convict.' Consignment to the farm is within the discretion of the court when it is determined that such incarceration will be responsive to a program of rehabilitation. The discipline, while firm, is benign and personalized.

A further advantage is that, in most cases, adjustment to civil life is accomplished more readily due to the fact that this is a rural area largely composed of plantations and farms which are operated almost identically with the conduct of the prison farm. Consequently, upon release, these

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A record opening day crowd of more than 96,000 packed the Louisiana State Fair midway, Youth Center and exhibit buildings Saturday.

Joe T. Monsour, fair secretary-treasurer, said people were still pouring through the turnstiles at 9 p.m., with their cars backed up a mile and one-half along Highway 80 and other thoroughfares leading to the Fair Grounds.

If the ideal fall weather continues, Monsour said, this years attendance for the 9-day show will easily top last year's 522,640. The record total attendance was 563,039 in 1955.

LAWMAKERS

Some 40 state lawmakers attended during opening day, named Legislators' Day. The biggest attraction for the day was the Spectacular, a show of some 100 stars and a variety of other attractions in the Youth Center.

Other days will be dedicated to

MOTHER WEEPS FOR ONE SON — Thomas Edward Lee, 18, left, will get the maximum penalty for second degree murder—50 years to life. At right his brother, Richard Lee, a New York City policeman who provided the information that led to Thomas' arrest, comforts their weeping mother, Mrs. Gladys Lee, after Thomas pleaded guilty in mugging death of a 65-year-old-man. Thomas could have gotten the electric chair but prosecution agreed to plea of second degree murder, rather than first degree, provided the sentence was the maximum. (AP Wirephoto)

$5 MILLION BOND ISSUE

Civic Projects Subject Of Vote Set October 28

By DANNY BINGHAM
Staff Writer

(Today's is the first in a series of articles designed to provide for the public as much information as possible on details of the Public Works Improvements Program bond election set for Tuesday, October 28. These facts are taken from the reports of highly competent and unbiased engineering firms, and the articles bear the stamp of approval of the Citizens Committee, non-political, non-factional organization of local civic-minded residents.)

Monroe property owners go to the polls Tuesday, October 28 in a special election to decide if a bond issue shall be passed to provide funds for three major community needs - improvements to sanitary sewerage, drainage and street systems of the city.

These three projects are deemed of utmost urgency in a public works improvement program presented to the public by the Monroe Citizens Committee.

A special tax would make it possible to begin immediate improvements and taking the lead in the program is a group of men and women from all walks of community life who have formed the Citizens Committee to promote improvements to public works.

NON-POLITICAL

This committee, headed by Lee R. Vanderpool, Jr., is purely non-political and its membership is made up of all political factions in the community working together toward a common goal.

Its formation followed a series of discussions during which it was commonly agreed that the city of Monroe was in almost desperate need of certain improvements on the community level which effect the health and welfare of all the residents of the city.

During the process of charting a course, it was decided to concentrate on urgent needs and bal-

Death Claims Charlie Eichel Rites Pending

Charlie N. Eichel, 81-year-old owner of the M. Hirsh Dry Goods Co. in Monroe until his retirement, died last night in a local hospital following a brief illness.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete last night, but will be conducted at Mulhearn Funeral Home Chapel by Rabbi Jacob Lantz. Interment will be in Riverview Cemetery by Mulhearn, with Masonic rites at graveside.

A native of Offeweiler, France, Mr. Eichel came to this country as a child, and had lived in Monroe for more than 60 years.

He was a Mason, belonging to Graham Surgenor Lodge, Monroe, and was a charter member of the Little Rock, Ark., Shrine, having been a Shriner for more than 50 years. Mr. Eichel also held membership in the Lotus Club.

Surviving are one brother, Martin Eichel, Richmond, Va.; one sister, Mrs. Henri Blum, France; one nephew, Roger Blum, Birmingham, Ala., and three nieces, Mrs. James Hirsh, Birmingham; Mrs. Oscar Caen, France, and Mrs. Stewart Doernberg, Monroe.

'Big Wheel' In Ga. Bombings Is Arrested

ATLANTA (UPI) — Police arrested the so-called "central figure" in a synagogue dynamiting Saturday just as he was reported ready to flee town. But anonymous telephone threats indicated some conspirators were still at large.

Detectives B. Compton and R. W. Davidson seized Richard Bolling, 25, near his home in the southwest section at 1:10 a.m. EST. They said he went quitely with them to the county jail to be questioned first by sheriff's officers and later by the FBI.

Bolling, one of five men indicted for the Sunday bombing of the Jewish temple here on charges that could bring the death penalty, is the brother of one of those arrested earlier and indicted.

Called a "central figure" in the case, Richard Bolling was the only one not in custody when the indictments were returned Friday by a special grand jury. Police received a tip that he was preparing to leave town and intercepted him.

LITERATURE

In a car found at Bolling's home police discovered anti-Jewish literature, signed by a man who identified himself as national commander of the Knights of the White Camillia, an outgrowth of the Ku Klux Klan.

The two-page letter called the Jew "the sworn enemy of white Christian America . . . this is a life and death struggle which we must win legally if possible but violently if necessary."

Meanwhile, threatening and harassing telephone calls were made to at least two members of the

IN LITTLE ROCK

White School Hope Boosted

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Ouachita Baptist College announced Saturday that it will open school Monday in three of Little Rock's largest Baptist churches for white high school students.

The Little Rock Private School Corp. also will open school Monday in the former University of Arkansas Graduate School for white seniors only, with donated funds.

Ouachita College's classes will be for all three high school grades —10th, 11th and 12th. The Private School Corporation does not know when it can provide 10th and 11th grade classes.

The Baptist churches all have educational buildings and it was understood that the other eight Baptist churches in Little Rock have offered their educational buildings.

CRISIS

More than 3,000 high school students in Little Rock, including about 700 Negroes, haven't attended school this year because of the integration crisis. School was supposed to open for them Sept. 2.

"If we can do it, we will take care of every kid in the Little Rock school district," Dr. Ralph Phelps, president of Ouachita Baptist College, said. "We are school people and we ought to know something about running a school."

He said the limiting factor will be teachers and a call will be put out Sunday in all the 75 Baptist churches in Pulaski County for teachers.

He set up a tentative tuition schedule as follows: $20 for the first child in a family; $15 for the second; $10 for the third, and $5 each for any additional children.

The classes will start in the First Baptist Church, Second Baptist Church and Gaines Baptist Church.

The board of trustees of Ouachita Baptist Church said it will admit only whites "because the only basis on which a school can be set up now in Little Rock is on the basis of racial segregation."

The classes will be non-denominational at the start, but if it

Suicide Theory In Airport Bomb Blast Advanced

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The bomb that blasted Forrest Don McCuiston to death in Wichita's big air terminal Friday was hand detonated, police reported Saturday.

The bomb, hidden in a paper-wrapped package, exploded as the unemployed Tulsa, Okla., aircraft worker carried it along a passageway adjoining the terminal's lobby. About 50 persons in the building were shaken up but none injured. Damage to the building was extensive.

A Federal Bureau of Investigation explosives expert discovered that the homemade dynamite bomb had no timing device and had to be set off manually, Pond said.

Witnesses said McGuiston had the bomb package with him on a flight here from Kansas City. Still undetermined is whether he also carried it on a round trip that included stops at Las Vegas, Nev., Denver, Salt Lake City and Phoenix. He had just completed the last leg of the trip when he was blown to death.

Free World To Pay Its Final Tribute To Pope

Dignitaries from all over the world were here for the services. Among them is Secretary of State Dulles, who will represent President Eisenhower.

Eisenhower's other two representatives, Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, his former ambassador to Rome, and John A. McCone, chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, attended today's requiem mass in private capacities.

Before a majestic altar dominated by a replica of a cathedral chair, symbol of the papacy, the two followed the celebration of a pontifical requiem mass attended by 338 of the 54 living members of the College of Cardinals.

This was the penultimate tribute

All Aboard Red Plane Killed

LONDON (AP)—Radio Moscow Saturday night announced a Soviet twin-jet TU104 airliner crashed in Russia, killing all those aboard.

There was no immediate announcement of the number killed but the sleek jetliners can carry around 70 passengers.

The broadcast said the jet went down Friday on a regular Peiping-Moscow flight in the eastern Soviet area of Kanash.

The plane disintegrated on crashing, the broadcast said, killing all passengers and crew members.

Couple Marry As Robot Gives Statical Okay

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A starry - eyed young couple took their vows Saturday in a formal wedding that had the statistical blessings of UNIVAC, the robot calculator which arrived at the conclusion that they were "ideal mates."

Shirley Saunders and Robert Kardell, both 26, were joined in holy matrimony by Dr. Raymond I. Lindquist at the First Presbyterian Church in the culmination of a romance started by the unemotional calculator.

DATA

UNIVAC was fed statistical data on Miss Saunders, an advertising copy writer, and Kardell, a communications consultant, and found that their personalities, politics, religion, education and general outlook on life were in "perfect harmony." Neither had been married previously.

It all started as a stunt on Art Linkletter's NBC television show, "People Are Funny."

Linkletter followed through by acting as best man at the wedding.

The excited bride said before the ceremony, "We'll need more than UNIVAC to make a go of it. . .every young couple needs lots of luck."

Believes GOP Platform To Be Acceptable

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) —I. Lee Potter, chairman of the Virginia State Republican Central Committee, predicted here today that the 1960 GOP platform for the presidential campaign will be far more acceptable to the South than anything the Democrats offer.

Potter, who is special assistant to GOP National Chairman Meade Alcorn, declared also that the Republicans will carry at least as many and probably two or three more Southern states in 1960 than they did in 1956.

The federation elected its new slate of officers headed by Mrs. Pratt Williams Eisas of New Orleans as president for the next two years.

Potter told the Louisiana womens group he feels "there is no doubt there will be a third party in the picture because I am sure the people of the South will not be able to stomach the leadership

JES' Ramblin'

Trip

They're expected back in Monroe over the Missouri Pacific from Lake Charles and the Northeast - McNeese football game played down there last night. Time of train's arrival is set for 4:30 a. m. today and this is being written, many hours earlier, about Saturday noon. About 300 are making the trip. Of course it's a big thing for Northeast students, many of whom have never before ridden in a passenger train in this automotive age.

Shreveport

Saturday was a day when groups went in two directions with a vengeance. A large number went to Shreveport to attend the formal opening of the 53rd annual state fair. We are sure the crowd was swelled by hundreds. Then others went on the special train to Lake Charles to see the game with McNeese. Travel was surely in the air.

SNAKE CLANS ACTIVE

Crawling Creatures Haul Deadly Cargo

By AUSTIN ABRAMS
Staff Writer

What you don't know about snakes could prove fatal.

This is an opinion of biological authorities, written in studies, and doubtlessly proven every year.

Its people walk the woods and fields — probably all with a wariness for snakes — yet doubtfully few are aware of vital facts that could save their lives.

Authorities on snakes emphasize that to know a snake means safety.

Some snakes would invite pet lovers yet under their enticing hides flows liquid death.

Once you learn that the coral snake's head is black, that a narrow yellow ring cuts around its neck, that the rest of the body is black with wide red bands, and that the red bands each have narrow yellow rings at each edge, you're safe.

The rest is a matter of keeping your distance.

The slender-bodied coral snake is a natural trap for curious children and there have been numerous cases where an unsuspecting

Blaze Destroys Gin In District

Officials said the fire started while a bale of cotton was being ginned. The Winnsboro fire department answered the call and Fire Chief Allen Robinson said that after 2 hours of fighting the blaze, the department got it under control and prevented any spread to other structures.

The gin itself was destroyed, but the loss was partly covered by insurance, according to authorities. The only cotton lost was the one bale which was being ginned.

Extension is a community located 18 miles southwest of Winnsboro.

Clear And Mild Is Outlook Here

Clear skies and mild temperatures are predicted in the Twin Cities area today and tomorrow.

The mercury climbed to a high of 83 yesterday, following Friday's maximum of 80. The low yesterday was 58, compared with Friday's minimum of 63.

BUT SANITATION MAINTAINED

Slaughter Animals Not Inspected Here

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

Animals slaughtered for meat consumption in Ouachita Parish are not inspected for disease, but sanitary conditions are maintained in parish slaughter-houses, Dr. W. Carroll Summer, Health Unit director, stated yesterday.

"It takes money to inspect animals — we would have to hire a veterinarian for the work — and we don't have the funds to do it," Dr. Summer commented.

Both he and Ouachita Parish Police Jury President M. W. Montgomery were queried on whether animals slaughtered here are inspected, to see if they heve any disease which could be passed on to the human who eats the meat.

Montgomery said that he had never heard of any request for inspection, and added that since milk is inspected by the Health Unit; animals inspection might also come under its jurisdiction.

Dr. Summer explained that the first step in meat inspection would be a local ordinance.

"Funds to pay the veterinarian would also have to come from local sources," the Health Unit director added.

Right now, with the Police Jury $75,000 "in the red," and expecting to borrow an additional $25,000 before the year is over; there is little hope of any money to pay a veterinian's salary.

Ouachita parish is not alone in lacking meat inspection.

Dr. Summer said that "only child was bitten by what seemed a likely pet.

Case histories of coral snake victims are not uncommon, but are scattered. Few known deaths are recorded and most cases recovered with medical treatment.

The poison causes paralysis of the respiration system.

Biologists at Northeast Louisiana State College report that, although several coral snakes have been found in the Northeast Louisiana area this year, it is doubtful that there are any more around than in previous years.

They attributed the findings to late warm weather, hibernation seeking by the snakes, and woodland clearing disturbing them. Some snakes also have been reported around residential areas.

They gave the same reason for reports of rattlers, copperheads, and cottonmouths — the three pit vipers that move freely in this area.

OPINIONS

The rattler, most people have their opinions already formed on this fellow.

However biologists explain that the rattler isn't aggressive — yet is unpredictable.

There are reports of people stepping on a rattler and escaping a bite.

Others walk near one and barely escape death.

Two weeks ago, Johnny Lessing, West Monroe did just that.

Lessing said he saw the rattler while hunting, but just didn't move fast enough. He was hospitalized almost a week.

The copperhead or rattlesnake pilot, is a dry - land moccasin.

The background color is snuff brown, sometimes almost olive.

Across its back are diamond-shaped black bands.

Poison ejected by this snake can bring death but usually it does not, if treatment is given.

This snake is sometimes aggressive, strikes viciously, and is easily agitated.

The cottonmouth, copperhead, and rattler carry their markings of death well.

DISTINCTIVE

Each has a distinctive diamond-shaped head, and a sunken pit between the eyes. Thus they are called pit vipers.

This you should know, and your doctor must know for effective treatment of a bite.

Treatment for bites has been simplified by anti - snake bite shots.

In many cases it is a long way to a doctor.

The next best thing is good first aid.

Here's information that may save your life.

If bitten move as little as possible, preferably none at all.

A tourniquet between the bite and heart is a must.

Slashes, one - fourth-inch deep in X patterns, should be made across the fang incision.

Over the slashes apply suction, by mouth if no cups are available. Authorities say danger from mouth suction is small and if the poison is swallowed little harm will result if any.

If you can get to a doctor, it is vital that he know just what snake bit you. Know at least these four snakes.

Others of the many species that crawl the area will hardly bring death, although some can bring temporary illness.

PILLS VS. WOLVES

The method involves doping bait with large amounts of luminal, a barbiturate. Experiments so far have cost the lives of a number of ravens but had no appreciable effect on the wolves.

Animals Not Inspected Here

He hastened to point out that the Health Unit inspects and approves all slaughter houses in Ouachita parish.

"Even though the meat is not inspected, the animals are killed in slaughterhouses that are approved and sanitary. Even the plans for each slaughter house must be approved by the main office in New Orleans before they can start operation," he noted.

He indicated the importance of sanitary slaughter houses, showing how good meat could be contaminated in unsanitary surroundings.

"In the 'old days', animals were often slaughtered outdoors, under trees, and the meat was carried all around town in the back of an open truck—exposed to the air. That's when it was contaminated by dust in the air and humans," he mentioned.

Today, the slaughter houses have plenty of hot water, ways to sterilize knives and equipment, and the meat is transported in closed trucks, free from air.

"Cooking usually kills any disease in meat," Dr. Summer explained.

He mentioned salmonella, a disease of chickens, turkeys and all other fowl, and said that there are over 700 different types of it.

"Inspection doesn't show up salmonella — you would have to take a culture of each chicken, and then you'd find that just about 100 per cent of the chickens would be condemned," he said.

"Many people develop an immunity to it. Others are affected by it. The symptoms are nausea, vomiting, diahrrea and fever, lasting 3 to 4 days. That's why they call it the 3-4 day diahrrea," he continued.

Dr. Summer stressed that "if you cook the fowl well, and don't eat it rare, you'll probably kill the salmonella germs.

IMPORTANT

He mentioned trichinosis as the most important pork disease which would be checked by inspection.

"But state law now requires that all garbage fed to pigs be cooked. Cooking kills the trichinae in the garbage," he added.

"Inspection might spot undulant fever in beef. That can be contracted as easily by handling it as eating the meat. Any housewife handling beef with undulant fever could get it," Dr. Summer said.

"Food poisoning outbreaks often are traced to salmonella infections. It can be quite serious and occasionally fatal," he stated, and added that "mayonnaise is also a wonderful incubation medium for food poisoning. If someone who has an infection on the hands prepares something with mayonnaise in it, an outbreak of food poisoning could result."

"As I said though, animal inspection would require a veterinarian, and the Health Unit could not pay for one. The state cut off $270,000 which formerly went for x-ray buses. Now we cannot send out mobile units to take chest x-rays," Dr. Summer revealed.

"We're receiving the same operating budget we had last year—we needed more funds for this year though," he said, adding that the parish Health Unit is "just lucky to be getting tuberculosis drugs today. We haven't had any in two months, until this shipment arrived today."

The drug is used to cure tuberculosis, for any person who needs help in the 14 Northeast Louisiana parishes served by the Health Unit here.

When asked if the state legislature's economy drive had affected any other Health Unit services, Dr. Summer revealed that all "in-service" training meetings have been halted.

The meetings were held twice a month, for nurses, sanitarians, directors and clerks of Health services.

EDUCATIONAL

The sessions were educational and instructional. Public health problems were discussed.

The Health Unit needs a new building. Normally, 15 per cent of the cost would come from the state, 53 per cent from Hill-Burton federal funds, and 32 per cent from local funds.

A new building could be owned by Monroe, the parish, or both the parish and the Twin Cities.

"It would render more efficient service. Offices would be located more conveniently and we could do more in an allotted period of time" he stated.

Presently, the unit "does more work" for residents of Monroe and West Monroe than for residents of the parish, mainly because the city populations are greater.

The Health Unit's objective is to prevent disease.

A brief rundown on its work is as follows:

1. Give immunization shots.
2. Conduct clinics to prevent the complications of pregnancy.
3. Inspect restaurants, food manufacturing places, milk supplies and the handling of milk.
4. Take chest x-rays for tuberculosis and cancer of the lungs.
5. Treat venereal disease, to prevent its spread.
6. Collect birth and death certificates. The death certificates are analyzed and tabulated to determine the causes of death.

Baker University at Baldwin, Kan., received $100 from Abraham Lincoln to erect a building on the campus in 1864.

Several Parishes Use Penal Farms

persons readily adjust to civil life."

Judge Voelker further stated, "The availability of this particular type of penal facility is of the utmost assistance to the court because it permits the incarceration of younger offenders in a more wholesome environment, and, consequently, avoids the influences of the more seriously offending criminals, as well as the other unwholesome factors existing in a penitentiary."

SIMILAR

All of the prisons have about the same set - up. Persons sent to the farms are primarily first offenders sentenced for lesser offenses. All, with the exception of East Baton Rouge, have facilities for white and Negro men and Negro women. East Baton Rouge does not have any facilities for women.

Diversified farming is practiced.

As is the case on all the farms, very few prisoners attempt to escape.

"The prisoners beg to come to the farm. They adjust well. Our greatest number of returnees are alcoholics. With the exception of this category, it is seldom the prisoners return," said one superintendent.

Since the East Carroll Parish Farm is near the Monroe area, we can get a more detailed look at its operation first.

The state authorized the organization of prison districts in 1926. The East Carroll Parish Police Jury realized the benefits to be derived from the operation of a project of this type and so was born Prison District No. 1 of the Sixth Judicial District of Louisiana.

Money for the initial investment and other expenses, in the amount of $23,462.65, was advanced by the East Carroll Parish Police Jury. This sum has been repaid in full, and, today, the farm and equipment are worth more than $300,000. The farm has never cost the taxpayers one cent, having been self - sustaining from the beginning.

MODERN

The superintendent is the only guard. There are no barriers to a man's escape, but his own honor.

Most of the inmates of the prison farm receive better meals than they do at home. There is always a variety of fresh vegetables, raised on the farm, fresh meat, eggs and plenty of milk. The portions they receive are not limited. Extra dishes of each of the foods served are placed on the tables along with jugs of fresh milk.

The sanitary facilities of the kitchen and barracks are regularly inspected by the parish sanitarian and reports of his findings are made to the judge and the board of governors. Almost without fail, the report shows one hundred per cent compliance with the sanitary code of the health department.

The board meets at least once a month to go over the affairs of the prison district, advise with the Superintendent K. E. Mangum, and set up policies to govern its operation.

The work schedule of the farm inmates is comparable to that of any plantation in its area. They work about nine hours a day, with an hour off for lunch. The rules of the farm regarding visiting hours are very lenient. Each Christmas they are granted a vacation home.

The operation of such an institution as the prison farm serves a manyfold purpose, Judge Voelker stated.

"First, it permits the judge to remove prisoners from idleness in jail and place them in an environment with which they are familiar. Prisoners are given an opportunity to do useful work. They receive an approved and adequate diet, expert medical care, and are retained in the community in which they have been living.

"By placing a prisoner in an institution of this type, authorities have a much better opportunity to rehabilitate him, and upon release, the prisoner can make a better adjustment to the outside world. In addition to this, a prisoner who served a term under the mild and benign discipline of the farm seldom builds up any resentment against society.

"This project is an interesting and challenging experiment in penology and we believe we are doing a good job. But we must continue to enlarge the program in the years ahead," the judge concluded.

The rings of the planet Saturn are about 171,000 miles in diameter.

Skunk Finds Cooked Bugs More Savory

CROSSETT (Special) — Just as men learned accidentally to prefer cooked meat to raw, we see in Crossett the first stages of animals learning to prefer their bugs grilled and hot off the fire.

The electric bug killer which was installed on Crossett's Main Street this summer has attracted the attention of all passersby as insects attracted to its yellow light have set off constant fireworks as they have been electrocuted against the charged screen within the frame of lights.

Recently Rosebud (as we shall hereby name her — him — or it) has discovered the savory superiority of fired bugs, and has been coming nightly to have his supper fresh - fried. Photographer, Neil Rhodes, loaded up his camera and waited one night this week. Rosebud appeared at about 8:30, and Rhodes got his picture.

He knew that anything might happen when the animal was startled by the flash bulb, so was ready to beat a hasty retreat. Rosebud, however, merely dashed off under the shrubbery apparently saving his retaliatory powers for something more lethal than a camera.

Says Soviets Exploiting Science Meets

CHICAGO (AP) —An internationally known physicist said Saturday Russia is exploiting worldwide scientific meetings while U.S. security policy hampers person to person exchanges of information with leading foreign scientists.

John A. Simpson, University of Chicago professor and authority on cosmic radiation, urged that this country open its doors for more international scientific conferences.

Meetings sponsored by Russia, he said, attract many of the world's top experts in various areas of science.

"As a result," Simpson said in a statement, "Russian graduate students and many scientists are given an opportunity to meet and exchange scientific ideas with foreign experts.

"But official policy in Washington the past several years has forbidden even the issuance of invitations to the executive committees which schedule such conferences just because, in some cases, a handful of behind-the-Iron-Curtain delegates will be sprinkled among the hundreds of experts from other parts of the world."

Simpson returned recently from Moscow where he was one of two Americans at meetings of the 15-member committee for the International Geophysical Year.

He said by inviting the meetings in Moscow of such international groups as the IGY committee, the Russians also are creating the impression they are the world center of science and tolerance.

Simpson said the Russians scored a major psychological gain at the IGY committee meeting by leading the drive to continue the general IGY program for a year beyond the Dec. 31 expiration at the same level of intensity.

"American and British scientists were in the defensive position of being against another year of the GY," Simpson said, "because of the lack of assurances by their governments that further funds would be available."

He is convinced the Soviet Union is trying to get into a position in which it can export scientific manpower to Red China and other nations as an effective means of extending its influence. The United States, he added, will not have an excess of scientific manpower for such export.

The Missile Program

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, a non-military organization, recently announced a proposal under which it would take over certain Army missile scientists and missile facilities.

So far, complete details of what NASA, which was organized not long ago as a federal agency, is proposing have not been made public. But enough is known, however, to stir up a strong Army protest, participated in by scientists working on Army projects and supported by persons outside the Army who see the proposal as a threat to U.S. preparedness.

The key question involved in the proposal is simply this: Which organization will do the best job. This is imperative for the survival of the United States.

Another important question is this: Does the United States hold a lead over Soviet Russia in the quality of its military missiles, in the supply of such missiles and in the ability to produce these missiles in quantity?

All of the evidence thus far made public indicates that the United States is not ahead of Soviet Russia in the military missile field. We began our missile program in laggard fashion, well after the Russians had started theirs under high pressure. The numerous failures in tests have shown that there is still much to be learned in U.S. research and production, even though the progress made in recent times has been gratifying.

There is nothing whatever in the present situation which justifies taking any important part of our military missile program out of the hands of military men, or which justifies diverting any of the military scientists or facilities to peacetime space problems.

The military men are the ones whom we hold responsible for the survival of our country, not the NASA or any other civilian agency. President Eisenhower is well aware that the responsibility rests with the military and it should be clear to him that this is no time to weaken the military for the benefit of a civilian organization.

The Army has done much fine missile work; let that work continue, with full steam behind it.

Best Brains Fleeing

The remarkable increase in recent weeks in the stream of refugees from the Soviet-occupied zone of Germany has a meaning more significant than the usual reasons for flight. The high percentage of professional people who have been choosing freedom is due to an intensification of the puppet government's efforts to press intellectuals into the Marxist mold.

In 10 years the number who have fled from East Germany to the West has reached 3,000,000. During the first eight months of this year 130,000 Germans crossed the line into freedom. The stream has swelled "alarmingly" in recent weeks, the federal minister for all-German affairs, Ernest Lemmer, declared a few days ago.

"Alarmingly" because, while West Germany has been able thus far to find employment for this vast influx due to its booming economy, the Bonn government is concerned lest the east zone become depopulated of Germans and resettled with Poles and Russians, making ultimate reunion of the two parts of the country more difficult.

There also is serious concern because in the increasing flood of refugees there is this high percentage of university professors, schoolteachers, doctors and engineers. The east zone is being bled white of its intellectual class. The natural leaders of the people are being compelled by Communist pressure to leave the country. West Germans are worried because their blood brothers in the East are being deprived of doctors to treat their ills and teachers to instruct the young.

Particularly baffling is the recently stepped-up pressure on the engineers. For a long time these were treated with favor by the puppet regime because they were so needed in the program of increasing industrial production. The promises that they would be left alone politically and would be free to travel in the West German republic have been broken. The engineers have been forced to sign the so-called peace resolutions and otherwise support the regime. The result is that they are leaving by the hundreds, with nothing but the clothes on their backs like the other refugees.

In the last week of August 6079 refugees arrived in West Berlin, the largest number since the great influx following the revolt of June, 1953. Intellectuals and specialists comprised the majority. The puppet regime is stripping East Germany of its best brains in its stubborn effort to impose conformity.

Virginia Federal Judges Failing To Uphold South

Two very active Virginia Republican politicians both of whose political careers were blighted by the Byrd Democratic machine in the Old Dominion but who subsequently found their way to the Federal bench through appointment by Republican Presidents are causing Senator Harry F. Byrd some of the headaches Byrd caused them when they were aspirants for elective office.

How much the judicial robes change a man who has been a partisan politician is a subject for debate. Judges themselves say a man undergoes a great change when he ascends the federal bench. Lawyers and the public generally are not always so sure of that and nowhere is it being discussed more than in Virginia where Federal Judges John Paul and Walter E. Hoffman are in the limelight. At all events there is no evidence that Paul and Hoffman are not thoroughly enjoying the discomfiture they are causing Harry Flood Byrd and the State Democratic Administration.

When the Supreme Court first placed the matter of integrating public schools in the hands of inferior federal courts the argument was made that the Southern Federal Judges would be sympathetic with the problems of the South. More than any other Southern Judges perhaps the orders of Paul and Hoffman would seem to disprove this. It was their "sudden-death" integration orders which caused Governor Almond to close schools having 13,000 pupils in Norfolk, Charlottesville and Front Royal.

The political tussle between the 75-year old Paul and the 71-year old Byrd is an ancient one. Paul's father was a one - term Congressman and also a Federal judge. The present Judge Paul came close to being "Mr. Republican" in the Seventh Virginia Congressional District and was a delegate to four Republican National conventions. In 1920 he entered the race for Congress. In the Harding landslide he polled a large enough vote to make the election of Democrat Thomas W. Harrison doubtful. Paul contested the election of Harrison, who took the oath and began his fourth term.

The Paul - Harrison contest dragged along before a House of Representative Elections Committee. Meanwhile Byrd, a young State Senator, was elected Democratic State Chairman in 1922. Byrd's home was in the Seventh district, scene of the Paul-Harrison election contest, and where both were again candidates. Byrd assigned himself as his first objective the elimination of Paul. There was no doubt of the result, Harrison clobbered Paul. After the decisive Harrison victory the overwhelmingly Republican House of Representatives seated Paul and he served nearly four months, from December 15, 1922, to March 4, 1923.

Attorney General Harry M. Daughtery brought Paul into the Department of Justice as a special assistant Attorney General and he served in this capacity for nearly two years. In 1932 President Hoover appointed Paul a United States Judge in Virginia.

Judge Hoffman had no such long record of political feuding with Byrd as Paul did. In fact Hoffman is a Northerner, was born in Jersey City, New Jersey, attended and played football at the University of Pennsylvania. He moved to Norfolk in 1926 and immediately plunged into Republican politics. He was a delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1952. Those 1952 National Convention delegates were a favored class of Attorney General Brownell, himself a former Republican National Committee handed Hoffman the plum of United States Judge in the Eastern District of Virginia.

Hoffman in 1953 had tried for the office of Attorney General of Virginia. He was conceded an excellent chance to win. The Byrd candidate Lindsay Almond, the present governor defeated him.

The spotlight beat with fury especially on both Paul and Hoffman last week. Before them was a question about which every Southern State is wondering: Will a Federal Judge somewhere render a decision ordering a State to conduct a school. Paul ordered private schools to quit using public school teachers, but said he did not think he had the right to reopen the schools as the NAACP has asked him to do.

"If the state is going to discontinue public education in these localities it must be a complete abandonment," Paul said.

When lawyers for the NAACP appeared before Hoffman he advised them to file suit against the Governor instead of the school board. Commenting on this the Washington Star said editorially:

'Federal Judge Walter E. Hoffman, who refers to himself as "old black robes" seems anxious to set the stage in Norfolk for a showdown with Virginia Governor Almond. This is at least the inference to be drawn from the Judge's repeated suggestions to NAACP lawyers that they should make the Governor a defendant in the Norfolk school litigation. If this smacks of something less than Judicial detachment, it is entirely consistent with Judge Hoffman's past performance.

"In 1953, as the G. O. P. candidate for Attorney General he ran against and was defeated by Lindsay Almond. So there will be no great lifting of eyebrows in Virginia if the outspoken Judge Hoffman seems eager for another go at the Governor . . . He (Hoffman) implying that he would enjoin Almond against invoking the school - closing law and thereby make it possible for the school board to reopen on an integrated basis. . . . (This) the stage presumably will be set for a major legal test — whether a Federal Judge, in effect can compel a State Governor to acquiesce in the operation of integrated schools. Since the Supreme Court's 1954 ruling did not order integration as such, this Norfolk undertaking apparently would involve a venture onto new and untested legal grounds. Judge Hoffman, however, appears willing and eager to give it the old college try."

Government Works On Air Pollution Problem

The federal government is spearheading a campaign to develop a long - range program to see what can be done to solve the increasingly serious problem of air pollution which is costing this nation anywhere between $1.5 and $4 billion a year.

It is a problem that traces its origin to the early days of the Industrial Revolution and one, unfortunately, that gets worse as our standard of living gets better.

Aware of the growing threat that "dirty air" poses to human life and welfare, the surgeon general of the United States has called for a national conference on air pollution in Washington next month. It is expected to attract doctors, engineers, meteorologists, local, state and federal officials, representatives of industry and labor, civic leaders and many others.

Specifically, it is hoped that the conference will result in: (1) widespread public understanding of the air pollution problem and the necessity for resolving it, and (2) a unified 10 - year plan of action, setting up goals and outlining the steps necessary to achieve them, both in research and in control activities.

Not nearly enough has been done many will agree, to explore both the short and long-range effects of polluted air on health. What specific agent, for example, caused the death of 20 persons in Donora, Pa., in 1948, and several thousand deaths in London in 1952 and 1956 has never been learned. Practicaly all that is known is that man - made pollution combined with natural fog to form a death - dealing gas. Disturbing at this time is the fact there is no guarantee that similar disasters will not take place again and perhaps on a more disastrous scale.

City dwellers pay for air pollution in increased laundry, cleaning and painting bills. In some rural areas farmers pay for it in damage to their crops and livestock. Its affect on human health is anybody's guess. And there is, too, the "intangible" damage which results from living and working in an unpleasant environment.

Several Federal agencies are concerned with the problem but public health officials at the national level feel — and rightfully so — that the actual solution of the air pollution problem rests at the state and local level. They believe the Federal government should provide only guidance and leadership.

Working with states and communities the Federal government has set up a national air sampling network which is coming up with many answers to this extremely complicated problem. There is at least one sampling station in every state making it possible for the first time to collect and analyze air pollution data on a nationwide basis.

The Public Health Service is carrying on an important research project in Nashville, Tennessee, to develop information on the effect of air pollution on human health. Extensive measurement of air pollution is being made over a two - year period by means of 126 sampling stations throughout the Nashville metropolitan area. At the same time 6,000 households are participating in a program under which reports of illness are being correlated with full information on the past illnesses of members of each family, their occupations, smoking habits and socio - economic status. As part of this same survey a daily check is being kept on the status of patients with chronic respiratory and heart diseases.

Public heath officials admit they are not quite sure what precise conclusions there will be able to be drawn from the Nashville studies. One thing is certain, however. More will be known about air pollution in a given metropolitan area and about the health of its people under varying atmospheric conditions than this or any other country has ever known before.

Probably the greatest reason why air pollution has not been attacked before on a grand scale is that people are not aroused. Except for such tragedies as those which occurred at London and Donora and the heavy "smog" which settles periodically over Los Angeles, most people view air pollution simply as a nuisance. Unlike epidemics it does not litter the streets with the dead and dying. It does not in any obvious way cause healthy people to fall ill suddenly and it does not have the dreaded power of being contagious.

Dr. John D. Porterfield, deputy surgeon general of the United States, is one who believes air pollution is more than a nuisance, especially to those directly affected by it. He cites, for example, the asthmatic patient whose aliment has been worse since he moved from the country to the city, the perfectly healthy commuter whose eyes smart and water as he goes about the city, the shopper whose nylon stockings mysteriously fall apart while she is downtown, the truck farmer who suddenly finds his whole crop of spinach splotched and unmarketable or the housewife who gets an inferiority complex because her laundry comes off the line with tattle tale gray, no matter what soap she uses.

The air pollution problem actually should be everyone's concern because everyone depends on the state of the air intimately surrounding him. Every day throughout our lives we take in about 30 pounds of air compared with 2¾ pounds of food and 4½ pounds of water. With this air we also breathe all the varieties of particles and gases which invariably accompany it.

It is important to note that the air pollution problem will get worse instead of better. The United States population will reach an estimated 220 million by 1970 and two - thirds of that increase is expected to locate in the same industrial areas which already hold more than half the people.

With urbanization increasing, standards of living continuing to rise only one thing can happen— the air will get dirtier. Certainly the time is here to see that this trend is reversed.

Views Of Our Readers

We who call ourselves true sportsmen would like to take this means to thank Olin - Mathieson for the invitation to hunt in their forests. In gratitude we feel it our wholehearted responsibility to help keep Louisiana green. The name Olin - Mathieson has won a warm place in all our hearts.

We also want to thank the Farm Bureau for their deep concern shown at recent meetings with the Wildlife Association.

The farmers cannot be blamed for their attitude toward the townspeople who swarm their farms in droves shooting and tramping down crops and fences. Any person guilty of this has never lived on the farm. He doesn't know what it is to sweat all year fighting grass and endure the many hardships typical of farm life. When a hunter is in your pasture or field banging away, you can't help but fear for the livestock and for your own safety too. There are many of us, however, who have never done this type of hunting and to those who have we offer no thanks for having the door of hospitality slammed in our faces.

The majority of us who follow the hounds at night have always tried to do unto others as we would have them do unto us. At one time most of us have lived on the farm and we know what it means to be taken for granted. But as usual, it is the hunter who looks forward to a weekly hunt as a means of relaxation who has to pay, while the irresponsible persons who were concerned only with bagging the limit are no longer concerned. We sincerely hope that the welcome mat will again be out to the true sportsman and we can prove to be worthy of your trust.

Daily Devotion

Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, Lo there! for, behold, the Kingdom of God is within you. — Luke 17-21.

As the leavening agent "leavens the whole loaf," so the spirit of Christ changes the minds, hearts, and spirits of men — if they but accept Him and believe in His proclaimed truths. We speak of national pride, spirit and devotion as if each were material things — but patriotism and good citizenship are the sum total of all these things when found in the minds and hearts of our citizens. In like manner, the Kingdom of God is not made of missions, churches, hospitals and schools — but that spark of divinity which is found in the hearts of Christians.

O God, make us more Christlike. In His name we ask. Amen.

GEORGE SOKOLSKY'S DAYS

Dulles Policy Brings Success

I saw an editorial in the Spracuse "Herald-American" signed by Alexander F. Jones on "Diplomatic Blackmail in the Far East." It was an amusing editorial in parts, but it contained this opinion:

"Mr. Dulles, who is getting to be an international nuisance, and a terrible bore, continues to bellow the U.S. is ready to 'risk war' over the offshore islands.

"So far as I am concerned that is one war Mr. Dulles could fight all by himself for he would find he was practically alone if his foot ever slips in that 'brinkmanship' balancing act of his."

Unfortunately for Mr. Jones and those who believe as he does, the policy adopted by John Foster Dulles vis-a-vis the Soviet Universal State has worked out brilliantly both in the Middle East and the Far East.

Without referring to such synthetic words as, "brinkmanship," let us analyze that policy:

The proposition: Soviet Russia, having seized the initiative in 1945 and having held it since then, maintains the world in turmoil by short, limited wars or by incidents which require swift, emergency retaliatory actions lest they develop into general wars.

President Truman developed the Truman Doctrine which drew a line containing Soviet Russia. That line was breached on several occasions, principally by the absorption of Red China, North Korea, North Vietnam and other Asiatic areas into the Soviet Universal State and then by the development of the United Arab Republic under Nasser as a Soviet ally. The extension of Soviet power took place in both the Truman and Eisenhower administrations.

Handling international relations in trouble times has never been a simple matter. Such men as Talleyrand and Metternich faced complexities as great as ours, but their world was smaller. They did not have as many allies or as many neutrals; they were not faced by a geographical spread such as now faces the United States; they were not concerned with what we nowadays call "public opinion," a synthetic proposition based on the assumption that a common denominator exists between the expert and the ill informed.

John Foster Dulles is required by the circumstances in which his country finds itself to hold our allies at any cost except defeat; he is faced by a new range of weapons, the nature and ultimate capacity of which are hardly understood and in which the enemy is as proficient as we are; he is faced by an inflation at home and by the rising trade capacities in international markets of nations that heretofore have not so traded, thus engendering the political antagonisms that arise from economic competition.

He faces the fact that the enemy plans a series of short, limited wars on a shuttle cock pattern— one stops, another starts—and that the time schedule of these wars has naturally not been disclosed. His task is threefold:

1. To prevent the limited wars from developing into a general war;
2. To uphold the honor and dignity of the United States without impairing the honor and dignity of any other nation;
3. To prevent Soviet Russia from separating the United States from its allies.

Quemoy is a pawn in this. Quemoy is of no political or economic importance. However, as a phase of the Middle Eastern situation, involving Lebanon and Iraq, it was essential for Soviet Russia to bring to a close what could have developed into a general war and to divert attention elsewhere. Dulles has proved to be correct in his handling of the Lebanese situation; he caught up with the Soviet Universal State in its swift shift to Quemoy. He is undoubtedly prepared to meet the next shift of Soviet policy to some other place. It will come quickly enough.

It would seem that the less men know, the more sure they are that they can solve the outstanding questions between Russia and the United States better than John Foster Dulles has done. They would have had Soviet Russia win an enormous victory in the East of Asia over a barren island because their very practical minds are not sufficiently expansive to envisage the broad historic meaning of such a victory.

Perhaps that is why the Russians have such contempt for what they call Wall Street. They have no contempt for Dulles who has now out-thought them in two difficult situations, Lebanon and Quemoy.

African Doctor Follows Voodoo

The African belief in magic and witchcraft is deeply ingrained and has defied western attempts to change it. This is particularly true of the Bantu, according to Miss L. Longmore, in a recent issue of the Central African Journal of Medicine.

These people worship their ancestors, who are supposed to influence their health and well being. The native doctors also abide by this belief. It is useless for an African who adheres to tribal customs to consult a European physician about illnesses caused by ancestors and the white man who tries to talk them out of such concepts is batting a stone wall.

There are two types of medical advisers: the doctor and a diviner, or witchdoctor. The doctor is a servant of the gods (ancestors). He diagnoses and prescribes remedies for ordinary ailments, prevents misfortunes, and brings prosperity. He must provide protection against bad luck, accidents, and witchcraft and is not supposed to give his patients medicines that would harm others.

The diviner supplies powerful magic medications. He works in secret and is consulted by victims of witchcraft or ill fortune.

The doctor handles domestic problems. If a woman finds her husband straying, she goes to a friend's doctor. He tell her that another woman is using medicine against her so that her husband detests her presence. He has decided to sleep in another part of the house because she smells like stale fish.

The perturbed woman then asks for protection and a cure. The doctor gives her four medicines; one, to clean out her intestine; two for the morning bath; three, to be applied to the face; four, a secret medicine to be mixed with dirt and put in her husband's food.

The neglected wife follows directions and one day her husband says, "My wife, I love you very much. The devil wanted to separate us. I'm so pleased I defied his wish."

American physicians and marriage counselors could not do better. The physician might prescribe a tranquilizer to help her bear her grief but the African goes to the heart of the matter and prescribes a remedy geared to the native way of life.

TOMORROW: Be kind to your feet.

REDUCING IN ARTHRITIS

Mrs. G. writes: I have arthritis and my doctor put me on a starvation diet to lose weight. I'm hungry and weak all the time and the pain in my back and hlps is no better. Is there any use in continuing this treatment?

REPLY

Give it a fair trial. Slight alternations in the diet may help you to avoid hunger and weakness.

EAR INFECTION

Mrs. W. writes: Can infection in the middle ear be cured by operation? Medicines have done no good.

REPLY

Yes. The most common operation is puncturing the eardrum to allow pus to escape. If infection persists there is a possibility the mastoid is involved. A second operation may be needed to promote drainage from this structure.

IMMUNITY TO BRUCELLOSIS

F. J. writes: Can undulant fever occur more than once?

REPLY

Yes. Apparently one attack does not confer absolute immunity.

Today's Health Hint — The eyes should be used but not abused.

ACCUSED OF ATTACKS

BEIGRADE (UPI) — The government newspaper Borba Friday charged Moscow and its East European satellites had broadcast more than 700 attacks against Yugoslavia within the past five months. It said Moscow radio alone "broadcasting in Russian and Yugoslav languages emitted over 250 typewritten pages of anti-Yugoslav material." Attacks also were made by the official radios of Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania.

Trust In God

SOME problems we can solve within . . . The hours of a day . . . While others take so long, it seems . . . That we grow old and gray . . . And yet we should not worry if . . . We place our faith in God . . . A difficulty that endures . . . Is nothing really odd . . . Not every answer can be found . . . Before another dawn . . . Some problems are tenacious and . . . They just go on and on . . . Perhaps it is the will of God . . . That we should be restrained . . . In order to appreciate . . . Our ground already gained . . . Or possibly He only wants . . . To try our patience out . . . And thereby weigh our trust in Him . . . Against the smallest doubt.

Civic Projects Subject Of Vote

ance these against the ability to pay.

Using a comprehensive survey and study conducted by Ford, Bacon and Davis, Inc., engineering firm with headquarters in New York, and S. E. Huey and Company, consulting engineers, of Monroe, the committee concurred that improved sewerage and drainage facilities, plus streets, were the most sorely needed. This was the opinion of all participating engineers whose study resulted in a list of other capital improvement problems which the city will have to face in the future.

These engineers were also guided by a resolution of the Monroe-Ouachita Regional Planning Commission, and a memorandum on the street improvement program by Arch R. Winter and Associates, city planning consultants to the City of Monroe.

In all the street studies, the emphasis on railroad grade crossing elimination was manifested.

TOTAL COST

As a result of the studies and discussions, it was decided that a bond issue calling for $5,115,800 was the only possible way such needed improvements could be prosecuted, and necessary steps were taken by the Citizens Committee to present the proposition to the property owners of Monroe.

Upon the recommendation of the Citizens Committee, the Monroe City Council on September 23 voted to call the bond election in a unanimous poll following a review of the proposal.

The program calls for:

1. Improvement of the sanitary sewerage facilities, $897,500.
2. Improvement of the storm drainage facilities, $2,389,000.
3. Improvement of streets and construction of two railroad underpasses, $1,829,300.

The city has agreed that the funds, if voted by the property owners, would be dispersed upon certification of the engineers that the work has been performed satisfactorily, and that the funds have been spent as specified.

The funds will be administered in strict accordance with the recommendations of the engineers, and Citizens Committee leaders declare that since the committee did recommend the bond issue, it will maintain an alert interest throughout the construction program, and, if deemed necessary, the committee will report from time to time on the progress.

The Citizens Committee has re-emphasized the three projects recommended — sewerage, drainage and streets and rail underpasses — are by no means all the improvements needed in the city, but that they are the most urgent and the committee feels they should be accomplished at the earliest possible time.

In the subsequent articles on the forthcoming bond election for public works improvement, the various details of the three propositions will be outlined in full.

2 Full-Scale Detonations Are Reported

ATOMIC TEST SITE, Nev. (UPI)—An unprecedented detonation of two full-scale nuclear devices within a 10-minutes period Sunday was announced Saturday by the Atomic Energy Commission following Saturday morning's 75-foot tower shot on Yucca Flat.

Taking advantage of excellent weather conditions in its bid to complete the current test series by Oct. 31, the AEC also tentatively set another test shot, "Socorro," for Monday.

One of Sunday's scheduled tests is the much-postponed, powerful "Wrangel," and the other a device designated as "Rushmore."

STEM BROKE

A small fireball appeared to bounce off the desert floor Saturday morning when "Rio Arriba," a minor scale experiment in the current series, was detonated. The tower disappeared in the fireball of the sub-kiloton shot and the gray cloud balloon shot quickly to 6,000 feet.

The stem broke from the body of the cloud at about 8,000 feet. Newsmen, five miles away, said the blast was "real dinky," and the shock wave hardly noticeable.

Sunday's "Wrangel" — from a balloon anchored at 1,500 feet—should be considerably more impressive than "Rio Arriba," the ninth in the current series of 13.

Wrangel, set now for 9:20 a.m. EDT Sunday, has a wide range potential, with a possible yield as half the nominal 20 kilotons.

Twenty miles away, at 9:10 a.m. EDT, a balloon device, "Rushmore" will be fired from a balloon 500 feet over Yucca Flat. This will have an estimated yield of one to two ilotons.

The AEC has never "doubled up" on its shots within such a brief span, according to observers here, but the program of intensified firings followed a plan to get the tests completed by Oct. 31.

That's the date talks are to start among the nuclear powers, the U.S., Britain and Russia, over halting all atomic testing.

NOT BITTER AT ANYBODY — George Buchanan White Jr. smiles in his cell at Hunt County jail at Greenville, Tex. after learning that an ex-convict confessed to the armed robbery for which White was sentenced to 15 years in prison. Six Persons Die In Ala. Auto Wrecks

United Press International

At least six persons died in traffic mishaps in Alabama during the first eight hours of the weekend, a United Press International survey showed Saturday.

Amanda Louise Woodward, 58, of Munford, Ala., was killed shortly after 2 a.m. Saturday in a car-truck collision 10 miles west of Anniston on U. S. 78. The Highway Patrol said she was a passenger in the car.

Charles Smith, 14, of Huntsville, was fatally injured late Friday when struck by a car as he walked along U. S. 231 about six miles south of Huntsville.

Four Negroes were killed Friday night when their speeding car careened through a bridge abutment and plunged into a creek on a Dallas County road about 12 miles east of Selma.

Soviet Union Sets Off 9th Nuclear Blast

TOKYO (AP)—Tokyo's Weather Bureau said Sunday the Soviet Union has set off its ninth nuclear blast and probably its biggest since it resumed nuclear weapons testing Sept. 30.

A Weather Bureau spokesman said abnormal air wave pressures around 0.3 millibars were recorded around midnight Japan time (10 a.m. EST Saturday). These contrast with pressures of up to 0.2 millibars in previous new tests and 0.5 millibars in Soviet superblasts last spring.

The latest blast must have been one of several megatons, the expert said. One megaton has the equivalent power of one million tons of TNT.

(The U. S. Atomic Energy Commission announced in Washington it had detected another Soviet nuclear weapons test. The AEC said, "This large-yield test is the ninth U. S.S.R. detonation announced by the United States since Sept. 30. This test, like the others, took place north of the Arctic Circle.")

The Weather Bureau here has recorded five Soviet tests on its sensitive microbarographs since Sept. 30. Four others, detected and announced by the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, were not recorded here.

Miss. Mayor Is Named In Damage Suit

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) — Mayor James Ballard of Tupelo was named Saturday in a $25,000 damage suit charging harrassment of a Tupelo business man.

Dale Walton charged in the suit Ballard conspired with policemen Lloyd Grissom and Nile McKinney to have him arrested.

The suit further states the officers, acting under Ballard's command, arrested 'Valton Sept. 28 and kept him in jail without cause for five hours.

Walton has been arrested more than 100 times in the last 3 years.

The suit asking for $25,000 actual and punitive damages and all costs, is the most drastic action yet in the three-year feud between Walton and Ballard.

The controversy began over Walton's arrests for operating his grocery-service station on Sunday.

IN FORMOSA

Declaration Of Unity Foreseen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Administration officals predicted Saturday that next week's conferences in Formosa will produce a joint declaration of unity and a private agreement to avoid provoking renewed Communist attacks.

The time is ripe now for compromising U.S.-Nationalist Chinese disagreements, with a minimum of haggling, these officials said.

Their predictions suggested that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles hopes he and President Chiang Kai-shek can present a solid and successful-looking front to both the world and the voters back home at the con'sion of the talks.

Dulles is due in Taipei Tuesday, on a flight from Rome, for three days of talks. He will leave for Washington just before expiration of the third week of Red China's Quemoy cease fire.

Officials discounted the possibility that Dulles would try to persuade Chiang to make major, public concessions to win a lasting extension of the cease fire, such as demilitarization of the offshore islands or ending the Nationalists' partial blockade as South China ports.

These sources also doubted that Chiang would make a public issue of his reported desire to win a permanent U.S. guarantee to help defend the offshore islands.

These problems will be discussed, it was presumed here. But the emphasis will be kept on the theme of unity in the face of the Communists' new political campaign to weaken Nationalist faith in the United States and undermine Chiang's prestige.

The main objective now, Dulles indicated at his news conference here Tuesday, is to complete what he considers a successful demonstration that his policy of standing firm against any communist threat pays off.

The urgency has gone out of efforts to persuade Chiang and the Communists to end the Chinese civil war. Pressure by the United States' allies to make drastic moves for peace in the Formosa Strait has eased. And the Communists have made clear that they will not accept any compromise short of complete U. S. abandonment of the Nationalists.

In this situation, an administration official said Saturday Dulles has done all that he reasonably can do. He has declared that the United States will not support a Nationalist return by force to the mainland. He has given public assurance that the offshore islands never again will be used by the Nationalists to blockade mainland ports or as bases for raids and espionage landings on the Communist coast.

Union Role In Politics Discussed

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (UPI) — Ralph J. Cordiner, president of General Electric Co., Saturday described the AFL-CIO as "the most aggressive and successful force in politics" and equally as powerful as "all other groups and individuals combined."

He said the Nov. 4 congressional election may give the big labor organization more political influence than is held by the remainder of American society.

Cordiner made this appraisal in a statement prepared for a closed door meeting of the Commerce Department's business advisory council. Although a member of the council's labor policy committee, he said his remarks were "purely my own."

He told fellow corporation executives that most observers believe that as a result of next month's elections, the AFL - CIO will gain "the added 11 senators and 41 representatives that will give the union officials an absolute majority and the power to pass or repeal legislation at will."

"This imbalance of political power," he continued, is, "to only a small degree, in the hand of the racketeers under attack by the McClellan (Senate Rackets) Committee. It is principally in the hands of the other union officials, who nevertheless put forward ideologies and proposals which result in inflation, concentration of power in central government, damage to progress and withering of freedom."

In apparent reference to "union shops" clauses in labor contracts, Cordiner said "compulsory (union) membership, which wields a monopoly of the labor market, is the source of the economic power of union officials."

He said "this license to take away jobs" is the "basic source of the political power wielded through the use of vast funds and manpower without any necessary regard to the wishes of members who pay the bill." He added that it "makes the union official the master rather than the servant of the members."

A non-union worker who takes a job in a "union shop" establishment is obliged to join the union after a certain period or lose the job.

Cordiner said the last Congress failed to take any action to check union "monopoly power." He said he thought it "unlikely that any will be made in the next; in fact, the reverse is all too likely."

Terms Given For Tunisia, UAR Relations

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) —Authoritative Arab sources said Saturday Tunisia would resume diplomatic relations with United Arab Republic if the U.A.R. would expel Salah Ben Youssef, Tunisian dissident leader now living in Cairo.

Tunisia broke relations Wednesday. Tunisian Foreign Minister Sadok Mokkadem said the U.A.R. had interfered in Tunisia's internal affairs and supported Youssef and others hostile to the Tunis government.

Youssef, an anti-Western extremist, once worked with President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia for independence from France. He split with him in 1956 because of Bourguiba's moderate, pro-Western policy. Ben Youssef went to Cairo and was sentenced to death in Tunisia as an alleged inciter of terrorist opposition.

'Champ Yam' Award Won By Area Girl

NEWELLTON (Special) — A Newellton High School senior girl won the "Champ Yam Cook" award in the finals of the sweet potato recipe contest now in progress in Opelousas.

Miss Elizabeth Ann Coit, whose yam pecan pie won over three other district winners, was the first north Louisiana girl to win the recipe award. She will receive an all expense paid trip out of state with the Yambilee Queen.

Other district winners were Carolyn Miller, St. Joseph Academy of New Roads; Glenda Shepherd, La Fargue, and Peggy Thibodeaux of Henry High School. District awards were presented by State Supt. of Education, Shelby Jackson.

W. J. Parent of the state department of education was principal speaker at a breakfast held by the Future Homemakers of America in honor of the four district winners. He termed sweet potatoes the "finest product we have in the south."

Print Ballots For Conclave

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Six thousand ballots have been printed for the conclave of cardinals beginning next Saturday to elect a successor to Pope Pius XII.

With balloting twice daily that would be enough for two months of voting. Vatican sources said, however, that the number of ballots should not be taken as the expected length of the conclave.

More Firms Pledged To United Fund

United Givers added 10 firms to its list of "hundred per centers" for the employes' payroll deduction plan as the second week of the fund raising campaign closed, it was learned yesterday.

F. Strauss and Son, Inc., the Penn Hotel, Commercial Securities, Dixie Dandy, Fields, Thompson - Thompson and Sparks, Friendly Finance, Saul Adler Garage, AETNA Finance and Beneficial Finance were the latest firms included in the list of those whose employes are cooperating 100 per cent with the payroll deduction plan of the fund raising drive.

Campaign Chairman R. L. Vanderpool Jr., praised the employes for their generous gestures of cooperation in the plan. He gave credit also to the business managers of the cooperating firms for explaining the advantages of payroll deduction to the employes.

Vanderpool said the reports thus far gave evidence that the drive could be brought to a successful conclusion by the end of this week.

Ouachita Parish United Givers includes 133 affiliated service organizations. Goal for this year's campaign is $210,000.

Soviet Press Writes Off N.Y. Election

The Young Communist League newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda and the Republic organ Soviet Russia both pictured Republican candidate Nelson Rockefeller as the arch villain of American monopolists. He took the brunt of the attacks.

The articles said Rockefeller flashed a good natured campaign smile that would be replaced, if he is elected, by a hard commanding face demanding billions for peacetime military purposes.

IN LIMERICK, IRELAND

Fairy Tale Stalls Airport Extension

LIMERICK, Ireland (AP)—The fares of Ireland are amiable people, as is well known, but not when they get their Irish up.

And since that is where their Irish is right now, goodness knows what's to be done about extending Shannon's International Airport runway.

Ambrose McInerney, who has the contract to do a bit of earth moving for the extension, told about his troubles Saturday.

The Irish government sent him orders not to disturb the fairy fort on top of Trade's Hill. Trouble is, the fairies have their fort where the airport people want to extend the runway.

Quite a useless order, McInerney observed, because his Irish workmen never would molest a fairy fort anyway. As soon play patty-cake with the devil himself, they would.

A foiry fort is a sort of a headquarters and community hall. That's where they have their parties and kick the fairy gong around.

Farmer Frank Fahy, said that many a midnight the fairies can be heard "chomping and chattering" at the fort.

And some think the fairies also are worried about the gold they have buried near the fort.

If an American bulldozer dug into the treasure there could be trouble, real trouble.

Listen again to farmer Fahy. Another farmer of the region died when he took stones from a fairy fort to make a wall.

"His hands swelled up, he died and he never finished the wall," Fahy said. "Poeple here wouldn't even cut a bush on a fairy fort."

So how is the airport authority ever to extend the runway to accomodate the big jet airliners?

Darned if McInerney knows. Why even if he ignored the government and tried to level the hill with the fort on it, his workers would strike more than likely.

Aviation engineers said it would be possible to squeeze the new runway past the little hill, but that would create a minor hazard.

They might have to put red warning lights on the hill. And what if the fairies don't like red lights?

King Family Leaves For Parts Unknown

Camden County Sheriff W. F. Smith said King was released when the warrant was canceled and the one-time Mississippi college professor took his wife and six children without any notice of their destination.

King was arrested and jailed when he arrived here from Mississippi Wednesday after announcing plans for a "Back to Africa" movement for skilled American Negroes. A white man in Jacksonville, Fla., was to sponsor the venture.

King's wife obtained the abandonment warrant when she read news accounts of his Arrican plan and intention to talk her into going with him.

Sheriff Smith said he felt King appeared mentally unbalanced and was harboring "a tremendous hatred for white people."

King ran into trouble at least twice in Mississippi. He was arrested last June when he tried to enroll in the University of Mississippi and aroused strong feelings when he said he would try to enroll his child in an all-white Gulfport elementary school.

The enrollment plan fell through when his wife left Gulfport with the children and came here. She said she was terrified by threatening telephone calls.

Distribution Of Funds For Science Ready

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U. S. Office of Education reported Saturday it is ready to begin distributing initial funds in the new federal aid-to-science education program which ultimately will cost more than a billion dollars.

The agency also is hopeful that college students will be able to obtain scholarship loans under the program by February before the second school semesters begin.

At the moment, the office is prepared to handle applications on a minor phase of the program —a $500,000 allocation for research projects on use of television, radio, motion pictures and other media to improve teaching methods.

The precedent - setting, seven-year program was approved by Congress just before adjournment in August. It was prompted by Soviet Sputnik successes and reports the Russian educational system was turning out more scientists and engineers than the United States.

The office of Education expects to be ready for business on college student loans, grants for science equipment in public schools, and other major features of the program by Jan. 1.

Six Youngsters Arrested In N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — Six boys ranging from 11 to 13 years old were arrested Saturday in connection with the smashing of six windows in a Brooklyn synagogue last Wednesday. Police said they admitted stoning the windows.

The boys were charged with juvenile delinquency, placed in the custody of their parents and will appear in Children's Court Monday. Because of their age, their names were not revealed.

Johnson Hits Republicans' 'Don't Views'

WELCH, W. Va. (UPI)—Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson Saturday night accused the Republicans of "running against Eugene Debs," the late socialist leader, and of taking a "can't afford it" attitude toward the nation's problems.

The Texas Democrat said the GOP record "is a long series of don'ts."

On the other hand, he said at a Democratic rally, the Democratic - controlled 85th Congress passed measures to help the economy and "put people back to work."

He said the GOP is "running against Debs" because "they can beat poor old Gene Debs. He is dead and buried.

"But they can't beat unemployment, they can't beat sickness and disease, and they can't beat Khrushchev by resurrecting a dead man—and a dead issue—and kicking him around," he declared.

Johnson said the most important issue of the congressional election campaign is "to unite Americans for effective action. . . it is whether America will reach back to the past; shrink its frontiers; refight dead issues and quarrel among ourselves or whether America will step boldly into the world of the present and the future."

He said that to Democrats, "the problems of our time present a great challenge to be met with all the initiative, courage, and determination that Americans can muster."

But to Republicans, Johnson said, "the problems of our time are hazards from which Americans should shrink in fear, doubt and timidity."

He denounced as "ridiculous" the "imaginary bugaboos of Socialism and fiscal irresponsibility" raised as issued by top Republicans.

He said the Democrats are confident of regaining two senate seats in this unemployment-troubled state.

Rep. Robert C. Byrd (D-W.Va.) is opposing Sen. W. Chapman Revercomb (R-W.Va.), and former Rep. Jennings Randolph (D-W.Va.) is seeking to unseat Sen. John D. Hoblitzell, Jr. (R-W.Va.).

Johnson reminded his audience that President Eisenhower vetoed a bill to provide federal aid for economically-distressed areas. He said a bigger senate working margin for the Democrats would make it easier to override such vetoes.

Reports Pope Urged Firmness Of United States

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pope Pius XII declared shortly before his death that the "real peace of the world" depends upon the firmness of U.S. opposition to Communist aggression, Sen. A. Willis Robertson (D-Va.) disclosed Saturday.

Robertson, along with Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson and Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.), had an audience with the Pope a few hours before he was felled by a stroke at Castel Gondolfo, his summer palace.

Robertson, in a United Press International interview, described the pontiff as being "very commendatory" about U.S. resistance to communism. He quoted the Pope as saying he felt the "real peace of the world" rests on the "firmness of our opposition to Communist aggression."

He was a very great man, Robertson said. "A very able man who made a very real contribution" to world peace.

Robertson, Anderson and Fulbright called on the late pontiff when they were enroute to New Delhi, India, as American delegates to the annual meeting of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

The Virginia Democrat also reported that economic conditions in Italy are "much improved." He particularly praised the low degree of inflation and said Italy's "financial situation is to be commended."

'GIVE 'EM HELLO'

Ike In Denver For Week End

DENVER (UPI)—President and Mrs. Eisenhower flew to Denver Saturday for a week end break in the Chief Executive's 5,300-mile "give 'em hello" campaign trip.

The President first called on Mrs. Elvira Doud, his elderly mother - in - law, at her Denver home.

Then he planned to check in at the Brown Palace Hotel, and with Denver mortgage banker Aksel Nielsen drive around town.

White House Press Secretary James Hagerty said Eisenhower was not following a formal schedule during the afternoon.

"He hasn't even told me what he is going to do or where he is going on this trip (with Nielsen)" Hagerty said. The President "wanted to see some of the places built up around Denver since his 1955 heart attack at the Doud home.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon is spending the week end at the Broadmoor Hotel at Colorado Springs, 65 miles to the south, to rest a sore throat. He did not plan to see the President over the week end.

Eisenhower, who flew to Denver from Abilene, Kan., was using a soft approach "give 'em hello" with audiences, avoiding strong anti-Democratic utterances in the first stages of his campaign trip.

He will fly from Denver to Los Angeles Monday.

The Chief Executive planned to visit the Columbine Country Club and to tour the Martin Co.'s Titan missile plant at suburban Littleton with Nielsen.

The Eisenhowers stepped from the Columbine III, shading their eyes from the bright Indian summer sun, to the applause of 200 welcomers—including Democratic Gov. Steve McNichols, his wife and their five children.

Among those greeting the President were Sen. Gordon Allott (R-Colo.), Rep. Byron Rogers (D-Colo.), Republican congressional candidates John Harpel and John Mackie, state Republican Chairman Richard Shaw, and two old friends — former Colorado Gov. Dan Thornton and Nielsen.

The President and Mrs. Eisenhower, in a black limousine, led a cavalcade of 15 cars from the airport to 750 Lafayette Street.

After a 40-minute visit with the ailing Mrs. Doud, the President went on to the Brown Palace hotel. Mrs. Eisenhower was to join him there later in the day.

It was in the Doud resistance, Mrs. Eisenhower's girlhood home, that the Chief Executive suffered a heart attack in 1955. His only visit to Colorado since then was an hour-long appearance at Stapleton Field Oct. 20, 1956, at a political rally.

Mrs. Doud, 80, did not go to the airport. A presidential aide explained she is "not strong enough" to bear the excitement surrounding a presidential arrival.

Pope's Doctor Is Under Fire From Society

ROME (UPI)—The Rome Medical Assn., Saturday accused Prof. Riccardo Galeazzi - Lisi of unprofessional conduct in selling to newspapers and magazines intimate and detailed accounts of the last hours of Pope Pius XII.

Galeazzi - Lisi was physician to the late Pope for more than a quarter of a century.

He called the society's action a case of "professional jealousy".

The association announced it would hold an early meeting to decide what formal action should be taken. A spokesman said this could range from censure to expulsion from the medical society of the province of Rome.

There was no official Vatican comment but Vatican quarters said there was "virtually no other course" for the society to take.

Galeazzi-Lisi's journalistic ventures were know to have shocked and dismayed many in the Vatican. They were not authorized by the Vatican.

Start Monday On Withdrawal From Jordan

LONDON (UPI) — The withdrawal of British forces from Jordan will begin Monday and is expected to be completed in about three weeks, the Defnese Ministry announced Saturday.

The troops sent to the Middle East country in July to bolster the regime of King Hussein will move out by air and sea. The airlift which will pass over Syria to Cyprus will be under the supervision of United Nations observers.

Withdrawl of American forces from Lebanon is now in its final stages and expected to be completed by the end of October. The United States sent more than 14,000 Marines and soldiers into Lebanon at the urgent request of former President Camille Chamoun following the revolt in Iraq.

Britain dispatched 2,500 paratroops and soldiers from garrisons in Cyprus and Kenya to Jordan. Details of the airlift and its route were not disclosed.

In New York the United Nations announced it had arranged with Britain, the United Arab Republic and Lebanon for U.N. personnel to help supervise the air evacuation of the British paratroops.

The announcement said U.N. observers, under command of Maj. Gen. Odd Bull of Norway, will sit in control towers to help supervise the passage of troop carrier planes over the Syrian part of the U.A.R.

Man Breaks Into House, Assaults 18-Year-Old Girl

MOBIILE, Ala. (UPI)I — A husky unshaven man early Saturday raped an 18-year-old girl after breaking into her apartment, police reported.

The victim said she was awakened about 4 a.m. when the man shook her and told her he was going to rape her and take her money.

She said he switched on her radio, tuned it up loudly and warned her not to scream. He assaulted her and took her purse containing $3.

He left, with another threat and after a few minutes she armed herself with a butcher knife and went through her back yard to a telephone where she summoned police.

Officers said the man, described as about 30-35 years old, stocky, with short coarse hair and dressed in a sport shirt and dungarees, forced the front screen door and apparently entered with a skeleton key.

97 Dwellings, 60 Trailers Will Be Sold

The structures are located near the Ozark entrance to the military reservation. They must be removed from the site on or before Jan. 1, to make room for planned construction at the Army aviation center.

Bids will be opened at Mobile, Nov. 6.

Signs Point To Democrat Win In Nov.

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political signposts across the country, checked state by state by The Associated Press, point to strengthened Democratic holds on both Senate and House after the ballots are in Nov. 4.

Some of the signs have been there for months, of course. So the fresh readings, a month before the election, mainly confirm that it is with good reason that Democrats are cantering confidently down autumn political trails.

If the omens are right — and sometimes they aren't — the Democrats seem likely to elbow Republicans out of at least five or six Senate seats and possibly 10 or 12. Their chances look best, though in varying degree, in Arizona, California, Connecticut, Indiana, Maryland, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, which has two contests.

The Democrats command a 49-47 edge in the Senate now. And that doesn't count the seat they picked up in the Maine election last month.

The GOP also dropped a House seat in Maine. It might lose another 10 or 20 in the November election, or even as many as 30 or 40 or more if there is a tremendous Democratic sweep. Best bets for Democratic gains of from one to three or four seats, are in such states as California, Connecticut, Indiana, Michigan and Washington.

Along the way, the Democrats may net another governor or two — they have 29 now to 19 Republicans. They may be able to unhorse Republicans in California, Maryland and Ohio. They have a chance of upsetting a Republican in Nevada. But the Democrats are going to have to fight to keep their men in the statehouses of traditionally Republican Iowa and Kansas.

All in all, the trend coast to coast at this point is Democratic, on the basis of traditional voting habits, scattered polls, and the views of political analysts, writers and experienced AP correspondents in every state.

In fact, Republicans are talking hopefully of Democratic over-confidence — Vice President Richard M. Nixon says this is a big GOP asset — and telling themselves they can retrieve control of the House, at least, if they work hard enough.

Then there is the one, big uncertain element. What will be the effect when President Eisenhower plunges personally into the campaign next week in an attempt to erase Republican apathy and shoulder shrugging?

In the last nonpresidential election four years ago, Eisenhower dived in at the last minute and gave the GOP a lift which unquestionably tightened some races and perhaps tilted a few to the Republicans. But his efforts still weren't enough to salvage a GOP victory and prevent the Democrats from snatching control of Congress from GOP hands.

Nor could the Republicans get Congress back in 1956 when the President won another sweeping, personal triumph.

Thus there have been three Congresses since Eisenhower has been in the White House and two of them have been under Democratic management. And now the Democrats appear to be on the way to making it three out of four.

Along with the evident lack of political power in the presidential coattails, statistical and historical factors also weigh in favor of the Democrats.

Democratic registrations generally have been increasing more than Republicans. Furthermore, the party of the administration in power has lost strength in the House in 10 of the last 11 nonpresidential elections and in the Senate in 9 of the 11.

No particular issues appear to be propelling the Democrats along this line. They talk about foreign policy, the Sherman Adams affair, recession, discontent with administration farm policies among some of the farmers, and a wide range of other topics.

But interest in the election is low over most of the nation. And neither Democrats nor Republicans have been able to come up with any massive national issues capable of pulling voters irresistibly one way or the other.

In the South, Democrats claim and Republicans deny that the integration issue has all but wiped out modest gains the GOP had been marking up in Dixie.

Certainly there isn't any question that Democrats will take all the Senate and governor races in the South, including that of Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas for a third term. Faubus has only nominal Republican opposition.

• HIKE FOR VICARS

LONDON (UPI)—The Most Rev. Dr. Geoffrey F. Fisher, archbishop of Canterbury, announced on Thursday a six shilling (.84) weekly salary increase for Britain's 12,000 Church of England vicars. The archbishop said the average salary of a vicar now was $2,007 a year, plus a rent-free house. He said the wage was not "satisfactory" when compared with the earnings of "other learned professions" but that church commissioners could not authorize bigger increases now.

IT HAPPENED IN AMERICA

Some Of First Teachers In U.S. Virtual Slaves

By G. K. HODENFIELD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the first teachers in colonial America were virtual slaves, working off a term in debtors' prison.

There are many teachers today who insist that times haven't changed a bit.

Perhaps the almost uniquely American attitude of disdain for teachers is the primary reason for this country's teacher shortage. It shows in salary schedules that almost all educators say are too low to lure good teachers into the field and keep them there.

By the latest estimates, U.S. public schools are short some 135,000 qualified teachers. The results are overcrowded classrooms, double sessions, and emergency teachers who aren't really qualified for the job.

The recent report of the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, Inc., said the root problem of the teacher shortage is financial.

"Salaries must be raised, immediately and substantially," the report noted. "Those (teachers) with more than modest financial needs and responsibilities can only solve their problems by becoming administrators, or leaving education altogether."

In 1957-58, the average salary for all classroom teachers was $4,520 a year. But that figure is deceptive. California and New York hire the most teachers, and they pay the highest salaries. That brings the average up.

One out of every four classroom teachers last year received less than $3,500. In eight states the average annual salary of the entire teaching staff was less than $3,500.

KENTUCKY

In three states—North Dakota, Mississippi and Kentucky, one teacher in three was paid less than $2,500 for the school year. The average for all of Mississippi was just over that: $2,525.

If we use the national average of $4,520, it works out to about $120 a week for the school year, or about $86 a week if the salary is supposed to cover a full 12-month period.

On the basis of a 40-hour week, that $120 works out to an even $3 an hour. That's a nice round figure that sounds fairly impressive — but here again the figure is deceptive. The teacher who works a 40-hour week is a rare bird, indeed.

Most surveys show that teachers work anywhere from 50 to 60 hours a week on school chores—teaching, preparing lessons, grading papers, taking tickets at basketball games, chaperoning dances, and organizing and supervising outside activities.

At 50 to 60 hours a week, the pay scale drops to $2 to $2.40 an hour. This is considerably below the pay of the average plumber, carpenter, bricklayer or other skilled workman in the building trades, and even further below the pay scale in most other professions.

HOURLY

These weekly and hourly figures are based on the national annual average of $4,520. If we consider Mississippi's yearly average of $2,520, it comes out to $68 a week for a 37½-week school year, or about $49 a week on a full-year basis. And the hourly rate, even for the school year alone, drops to between $1.13 and $1.36.

To earn this salary, Mississippi requires that a teacher have at least a bachelor's degree from a four-year college or university, with from 18-24 semester hours in professional education courses. Since this pay scale doesn't attract many such teachers, Mississippi and other states have to rely heavily on "emergency" teachers, some of whom have had little more than a high school education.

At the other end of the salary scale sits California, paying its classroom teachers an average annual salary of $5,750. Using the same basis as above, this works out to either $153 or $110 a week.

Even so, California is having trouble finding enough teachers. Officials in other states complain of California raiding parties that scour the plains east of the Rockies, find good teachers and lure them West with the promise of bigger paychecks.

TEACHERS

In any discussion of teachers' salaries, nothing muddies the waters so much as the length of the school year. Someone is sure to say, "I don't think teachers do too badly, considering they work only nine months a year."

And there's no doubt about it, a three-month vacation every year is a very attractive fringe benefit — if you can afford it.

There aren't any exact figures available, but most surveys indicate that two of every three men teachers have to work at summer jobs to make both ends meet. The ratio for women teachers seems to be about one in eight.

That takes some of the gloss off the three-month vacation. So does the requirement in many states that all teachers continue to improve themselves professionally by attending summer school, usually at least once in every four or five years.

Even if they weren't required, summer school courses offer the teacher the only practical way he can advance both professionally and financially.

Russia Plans Two Antarctic Stations Soon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Russia plans to establish two new Antarctic stations during the coming South Polar summer, well-informed scientific circles have told United Press International.

The plans imply that the Russians have modified an earlier project to attempt an overland crossing from Mirny Station by way of the South Pole to the Bellingshausen Sea west in the 1958-59 summer. They still contemplate a crossing on this route in 1959-1960 season.

In the 1958-59 summer, if preparations are completed as scheduled the Russian transcontinental traverse will be made on a route leading from Mirny via the South Pole to a new station which will be established by the ship Lena on the Princess Astrid coast.

SECOND STATION

The other new Russian station will be in a region known as the Ellsworth Highland, inland from the Bellingshausen Sea. Its establishment would await the success of efforts by the Russian ship Ob to penetrate the dangerous ice-laden Bellingshausen area.

The Russians presumably would use an airlift from the Bellingshausen seacoast to an interior point in the Ellsworth Highland during the 1958-59 summer, and the station would be ready for the Mirny - Bellingshausen traverse in 1959-60.

Early in the 1958-59 summer, the Russians will send a supply expedition from Mirny to the present Russian interior station at Vostok. The Vostok station is approximately at latitude 46 degrees 51 minutes and longitude 107 degrees east.

On How To Equip A Dream

By ED MARKAITY

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP)—How do you design equipment for a dream?

That's what engineers at Lear, Inc., are trying to find out. Lear has been commissioned by the Air Force Wright Air Development Center to design and build a model "crew capsule" for a yet undetermined type of space vehicle.

Recently, the self-styled "Wild Scheme Group" finished cockpit mockups requested by the Air Force for hypothetical aircraft of the 1960s.

Both jobs are sort of like building a skyscraper top floor first, or eating a doughnut from the inside out.

The program may cover a crew capsule for a space ship. Or it might be a space station which would orbit around the earth serving as a space-borne landing strip or aircraft carrier.

This is dream-type stuff. One concept of a space station to serve as a base for defense or reconnaissance vehicles is a doughnut-like structure about a city block in diameter. It would orbit the earth at about 22,000 miles.

"When we set out to provide cockpit mockups for the Air Force's hypothetical aircraft, the main problem was to break thinking loose from conventionalism."

"For example," says Olinger, "ask someone to design a new type lawmower. His first thought invariably will be toward some kind of reel-blade arrangement.

"But maybe a mower should be developed to burn off the grass or trim it in some radically different manner."

When they applied this idea to cockpits for aircraft still unborn, they came up with a pilot-manager principle.

Automatic instruments free the pilot from routine flight tasks. The pilot manages, or supervises, instruments which direct the tircraft. This keeps him on a standby basis to cope with unforeseen situations.

'Big Wheel' In Ga. Bombings Is Arrested

22-man grand jury that indicted the five suspects.

Assistant Jury Foreman Robert C. Van Camp said a caller threatened to "kill all of you who indicted those innocent men . . . this is the Confederate underground."

There has been no confirmation of the existance of any such organization and southern Confederate patriot groups have denounced the bombers.

Jury Foreman J. Ben Moore said a caller told him it appeared that Mayor William B. Hartsfield could "get anything he wants" out of the grand jury and that the jury members "are going to pay for it."

Assistant Foreman Van Camp is music director of radio station WB, owned by the Atlanta Newspapers, Inc., which also have been the target of threatening calls. A crowd was gathering around the afternoon Atlanta Journal building but a check showed nothing unusual.

Rabbi Jacob N. Rothschild held the first religious services at the temple Friday night since the Sunday blast knocked an eighteen-foot hole in the rear area, doing $200,000 damage.

Rothschild said the blame for such acts rests not only on the lawless but on "good, decent people who sat idly by and failed to speak and practice the ideals of their religious faith."

"Today our temple; tomorrow a church," the rabbi said. "No one is safe in the jungle of lawlessness."

of the national Democratic party."

He declared the Republicans should have clear sailing in the next presidential race.

"After all," Potter said, "the support of a third party is just a vent for emotion and cannot contribute to good government since a third party candidate could not be elected."

Potter tossed a verbal dart at Chairman Paul Butler of the Democratic national party, when he said:

"The only evidence I see of the national Democratic party in the South is the continuing insults by Chairman Paul Butler at the people of the South and recently particularly toward Louisiana."

The GOP official was referring to Butler's statement that he will continue to recognize Louisiana's Camille Gravel as Democratic national committeeman despite Gravel's ouster by the state committee.

"It is evident," Potter said, "that Mr. Butler likes to have his national committeemen handpicked rather than have them representative of the people of the state."

Other new officers of the women's group include:

Mrs. James Ruell of Lake Charles, first vice-president; Mrs. Eugene Biegenwald of Monroe, 2nd vice-president; Mrs. Ernest Riger Jr. of Covington, 3rd vice-president; Miss Elise Meyer of New Orleans, corresponding secretary and Mrs. Donald Maginnis of New Orleans, treasurer.

Choudrant Boy Struck By Car, Dies In Okla.

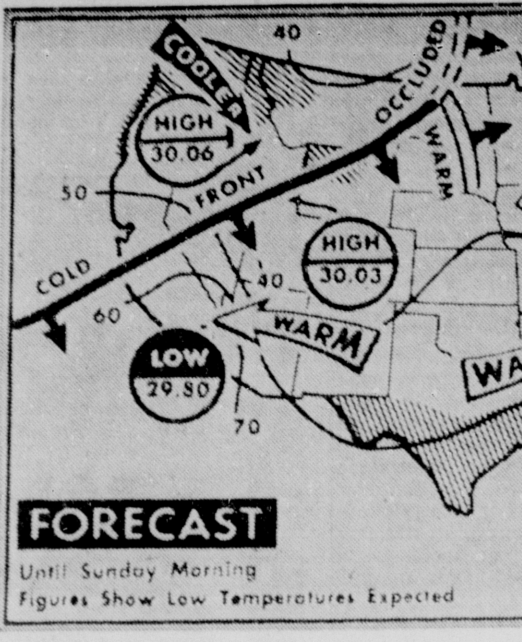
CARNEGIE, Okla. (Special) — Lester David Hancock, 2-year-old son of a Choudrant construction worker, was killed near here Friday when he was struck by an automobile.

The victim was the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hancock. The Hancock family was temporarily living in Carnegie while Hancock was working on a construction job.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete last night, but the body will be brought to Choudrant for final rites.

Among the survivors, besides his parents, are his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Davis of the Downsville community.

An average cow in the United States produces about 6,000 pounds of milk each year.



WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are forecast for the Northwest, western Texas, the Carolinas and higher elevations of Wyoming with light rain along the Gulf coast. The Northwest and the Gulf states will have considerable cloudiness, with clear to partly cloudy weather elsewhere. It will be cooler over the Northwest, the Lakes region, the Ohio and Tennessee valleys and the upper half of the Atlantic coast states. It will continue warm over the South and the Mississippi valley. (AP Wirephoto Map)

TRADE HEAVY

Stocks Emerge To New Record High

NEW YORK (AP)—Stock market trading was the heaviest in 25 years this week as stocks withstood tremendous selling pressure and emerged at a record high.

The week's volume soared to 24,402,570 shares, the largest total since the week ended July 22, 1933 when 42,402,783 shares changed hands.

Average daily trading was 4,880,514 shares. On two sessions turnover climbed well past the five-million-share mark.

The market survived two days of extremely stormy weather, Tuesday and Wednesday. The business news remained favorable. Sharp declines on these days were attributed to profit taking.

The feeling became widespread that now was the time to cash in on big gains. Sooner or later the market was due for a correction and many market analysts believed that a correction was overdue. The market had been rising for eight straight weeks and gone to historic peaks on the four previous weeks.

Most of the selling was attributed to traders and the public rather than to the big institutions which have been the backbone of the market's long rise. In fact, one of the biggest brokerage houses reported that institutions such as mutual funds bought considerably more than they sold during the two days of falling prices.

Free World To Pay Its Final Tribute To Pope

in the church's nine days of deep mourning for its "Pope of Peace." The last of the masses Sunday will be attended by all official representatives of foreign governments.

As she took her place among other dignitaries at the mass, Mrs. Luce smiled slightly in response to nods of recognition from several of the cardinals, including Francis Cardinal Spellman, archbishop of New York.

Some distance from the altar was a catafalque about 10 feet high upon which reposed an empty, symbolic coffin. Surrounding the catafalque were four tiers of lighted candles. On top of the coffin was the three-tiered papal crown.

Brilliantly uniformed Noble Guards, swords at their shoulders, and Swiss Guards in medieval uniforms, holding long halberds, formed the guard of honor.

Those attending were there by invitation. While it was in progress, others were permitted to enter the basilica. Most were tourists, and the routing lectures of their guides could be heard above the low-pitched Latin of the mass.

A considerably larger number will attend the final requiem mass Sunday.

Dulles, accompanied by McCone and Mrs. Luce arrived Saturday morning in a U.S. Air Force jet tanker.

"We are here to represent President Eisenhower at the solemn funeral services Sunday for Pope Pius XII," Dulles said. "We are deeply grieved that the occasion which brings us back to Italy is such a sad one. Pope Pius XII kept faith and justice alive. His passing has saddened the entire world, but his inheritance will never be forgotten."

Table Talk

A local boarding house group, lingering at the dining table after they had finished the meal, got reminiscent as they described bosses they had known. One said: "I thought I'd make a hit with boss one day, so I always got there first in the morning and was the last one to leave at night. Also I always filled a big briefcase before I left.

"For several weeks my boss quietly watched all this. Then he came out with: 'I have watched you for some days, Fred. You stay late, you come early.' I began to puff out my chest a bit. 'You take work home. Either you have too much to do, or you must be highly inefficient.' "

J. Magruder Is Speaker At College Here

The Rev. James Tyler Magruder, teacher in a boys interdenominational school in Japan, will be on the Northeast State campus Monday and Tuesday as a featured speaker and consultant.

Northeast is one of the three colleges in Louisiana which he will visit. From here he will go to Louisiana Tech, then to Northwestern State College.

He will speak to the Northeast religious activities committee of faculty and students Monday at 3 p.m. at the college president's home, and he will address students of all denominations at a meeting that night. Tuesday's schedule includes a Presbyterian faculty fellowship luncheon at the Westminster House, followed by conferences with students. The minister and teacher also will be available late Monday afternoon for student consultation.

Magruder is visiting colleges and universities on behalf of the Student Volunteer Movement to discuss the nature of the Christian mission and students' involvement in the work. At the Monday night meeting he will speak to students on Christian summer service opportunities, especially abroad.

ON STAFF

During the coming year Magruder will be on the staff of the 18th Student Volunteer Movement Quadrennial Conference, serving as secretary. Completing this assignment, he and his wife will return to Japan to do student work in Kobe.

For the past five years the couple have worked in Kobe and Takamatsu, Japan, under auspices of the Presbyterian Church in the United States. Their activities were closely affiliated with the local Christian churches.

Magruder is especially interested in students in Japan. He writes: "Restless in spirit and in search of a new authority, the new post - war generation of that country presents an open frontier and calls for urgent concern and response from the Christian Church."

A native of Virginia, Magruder is a graduate of Washington and Lee University and Union Theological Seminary. During World War II he served for four years.

FAUBUS SAYS

School Corp. Means Business

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Orval E. Faubus said emphatically Saturday Little Rock's plan for private schools is no subterfuge, but an "out and out plan for private segregated schools."

The Little Rock Private School Corp. means business, the governor said. The corporation plans to open classes for white seniors Monday in a move to replace the public high schools closed by Faubus to avoid integration.

The governor's remarks were in reply to a charge Friday by Wiley A. Branton, a Negro attorney for the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

Branton described the private school plan as "merely a subterfuge, in an attempt to evade previous court orders, with which he will deal in due time."

Under Branton's legal attack, the Little Rock School Board has been restrained by federal court from leasing its empty high school buildings to the private school corporation.

The corporation, therefore, was forced to find classrooms elsewhere. When it announced opening plans Friday, the corporation revealed that it had leased a building recently sold by the University of Arkansas to a private individual.

Faubus Saturday had words of praise for plans by Ouachita Baptist College, of Arkadelphia, Ark., to open a high school division here. The Baptists will start registration of students Monday with school scheduled to commence Oct. 27.

Like the private school corporation, the Baptists will admit only white students. No plans have been made for Negro pupils, who also were shut out of their public high school by Faubus' closing order.

"I have no connection with the Baptist plan," said Faubus, a Baptist.

The governor has worked closely with officials of the private corporation and has solicited funds for it in letters bearing his signature.

Three Thousand More Homeless On Tex. Border

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex. (UPI) Three thousand more persons, making a total of 13,000 in less than a week, fled the wildest flood in the Rio Grande's history Saturday.

The churning river, six miles wide at one point, has swamped seven villages and flooded 80 per cent of the land between its levees in the 150 miles between Rio Grande City, Tex., and a point 10 miles north of Brownsville, Tex.

Damage was heaviest on the Mexican side, where 2,500 of the 3,000 who had to abandon their homes fled to the hills with as much furniture and clothing as they could take with them.

The Rio Grande crested in Rio Grande City at 30.1 feet early Saturday and was expected to hit Reynosa, Mexico, early Sunday. Three years ago the river was dry.

About 3,000 persons have left Reynosa in the last two days. Norkmen there were shoving up 24-foot high levees aga nst the flood crest.

12 WOUNDED

NAGOYA, Japan (UPII) — Twelve persons were wounded when a 21-year-old mental patient, worked up by a play about the Samurais (knights) of ancient Japan, ran amok with a butcher knife in a theater here Friday night.

FIRST '59 FORD OWNER—Stephen J. Daigle, Jr., associated with Butler Real Estate Company in West Monroe, was the first of several to buy new '59 Fords when they went on display Friday at Brown-Rivers-Scogin in Monroe and West Monroe. The local Ford officials reported that this year's models gained the greatest immediate public acceptance of any model in the dealership's history. Mr. Daigle's reaction in buying a '59 Ford was fairly typical of the general public. He said, "I looked at all new models and was more impressed with the '59 Ford. I like its smooth, clean cut lines and elegant styling, as opposed to extreme changes. I think it's important that my new station wagon has aluminized mufflers, and it sure looks like the new engine will provide economy of operation. Since our choice of models was a 9-passenger station wagon, we especially preferred having the rear seat face forward. We think this will provide greater safety and comfort for our family." Mr. Daigle is shown left, receiving the keys to his Ford Country Sedan from Mike Smith, Manager, Brown-Rivers-Scogin's West Monroe location, 102 Bridge Street, where the first '59 Ford sale was made.—Adv.

750 Lafayette St. Steps In Mind Of Ike?

DENVER (AP) — Those steps President Eisenhower climbed Saturday as the crowd applauded —they must have brought back a grim memory of a day three years ago.

The last time those porch steps at 750 Lafayette St. figured in the President's life was on Sept. 24, 1955.

That was the day he suffered a heart attack, when, as a gravely ill man, he was helped down those front porch steps to his waiting limousine.

That day—murky and gloomy in contrast to Saturday's brilliant sun—he was supported by aides and doctors as he made his way to the car and was hustled to Fitzsimons Army Hospital.

Now it was all different on Eisenhower's arrival at the home of his ailing mother-in-law, Mrs. John S. Doud, 82.

Whatever the president's thoughts were as he climbed those steps, he gave no indication.

This was his first visit to the Doud home since he left it that September Saturday three years ago.

On hand as his car swung into the driveway were some two or three hundred persons—many of them neighbors of Mrs. Doud, friends who saw a lot of the President during the four summers he vacationed here starting in 1952 as the Republican nominee.

The President stayed 35 minutes and then drove on to a downtown hotel. Mrs. Eisenhower remained with Mrs. Doud.

The President, taking the weekend off before resuming a cross-country political campaign, sent word to newsmen that he planned to take it easy the rest of the day.

Stevenson Says He Favors U.S., Russian Talks

MILWAUKEE, (AP) — Adlai Stevenson said Saturday night America "should be ready to talk with the Russians at every level."

"We must not hope for too much from these talks," Stevenson told a Democratic party rally.

The aim, he said, should be "to keep communication open, to exchange views, to break down if we can, little by little, the barriers of ignorance that divide us."

In a political campaign address prepared for a one-dollar a head bean dinner to help Wisconsin candidates, the former Democratic presidential candidate attacked sharply what he termed a lack of U. S. national leadership.

"The tragedy of the Eisenhower administration is that its only weapons seem to be platitudes or paratroops," Stevenson said.

"And this seems to be true whether the situation is Little Rock or Lebanon, South America or Quemoy."

Stevenson charged that Eisenhower leadership was lacking especially in "that great national undertaking in racial equality decreed by the Supreme Court."

"Indeed, he has refused even to endorse the moral rightness of the Supreme Court on desegregation."

SPECIAL CHIMNEY

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Vatican workmen at Sistine Chapel Saturday put on the special chimney which will carry the plumes of smoke announcing the results of balloting on the new Pope.

A new stove was installed inside the chapel Friday. It will be used to burn the ballots cast by the college of Cardinals when it begins its conclave a week from today.

Paul Martin Looks 'Em Over

Of the two great questions facing our nation's institutions of higher learning today: "How to catch up with the Russians?" and "What to do about football?" —there is some disagreement as to which is the more important. Of course, any old grad knows that first things come first - - - namely, winning that game Sat.

There is little disagreement, however, about which problem is easier to solve. All it takes to catch up with the Russians is a few Einsteins. All it takes to solve football's ills is the wisdom of Solomon, the patience of Job and the power of a czar, all rather hard to get on today's market.

A recent editorial in a national sports magazine revises an old solution to football's troubles — paying the players. Paying them in the light of day, that is. An unnamed prominent coach is said to be advocating this plan. The NCAA would set up a standard salary to be offered by every college in the country and overzealous recruiting would be ended since every coach would have the same offer to make and, all other things being equal, athletes would naturally matriculate to the college that is best suited to him scholastically and geographically.

The loophole in this solution is obvious. Players are paid now, only they call them scholarships, and most schools are in agreement on what can be legally offered a player. All the schools in the Southeastern Conference, for example, have a standard scholarship but somebody is always trying to get that extra edge with under - the - table fringe benefits. They'll continue to try for that extra edge whether the legal payoff is in the form of scholarships, cold cash or Impala convertibles.

However, the above - mentioned coach thinks the cash - on - the - barrelhead system will stop the shady deals. For one thing, he says, the colleges will be putting out as much cash as they care to already and enforcement would be stern enough to "give pause for thought to every college possessing the slightest shred of pride in its reputation."

Well, a lot of colleges, under alumni pressure, are putting out more money now on sports than they care to and as for pride, it usually runs a poor second to a bowl bid.

About the only two ideas we've ever heard of along this line that make sense are not original with us and have been kicked around for some time by sports writers and coaches. One would make a letter of intent binding on every college in the country. Using the SEC for an example again, an athlete who signs a letter of intent with a member school cannot play for any other school in the conference. However, he may jump to a Southwest Conference

The nonbreakable letter of intent plan, espoused by Notre Dame's Terry Brennan among others, would end Aug. 31 recruiting raids. But what's to stop the under - the - table deals? Here's where idea No. 2 comes in. It would hold the athletes involved responsible for illegal payment. If ace halfback Joe Twinkletoes is discovered to have received a fancy swimming pool for showing up for practice, Joe would be stripped of his scholarship and stripped of his scholarship and barred from intercollegiate athletics. Thus a kin would think twice before hopping on the gravy train with such a derailment possible.

Small colleges may say, with the letter of intent binding all over the country, the big schools will get more than their share of the crop and keep them sitting on the bench for four years. We believe the small school will be better off than ever because most boys will take the little college and probable stardom rather than the big school and a possible four years of oblivion on the bench.

There are also those who say boys should not be penalized for a situation they did not create. True, but greedy athletes are more than innocent bystanders even if over - demanding fans are the root of the problem. The athlete who accepts more than the legal minimum wasn't forced to take it, you know.

These and a thousand other rules won't solve football's problems as long as people demand winning teams and are willing to pay for them, whatever the price. But they may at least bring a situation under control that makes the corruption of old Rome seem tame.

Bastrop's energetic baseball enthusiast, Leonard Pratt, is tackling a big job — promoting an amateur baseball league. Pratt envisions a northeast Louisiana and southern Arkansas loop with Bastrop, Farmerville, West Monroe, Monroe, Rayville, Delhi, Tallulah, Crossett, Lake Providence, Oak Grove and Hamburg as prospective members. He hopes to get eight of these towns in a strictly amateur league with games on week nights and Sunday afternoons.

It'll be a great thing if he can pull it off. More about this next week.

Indians Upset McNeese, 29-14

Stay In Thick Of GSC Race With Big Win

LAKE CHARLES, La. (Special) —Quarterback Everett Reynolds steered the Northeast Indians to an important 29-14 upset Gulf States Conference victory over the McNeese Cowboys here last night.

The win was the second in conference play for the undefeated Indians, keeping them high in the 1958 title race. McNeese suffered its second GSC defeat of the season and is now just about out of the running.

Reynolds engineered four Northeast touchdown drives and had a direct hand in the scoring of 20 points.

Reynolds passed 31 yards to Joe Driskill for one touchdown in the second quarter and then ran seven yards for another in the same period. Reynolds passed to Driskill for two points after the final touchdown.

However, the Indians had to battle from 14-13 halftime deficit to pull out the victory. Reynolds tallied the clinching touchdown with 2½ minutes of the third period remaining on a one - yard run around right end. The run capped a 66 - yard march that consumed 13 plays.

Northeast padded its winning margin with a four - quarter safety and another touchdown. The safety was marked up when McNeese quaretrback Sammy Stribling stepped out of the end zone on a forward pass attempt.

The game's final touchdown was scored in the fading minutes on a one - yard plunge by Terry Head. Head had set up the score two plays earlier with a 31 - yard sprint to the McNeese two.

McNeese jumped off to an early lead when halfback Wally Delia sprinted 70 yards for a touchdown on the sixth play of the game. Stribling's attempt to pass for the extra points failed.

Then Reynolds and his Indian teammates rolled into high gear in the second quarter. Northeast drove 63 yards in 12 plays to score its first touchdown and 53 yards in 15 plays for its second. Jim Laudadio kicked the point after the first touchdown.

McNeese posted its 14-13 halftime margin on a one - yard touchdown run by Harold Thomas and Stribling's run for the two extra points.

Reynolds completed three of five passes for 63 yards and gained 41 yards rushing in 11 carries. He topped a fine performance by punting four times for a 43.3 average.

Head, with 50 yards in 7 carries, and Stewart "Smokey" Stovner, with 47 in 17, were Northeast's other main offensive threats.

On defense, the Indians were paced by tackle Luther French, center, Bill McGraw, guards Wally Cox and Alfred Feeney and ends Joe Driskill and Jim Knox.

Booming Bengals Bounce Kentucky Wildcats, 32-7

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR.

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Billy Cannon's two touchdowns triggered a second half Louisiana State drive that crushed Kentucky 32-7 Saturday night as the Tigers won their fifth game before a record 65,000 fans.

Cannon slashed 19 yards and 2 yards for touchdowns as LSU, ninth ranked in the Associated Press poll, won its second Southeastern Conference victory. Kentucky now has won two and lost three.

Cannon, all-America halfback candidate, gained 108 yards in 12 carries for a nine-yard average.

Quarterbacks Warren Rabb and Durel Matherne chipped in with a potent passing attack good for two touchdowns. Rabb completed a 19-yard pass to end Billy Hendrix in the second quarter to put LSU ahead to stay. Hendrix made a great catch, snatching the ball away from three Wildcat defenders. Matherne pitched five yards to end Don Norwood in the third quarter.

Rabb completed six of nine passes for 50 yards and Matherne connected on four of seven for 71 yards.

Kentucky was handicapped by an injury to quarterback Lowell Hughes, the SEC's leading passer. Hughes played briefly in the third quarter and threw only one incomplete pass.

LSU marched 59 yards in 11 plays after the opening kickoff for a touchdown. Fullback J. W. Brodnax dove over from the two for the score and fullback Tommy Davis kicked the extra point.

Kentucky matched by moving 66 yards after the next kickoff, with

Eisaman connected 24 and 17 yards to halfback Calvin Bird, top receiver in the SEC, to keep the scoring drive rolling.

But LSU took over in the second quarter and Kentucky never seriously threatened again.

Davis rolled a kick out on the Kentucky one. When the Wildcats kicked out, Cannon raced 15 yards to the Kentucky 30. LSU arched to the Kentucky six before losing the ball on a fumble.

The Tigers took the next Kentucky kick and hammered 53 yards in six plays for a touchdown.

Rabb faked a pass and ran 17 yards and connected on a 13-yard pass to Cannon to keep the drive moving.

The scoring play was a 19-yard heave to Hendrix, who was surrounded by Wildcats on the six. The end grabbed the ball, tore away from three defenders and scored to put LSU ahead.

Kentucky fumbled and lost the ball to LSU on the Wildcats 24 on the first play of the second half. End Mickey Mangham recovered for the Tigers. Cannon scored from the 19 one play later.

After that, it was no contest. LSU limited Kentucky to 33 yards rushing and held Kentucky's top ball carrier, halfback Bobby Cravens to a net gain of five yards in four tries.

Kentucky netted 40 yards rushing in the first half but was held to a net seven yards loss after the rest period.

Kentucky connected on two of five passes for 41 yards in the first half, adding eight more completions in 16 tries and 61 yards in the second half.

Davis averaged 47 yards in three kicks for the Tigers, as did end Doug Shively for Kentucky.

Tech took the opening kickoff, and drove to the NSC 28 where the drive stalled. J. W. Slack shortly thereafter intercepted a Demon pass on Tech 25 and returned it to the NSC 32. Max Rudd, Jack Howard and David Williamson alternated in carrying the ball to the two from where Rudd di d over. When NSC was offside on the placement try, Rudd ran over for the two extra points.

NSC took the ensuing kickoff and drove 85 yards for a touchdown. Ralph Conrad and Charley Tolar did the bulk of the ball carrying. Included in the drive was 20-yard pass from Hoffpauir to Conrad and a 7-yarder to Booth. Tolar went over from the three for the score. A pass for the extra point was batted down.

After the half, Tech scored in the first three minutes of the third quarter when end Charles Garris recovered a fumble on the Demon 37, Paul Hynes sprinted 37 on the first play for the score. Howard's kick was no good.

NSC retaliated quickly, moving 80 yards for a TD. Hoffpauir mixed passes with Tolar's running. He passed 7 and 13 yards to Booth and 13 and 6 yards to end George Smith. The touchdown came with 6:40 left in the third period when Don Deen went over from the one. Conrad's run for the extra point was no good.

Tech then drove to the Northwestern 22 where the drive stalled.

In the fourth period, NSC drove to the Tech three before fumbling and Rudd recovered for Tech. Tech, unable to move, punted out to the Tech 37. Hoffpauir passed 31 yards to Tolar to put the ball on the six. Conrad went to the two and Hoffpauir threw to Booth for the touchdown to win it. Hoffpauir's run for the extra point was no good.

Tech took the kickoff and moved to its own 47 before time ran out.

FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

Giants Fall In Saturday Upsets

By ED CORRIGAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Wisconsin, Michigan State, Navy and Oregon met their Waterloos in college football Saturday. Auburn barely escaped. And little Maine, which usually doesn't have much to brag about, blew a chance to become the first team in the country to wrap up a conference championship.

But other top outfits, like Army, Ohio State, Notre Dame and Oklahoma—the latter two desperately seeking to regain lost prestige from defeats a week ago—came through.

Wisconsin, which hasn't won undisputed possession of the Big 10 title since 1912 and had run up a winning streak of three, was dumped by Iowa 20-0.

The Badgers had been thinking in terms of a championship, but this defeat coupled with a rough schedule ahead, could discourage them.

Purdue chopped down Michigan State 14-6 and struck a telling blow to the Spartans' chances of winning the Big 10 crown. This marked the fourth time in their last six games that Purdue, practically always an underdog, has whipped Michigan State.

Navy was ambushed by Tulane 14-6 with quarterback Richie Petibon directing the attack. This was the Middies' first defeat, and dimmed their chances of winning the Eastern title from the likes of Army and Pitt.

Northwestern stunned Michigan 55-24. It marked one of the worst beatings ever inflicted on the Wolverines. The amazing Wildcats, who didn't win a game last year, now have won four straight and the rest of the Big 10 is beginning to sit up and take notice.

As for Maine, well, a victory over Connecticut would have settled the Yankee Conference championship. Maine already had won four straight. But it was not to be, at least this week. Connecticut won 21-6.

The big upset in the Pacific Coast Conference involved Oregon, which dropped a 6-0 decision to Washington State. The Ducks, winners of the championship last year, appeared ready to make a runaway of the league.

As for Auburn, the Tigers, national champions last year and currently rated No. 2 behind Army in The Associated Press poll, got off with no better than a 7-7 deadlock against Georgia Tech.

Thus Auburn's string of 17 straight victories was snapped, although the record now stands at 18 games in a row without a defeat. The game figured to be a battle of defense and it was.

Army, hampered by fumbles in the first half, recovered its balance and ground out a 35-6 victory over Virginia. Joe Caldwell, who played only two minutes last season, and Bob Anderson handled most of the running and passing for the West Pointers.

Ohio State, third ranked in the AP poll, continued in the favorite's role in the Big 10 by trouncing Indiana 49-8 while Notre Dame squeaked past Duke 9-7. Oklahoma slaughtered Kansas, 43-0, for its 66th consecutive Big 8 defeatless game. Two ties were included.

7-0 VICTORY

Oklahoma State Upsets Houston

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Oklahoma State moved 39 yards for a first half touchdown Saturday night and then called on a magnificent fourth quarter defense to protect a 7-0 lead and knock Houston from the ranks of the undefeated.

A two-touchdown underdog, State's Cowpokes turned a fumble recovery into a 39-yard scoring drive and then stopped second half Houston surges on the State 20, 37, 1, 7, and 22 yard lines.

The hard charging State line disrupted a Houston offense that had averaged 401 yards and 39 points in three games.

Dan Wagner, third string senior quarterback, plunged over for the lone touchdown on the first play after he had hit end Billy Dodson with a 23-yard pass to the 10. End Jim Wood converted.

Houston, ranked No. 15 in the nation after defeating Texas A&M Cincinnati and Wichita, also missed on first half chances that advanced to the State 24 and 27.

In fighting off the second half Houston threats, State ran only 13 scrimmage plays and did not cross midfield until end Don Hitt clinched the victory by intercepting a pass and returning 26 yards to the Houston 27 with just two minutes to play.

Houston's best opportunity came early in the final period when an interference penalty gave the Cougars a first down on the State 5. Four smashes at the middle of the line by quarterback Lonnie Holland failed and the Pokes took over inches from their goal line.

Hawthorn In Top Position In Grand Prix

CASABLANCA (AP) — Mike Hawthorn Saturday piloted his big red Ferrari around the ANFA Course at an average of 118.6 m.p.h. and won the No. 1 starting position for Sunday's Grand Prix of Morocco.

Hawthorn was timed in 2 minutes, 23.1 seconds for the circuit which measures 4.71 miles, a new lap record. Juan Manuel Fangio's best time last year, which was the lap record, was 2 minutes 25.6 seconds for an average of 116.5 m.p.h.

Stirling Moss of Great Britain, the only man who has a chance to catch Hawthorn in the race for the world driving championship, took the second position with his Vanwall in 2 minutes, 23.2 seconds.

The Grand Prix of Morocco is the last of the year counting for the driving championship. If Moss is to win he must win the race and turn in the fastest lap. Even if he does this, Hawthorn can still win by finishing second.

Other times in the second day of trials included:

Lewis Evans, Great Britain, Vanwall, 2 minutes 23.7 seconds; Jean Behra, France BRM, 2 minutes 23.8 seconds; Phil Hill, Los Angeles, Ferrari, 2 minutes 24.1 seconds; Olivier Gendebien, Belgium, Ferrari, 2 minutes 24.3 seconds; Tony Brooks, Great Britain, Vanwall, 2 minutes 24.4 seconds; Joachim Bonnier, Sweden, BRM, 2 minutes 24.9 seconds.

VMI Captures 13-12 Triumph

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Virginia Military Institute converted two Tampa bobbles for second quarter touchdowns and held on for a rain-soaked 13-12 victory Saturday night.

A conversion by fullback Pete Johnson following the first Keydet score provided VMI with its 13 point margin. It was the school's 15th straight game without a defeat.

Rice Upsets SMU, 13-7, To Tie For Lead

DALLAS (AP) — A 61-yard touchdown run by Pat Bailey and field goals by Bill Bucek and Gordon Speer brought Rice a 13-7 upset victory over Southern Methodist Saturday night and kept the Owls tied for the lead in the Southwest Conference football race.

Southern Methodist, without its great passer, the injured Don Meredith, made a game of it for three quarters and the score was tied at 7-7 when Bucek, who plays defense mostly for Rice while not doing the place-kicking, went in to boot a 19-yard field goal.

Two pass interceptions in the final period ruined SMU's chances, and one of them set up the field goal by Speer. He kicked the ball through from the 30.

A crowd of 39,000 watched Rice, the defending conference champion which wasn't supposed to be a top contender for the crown this year, throw up a magnificent defense, with a line that the Methodists seldom penetrated.

Meredith, injured in the Notre Dame game, didn't even suit up. But it's doubtful that he could have put SMU over even if he had played since so tough was the Owl pass defense when the chips were on the line.

Southern Methodist ran into fumbleitis and the Owls gobbled up all the loose balls they saw flying around. Penalties also hampered the Methodists.

Princeton, 40-13

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP)—Sophomore Hugh Scott, starting his first varsity game because two higher-rated tailbacks were injured, scored the first two touchdowns and guided Princeton to a 40-13 victory over Colgate Saturday. Ray Empson, a 150-pound sub tailback, accounted for two more.

FIRST VICTORY

Spirited Greenies Upset Sixth-Ranked Navy, 14-6

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—A spirited, hard-driving and shifty Tulane football team, spearheaded by quarterback Richie Petitbon, nudged highly favored Navy into the growing ranks of the defeated, 14-6 in the Oyster Bowl game Saturday.

The Greenies, losers in their four previous games, took a 7-0 lead early in the second quarter. The sixth-ranked Middies score a touchdown late in the same period but failed in their bid for two extra points. Tulane then clinched the verdict by scoring a second touchdown on a 66-yard drive midway of the final period.

Petitbon was the big man on both Tulane drives. He called a smart game, ran with vehemence, and did most of his team's passing. His adroit mixing of plays kept the Middies off balance.

Navy had expected a passing attack primarily. Tulane crossed the Middies by sticking to the ground. On the Greenies' 83-yard drive for their first score, they didn't go to the air once.

The Tulane line proved unusually ferocious, and although quarterback Joe Tranchini of Navy completed 10 of 19 tosses, most of them were short gainers.

The one successful Navy offensive was the exception to Tranchini's failure to click on long tosses. Throwing to Joe Bellino and Roland Brandquist, he advanced the ball from the Navy 29 to the Tulane 25, from where he passed to Bellino in the end zone for the Middies' score. Bellino tried to run for two points and failed. Tulane was content to kick for one point after each touchdown.

A first period break on which Navy failed to capitalize possibly set the pattern for the major upset. Tranchini had recovered Tom McClellan's fumble on the Tulane 21 in the first two minutes, but Navy was stymied.

Tranchini passed to Tom Hyde on the 10, but four plays later the ball still was on the 10. Tulane took it there on downs, and thereafter, except for the Middies' lone scoring drive, stopped the Navy offense.

In the waning moments of the game, seeing their clean slate on the verge of being badly smudged Navy launched a desperation passing attack, with Jim Maxfield doing the throwing. It was checked in the last 40 seconds as Tommy Mason intercepted a pass on the Tulane goal.

Petitbon, whose play thrilled a record crowd of 32,169, was voted the outstanding player by the press. He was ably assisted in the Tulane offense by Percy Colon, McClelland and Boo Mason.

EL TORO INVOLVED

Tag Bout Heads Kallio Program

EL TORO

Good guys Bill Barney, Jack and George Curtis will face Toro, Gypsy Joe and Viva Zapata in the 90-minute limit main event on the three - bout card. A couple of short preliminaries will open the program at 8:15.

Gypsy and Zapata appeared here last week with Joe beating George Curtis for the second time and Zapata paired with Ronny Lee in a losing effort against Jack Curtis and Barney.

El Toro, a masked bruiser, packs his 254 pounds on a 5-11½ frame. His chest measures 58 inches, his waist 38 neck 22, thighs 31, calves 19 and biceps 19. His shoulders measure almost three feet across.

Toro's publicity claims he has never been defeated or unmasked. Fast as well as powerful, he uses a deadly elbow smash to good advantage. He has beaten such outstanding grapplers as Georgie Becker, Baron Michele Leone, Nature Boy Buddy Rogers, Yukon Eric, Bull Curry, Rebel Bob Russell, and Frank Sexton.

Promoter Gus Kallio is reviving his offer of $100 to a Louisiana native who can defeat Bill Barney, the state champion, as well as his offer of the same amount of money to the Louisiana girl who can best Monroe's Marjorie Ramsey.

Pitt Passes Give Victory Over W. Va.

By GEORGE ESPER

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pitt cashed in a freak fumble for a touchdown Saturday to beat West Virginia 15-8 before a crowd of 42,269. Both Pitt touchdowns came on passes, one of them a 71-yard play.

The 51st renewal of the football series lacked some of the lustre of previous games but packed a thrill in the closing seconds as West Virginia drove to the Panther 6-yard line on four pass plays that covered 93 yards. With time left for only one play quarterback Chuck Simpson again went to the air and Ivan Toncic intercepted for Pitt in the end zone as the gun sounded.

West Virginia scored first, grabbing John Flara's fumble on the Pitt 3-yard line. Danny Williams cut over right tackle on second down for the score and passed to Dave Rider for a two-point conversion that gave the Mountaineers an 8-0 first quarter lead.

Pitt struck in the second period on a 71-yard pass and run with Toncic throwing to Flara, a speedy halfback. Flara was behind the Mountaineer defense and Toncic's high arching throw led him perfectly at the 35 yard line. Bill Kaliden passed to Mike Ditga for the two points that knotted the score.

In the third period Pitt marched 64 yards in 10 plays, Dick Haley taking a short pass from Toncic and completing an 8-yard scoring play.

Marty Baracca kicked the final point.

But it was the oddity of the game that made this touchdown possible. Pitt was driving when Toncic passed toward Art Gob on the West Virginia 10. John Bowles intercepted for West Virginia but fumbled as he was tackled and Gob recovered for a vital first down. Pitt scored in just two plays.

TCU Defeats Aggies By 24-8 Margin

By FRANK N. MANITZAS

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP)—Texas Christian put together a strong offense to defeat Texas A&M 24-8 in a Southwest Conference game Saturday.

The Aggies looked flashy at times, especially on passing by Charlie Milstead and Ed Dudley with end John Tracey making some brilliant catches. But a tight Frog defense squelched two scoring opportunities in the first half.

Coach Abe Martin of TCU used three units successfully in the scoring parade.

Third unit men Carlos Vacek and Harry Moreland sparked two Horned Frog touchdown drives. Vacek carried the ball four out of five times in a 40-yard drive to score from two yards out. Moreland skipped his way through the Aggies on a 45-yard punt return to score.

Tulsa Tramples Drake In Rout

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—Tulsa halfback Ronnie Morris ran the opening kickoff 93 yards for a touchdown and moments later returned a punt for 80 and a second score to set the pattern of a 59-0 rout of outclassed Drake Saturday.

Tulsa Coach Bobby Dobbs had third stringers on the field well before the half ended 33-0.

Penn Wins First

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Penn's Quakers came from behind with two fourth period touchdowns and halted a Brown try for a conversion to gain their first win of the year Saturday 21-20.

Purdue Knocks Spartans From Big Ten Race, 14-6

By DALE BURGESS

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Purdue's Boilermakers, perennial spoilers of Michigan State football seasons, virtually knocked the Spartans out of the Big Ten race Saturday 14-6.

Snarling back from a defeat by Wisconsin last week, Purdue upset Michigan State just as it did last year with ferocious line play that held the Spartans to a miserable 38 yards by rushing and only 65 in the air.

Purdue stymied the varies Spartan offense so completely that Michigan State failed to capitalize on five recoveries of Boilermaker fumbles.

The only Spartan touchdown was pretty much a gift, although Larry Bielat's 11 - yard scoring pass to Dick Barker was a beauty. It came in the second quarter after Purdue lost the ball at its 12 on a fourth down bad pass from center.

Purdue immediately drove 59 yards for a touchdown, halfback Leonard Wilson going the last five yards, and the teams carried a 6-6 tie into the second half. Michigan State missed on a conversion pass, but its Ellison Kelly blocked Bob Spoo's extra - point kick for Purdue.

The Boilermakers wraped it up in the third quarter, blasting 53 yards in spite of a fumble punt and a 15-yard penalty. Bob Jarus plunged the last foot, but the big gainer was a 30-yard pass from Ross Fichtner to end Dick Brooks.

Purdue's big two-point conversion, which forced Michigan State to gamble the rest of the way, was a dazzler. Spoo pitched out to Fichtner, who passed to Brooks in the end zone.

Purdue has beaten Michigan State four times in their last six meetings, cutting a 28-game winning string for the Spartans in 1953 and knocking them out of No. 1 national rating last year.

In spite of the fumbles and losing the ball twice on pass interceptions, the Boilermakers completely dominated the game. They gained 223 yards net from scrimmage to Michigan State's 103, got 12 first downs to the Spartans' 8.

Michigan State used 10 ball carriers, and five of them wound up with a net loss.

Purdue had balance — Fichtner picking up 49 yards, Jarus 45, and Wilson 43. Roger Donnahoo and Al Luplow led Michigan State with 37 and 33, respectively.

Sam Williams, the Spartans' giant left end, was outstanding in defeat but was at least matched by Brooks on both offense and defense.

BADGERS RANKED FOURTH

Iowa Upsets Wisconsin, 20-9, In Big Ten Scrap

By CHUCK CAPALDO

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Iowa turned tiger in the second half Saturday after trailing 9-0 and ruined fourth-ranked Wisconsin's perfect slate with a 20-9 Big Ten football triumph sweetened by key fumble recoveries by Kevin Furlong and Jeff Langston.

A howling crowd of 65,241, largest ever to watch a football game in Wisconsin, witnessed the Hawkeyes' abrupt about-face over the favored Badgers in jam-packed Camp Randall Stadium.

The victory—padded by a spectacular 68-yard touchdown pass play from Randy Duncan to Bob Jeter in the fourth quarter—gave Iowa a 2-0 Big Ten record and visions of the title which it won last in 1956.

A 13-13 tie with the Air Force Academy mars Iowa's otherwise impressive record.

Iowa, in ringing up its first decision here since 1946, handed Wisconsin its first loss after six impressive victories, three of them this season. Wisconsin is 1-1 in conference play.

Iowa seemed doomed to a one-sided setback after the first 30 minutes of play, but the halftime interlude with Coach Forest Evashevski worked wonders.

Wtih only 3:45 gone Duncan cashed in on the fumble—first loss by the Badgers this season—by plunging over from about six inches out. Bob Prescott hit the first of his two conversions.

The Hawkeyes put over the clincher in jig time in the fourth quarter, Duncan hitting the jet-like Jeter with a three-yard screen pass. Jeter then took off like a rocket down the sideline on a 65-yard touchdown run—first against Wisconsin this year by passing.

Wisconsin, favored by six points in some quarters, started out as it has in earlier games — pouncing on a mistake of its opponents and turning it into points. This time, on the game's first play from scrimmage, Jim Heineke intercepted Duncan's pass on Iowa's 41 while crouching on the ground. With 5:16 gone, Paul Shwaiko booted a field goal from the 15—the 7th of his career—to stake the Badgers to a 3-0 lead.

Hackbart and Ron Steiner combined to make it 9-0 Wisconsin in the second quarter on a 31-yard play.

Duncan, who didn't complete a pass for the first 25 minutes of play, finished up with a flourish for a fair completion record of 6 for 18, good for 135 yards. But in the final analysis it was his backfield horses and alert defensive corps that turned the tide.

Dorn Horn accounted for 41 yards on 10 carries; Ray Jauch, 34 on 9; Jeter 38 on 6; and Furlong 38 on 8.

Iowa, which now has beaten Wisconsin three straight times, including twice at Iowa City, outgained the Badgers 317-288. All told, the usually sure-fingered Badgers lost four of seven fumbles while the Hawks surrendered the ball only once on a fumble.

Wisconsin had run up 101 points against six points, scored against it in the Badgers three previous games.

ACC GAME

Tar Heels Turn Back Terps, 27-0

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Quarterback Jack Cummings rifled two touchdown passes to set the pace as improved North Carolina routed Maryland 27-0 here Saturday in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game televised over a regional network.

A homecoming day crowd of 25,000 saw Coach Jim Tatum's Tar Heels strike 60, 80 and 70 yards for touchdowns and add another on a 46-yard runback of a pass interception by end Al Goldstein.

Maryland, bottled up by the sout Tar Heel defense, reached North Carolina's 28 as the half ended. Another Terps' drive went south Tar Heel 24 in the last period.

North Carolina went 60 yards for a touchdown in eight plays the first time it got possession early in the opening period. Fullback Ed Lipski went over from the 4. In the second period, Cummings flipped a 19-yard touchdown pass to end John Schroeder to climax an 80-yard drive.

Late in the second period, Goldstein intercepted a pass by Maryland's Bob Russevlyan and raced 46 yards to score.

The Tar Heels, who now have a 3-2 season record, got rolling again late in the fourth quarter, driving 70 yards, with Cummings passing six yards to Danny Droze for a touchdown.

A 33-yard pass play from Cummings to halfback Wade Smith featured the first touchdown drive. The same combination clicked for 39 yards on the second scoring march.

Cummings, a 183-pound junior from Lower Merion, Pa., turned in one of his best performances. He completed nine of 13 passes for 151 yards. Halfback Emil Decantis led the Tar Heel rushing with 67 yards in six carries.

Russevlyan sparked Maryland's attack with 13 pass completions in 21 attempts for 126 yards. The teams were even in first downs with 16 each. It was Maryland's fourth loss against one win over North Carolina State, a team that defeated the Tar Heels.

The Tar Heels drove from their 47 to Maryland's 9 in the second period and appeared headed for a sure touchdown when halfback Sonny Folckomer fumbled and Maryland end Ron Shaffer recovered on his 7.

The pass interception by Goldstein was a freakish play. Russevlyan dropped back to pass and as he cut loose, Goldstein hit his arm. The ball shot up into the air and Goldstein grabbed it, and took off for the touchdown.

Texas Still Wins; Beats Ark. 24 To 6

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Rene Ramirez, a limber Latin, scampered 52 yards on a touchdown jaunt in the second quarter to fire up undefeated Texas to a 24-6 Southwest Conference victory over Arkansas Saturday night.

Ramirez' startling bolt was the longest scrimmage for a Texas back since 1954 and came after the Razorbacks had moved in front on a short touchdown drive.

It was the first Southwest Conference game for Texas and was the fifth loss of the year for the Porkers. Some 46,000 watched.

Texas mixed its running and passing games effectively against the light Arkansas line. But the Longhorns looked flat in the first period when the slippery Porker backs churned 103 yards rushing. After Ramirez' run, Texas appeared to be a different club.

Alternate quarterback Vince Matthews' passing set up a field goal try in the second period after thundering Mike Dowdle had scored from the 2. Dowdle's score followed a 35-yard drive which began with Dowdle recovering a Hog fumble on the 35.

With time running out, James Shillingburg, 210-pound tackle, came in to boot a 19-yard field goal.

Texas tacked on its last score after taking a short Arkansas punt on the 37. Two running plays netted five and Matthews hit end Roy Goodman for nine on the 23. Halfback Bobby Matocha ploughed to the 14 and then Matthews found Goodman in the end zone for the score.

Wildcats Top Southwestern By 27-8 Count

ABILENE, Tex. (AP)—The Abilene Christian College Wildcats scored two quick first quarter touchdowns and went on to defeat Southwestern Louisiana Institute 27-8 here Saturday.

Quarterback H. P. Hawkins passed 39 yards to end Keith Davis for the first score in the first three minutes of the game. Fullback Bill Lovelace climaxed a 63-yard drive with an 8-yard touchdown run for the second score of the first quarter. Moody Conner converted for a 13-0 lead.

SLI came back in the second quarter with a 60-yard drive which found fullback Ronnie Roberts scoring from the 3. Halfback Steve Gossen ran for the conversion to make it 13-8 at the half.

Abilene Christian scored two insurance touchdowns in the last half. Quarterback Don Harber passed 19 yards to end Don Raney for one score, and Lovelace ran 19 yards for the other. Hawkins ran for two points after the final touchdown which came in the fourth quarter.

Jay Hebert Cops Lead At Franklin

FRANKLIN, La. (AP) — Jay Hebert, one of the top money winners this year, fired a 5-under par 65 and took the lead Saturday in the second round of the Louisiana Open and Louisiana Professional Golfers Organization tournament.

The blistering round, on a course improved by softening rain Friday, saw Hebert birdie five holes on the front nine for a 30 total and make par 35 on the return.

Lionel Hebert of Lafayette, Jay's brother was in third place after breaking even on the 6,262-yard par 70 Belleview Country Club course Saturday for a 69-70—139 card.

Two Lafayette amateurs battled in fourth place with a tie at 140. They were Luca Barbato and Shirley Picard. Barbato added a 67 to his 73 and Picard had two 70s.

Bert Weaver of Beaumont, Tex., was sixth with 141, and Vernon Thwaites, of Covington, who was tied for first going into the second round, was one stroke back at 142.

The field was cut from 62 to 41 professionals and amateur golfers for Sunday's final round.

Syracuse In 38-0 Rout Of Cornhuskers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Two powerful Syracuse football units pounded Nebraska into submission 38-0 before 22,000 spectators here Saturday.

The Orange scored in each quarter and allowed the Big Eight visitors to touch Syracuse turf only three times.

The triumph was the third of the season for the host eleven against one setback. Nebraska now has a record of two wins and three defeats.

Syracuse scores came on drives of 68, 43, 13, 52 and three yards.

For the second week in a row, the Syracuse bench was being cleared of substitutes as the game drew to a close.

The game concluded a two-year contract and gave Syracuse a 5-4 edge in the series which began in 1917.

Bears Turn Fumbles Into 14-12 Victory

By BOB MYERS

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Quarterback Joe Kapp guided California's second step toward the Rose Bowl Saturday as the Golden Bears knocked off the fumbling Trojans of Southern California 14-12.

The victory was the first for California over Southern Cal in eight years in Memorial Coliseum. A crowd of 34,872 saw the Berkeley team chalk up its second Pacific Coast Conference triumph against no defeats.

The artistic technique of Kapp—running, passing and punting—spelled success, but five Trojan fumbles added to the California cause.

All five of the bobbles were recovered by California and one set up the first Bear touchdown.

The Bears took the lead in the first quarter, led 14-6 at the half and never were behind.

Southern California, with halfback Angelo Coia carrying much of the load, provided some thrills for their supporters in the second half. The Golden Bear defense was woefully weak.

Kapp was promptly thrown back to the 15-5yard line on a pass attempt but the Trojans were guilty of piling on and the ball went back to the 1.

Fullback Bill Patton smashed through from that point and the Bears were on the way.

Air Academy Turns Back Stanford, 16-0

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Striking for a touchdown the first time they got the ball, the Air Force Academy Falcons maintained their undefeated record with a 16-0 victory over Stanford Saturday.

After halfback Mike Quinlan plunged two yards for the score with the first quarter at its midway point, the crowd of 40,000 saw the battle develop into a defensive struggle for two periods marred by frequent fumbles.

Early in the fourth period the Falcons added a 20-yard field goal by George Pupich who previously missed tries from the 28 and 32. Minutes later the Air Force mounted a 66-yard scoring drive, the touchdown coming on a 15-yard pass from reserve quarterback Rich Mayo to fullback Steve Galios.

Should College Professors Be Second Class Citizens?

Perhaps this sounds like a silly question. Yet, judging by the salaries of many college professors, it looks as though we hold them in low esteem. That's why too many of them are leaving their jobs.

What a tragedy!

For today, more than ever before, the future of our country is being shaped by the kind of thinking these men inspire in the classroom.

We must encourage them to stay on. You can do your part. Help the college of your choice now. The rewards will be greater than you think!

QUATERBACKS STAR

Ole Miss Downs Hardin-Simmons

By JAMES SAGGUS

UNIVERSITY, Miss. (AP) — Quarterbacks Bobby Franklin and Billy Brewer guided machine-like Mississippi to a 24-0 football victory over outmanned Hardin-Simmons before 16,500 fans Saturday.

Brewer passed five yards to halfback Jimmy Hall for a first quarter touchdown and Franklin sprinted 23 yards around end in the second quarter to put the game on ice.

Hardin-Simmons fought gamely but had no weapons to match the balanced Mississippi attack that kept the Rebs in complete control throughout.

Although the eighth-ranked Rebels lacked brilliance, they turned in a workmenlike performance that was more than adequate.

Mississippi drove 65 yards in 14 plays for its first touchdown, 74 yards in eight plays for its second and 71 yards in 10 plays for the third, which came on a three-yard burst by Hall.

Robert Khayat kicked the three conversions and added a 29-yard field goal late in the second period.

Hardin-Simmons' only effective weapons were the passing of quarterbacks Jim Tom Butler and Harold Stephens and the running of fullback Pete Hart.

Hardin-Simmons threatened only twice, moving to the 19 in the first quarter and to the 13 in the third.

The first drive featured the passing of Stephens, who completed passes of 8, 24 and 7 yards, and the running of Hart. The march, which started at the H-S 18 with a fumble recovery, ended when Hall intercepted a Stephens' pass on the two and ran it back to the 26.

Butler's passing and Hart's running kept the other threat going from the 21 to the 13. Mississippi took over on downs on its 29 with the aid of a 15 yard penalty to stop the threat.

Mississippi's attack was effective throughout and the Rebs were seldom held for no gain. Coach John Vaught started his second team and Brewer, Hall and sophomore fullback James Anderson kept the push going with consistent gains. The only pass was a touchdown toss to Hall.

The first unit did the damage on the next touchdown with Franklin completing passes of 17 and 13 yards for the key plays before his brilliant scoring sweep.

Franklin's passing and the running of fullback Charlie Flowers sparked the 52-yard drive to the 19 that set up Khayat's field goal.

The final scoring drive was built around the running of Anderson and Hall and the passing of Brewer.

FSU Downs Va. Tech In Rain, 28-0

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Virginia Tech's Gobblers bogged down in the rain and mud Saturday and Florida State drove to a 28-0 win behind the spectacular running of Fred Pickard and Bobby Renn and the passing of Vic Prinzi.

A stout defense thrown up by Florida State's sophomore-studded forward was combined with the elements to hold Tech's Billy Holsclaw, the nation's No. 1 total offense leader, in check in the air and on the ground.

The Seminoles struck for two quick touchdowns in the first half and added an insurance pair in the final quarter.

With Pickard picking up most of the yardage Florida State drove 74 yards on the first series of plays. Halfback Jack Espenship took an 8-yard pass from Prenzi for the touchdown.

On the first play of the second quarter Renn faked a kick, then raced 72 yards for a touchdown.

BIG TEN UPSET

Wildcats Swamp Michigan, 55-24

By JOE MOOSHIL

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Northwestern's unbelievable Wildcats rose to unbelievable heights Saturday in handing Michigan one of its worst beatings in history, 55-24.

It was the fourth straight victory and the second in Big Ten play for the Wildcats, who last year didn't win a game.

Five touchdowns in the second quarter—four within a period of 7 minutes almost demoralized the Wolverines, who entered the game four-point favorites.

Cheers from the crowd of 41,345 turned into uproarious laughter as the Wildcats started turning Michigan errors into touchdowns. Interceptions, fumbles, some great running by Ron Burton and Willmer Fowler, and exceptional ball handling and passing by quarterback Dick Thornton all played a part in the Wildcat victory—one that will be remembered for years.

In Michigan's records, the defeat will go down along with a 40-0 loss to Minnesota in 1935 and a 46-0 loss to Yale in 1883 when the Midwest was still toying with the game of football.

Northwestern's total was the highest ever scored against Michigan, which lays claim to 18 Big Ten championships and has been one of the nation's greatest gridiron powers in the last 50 years.

Northwestern gave an early indication of things to come when the Wildcats kicked off and tossed Michigan for three successive losses, forcing the Wolverines to punt.

On the third play from scrimmage, Thornton hit Burton with a 34-yard pass and a touchdown. Michigan managed to contain Northwestern until the final minutes of the quarter when Fowler tackled Fred Julian in the end zone for a safety.

Then came the slaughter. With Thornton completing two passes for 36 yards, Burton plunged over from the 1 with the second of his three touchdowns. Thornton passed to Elbert Kimbrough for two more points and a 17- lead. Michigan fumbled the next time it got the ball and Northwestern made it 23-0 seven plays later. A 35-yard touchdown run by Thornton after intercepting a pass by John Spidel left no doubt of the outcome.

Before the half ended, Northwestern led, 43-0. It would have been worse if a touchdown on a pass interception by Kimbrough hadn't been called back.

Correction

The Saturday World's story on Block's 28-6 win over Columbia credited several touchdowns to the wrong players. For the record, here's the way the scoring went: Clarence Richard went 15 yards for the first Block touchdown and Tommy White went 11 yards for the second. Then 55 yards for the third, a 35-yard interception; Richard went around end for 25 yards for the third and then up the middle from 12 yards out for the final touchdown; Billy Edwards kicked all four extra points. Butch Darden scored on a five - yard run for Columbia.

The World regrets the errors.

IN MORAL VICTORY

Stubborn Georgia Tech Holds Auburn To 7-7 Tie

By MERCER BAILEY

ATLANTA (AP) — Underdog Georgia Tech threw up an impregnable clutch defense Saturday and held unbeaten Auburn, the nation's second ranked football power, to a 7-7 tie in their Southeastern Conference battle.

Thus the Yellow Jackets gave Auburn a taste of its own medicine—for Auburn's string of 17 straight victories was built on a defense rated the nation's best.

Auburn dominated the first half and scored early in the second period. When Tech crashed through for its touchdown in the fourth quarter, Coach Bobby Dodd played it safe rather than gamble for the two-point conversion, which would have brought victory if good, or defeat if missed.

Tommy Wells, a sophomore kicking specialist, cooly booted the tying point.

In the final seconds of the game, Wells tried a field goal from the Auburn 39 but it was short and off line as the final whistle blew.

But even a tie with the titanic Tigers was hailed as a moral victory for Tech by the capacity crowd of 44,726 and the Yellow Jacket fans went wild.

Until Tech quarterback Fred Braselton intercepted an Auburn pass and returned it 16 yards to the visitors 36, Tech had never seriously threatened. The Jackets were held to a lone first down in the first half.

Two Braselton passes to Frank Nix and Jerome Green took the ball to the Auburn 11. Then Braselton took aim at Jack Rudolph and the Tech end made a falling catch at the one after Auburn's Tommy Lorino tipped the ball into the air but couldn't knock it down.

It took Braselton three quarterback sneaks to ram it the final yard. And that was the first time anyone had scored on Auburn on a ground play from scrimmage since Alabama did it in the final game of the 1956 season.

The flashing feet of Lorino and sophomore fullback Ed Dyas broke Tech's defense briefly in the first quarter. Dyas zipped 18 yards to the Tech 29 and Lorino zigzagged 26 more to the three as the first period ended.

Dyas lugged it two yards into the end zone on the second play of the second quarter, going through a gaping hole opened by tackle Cleve Wester and guard Frank Larussa. Quarterback Lloyd Nix, who kept the pressure on Tech with his deadly roll out option plays, kicked the point.

With giant linemen such as guard Zeke Smith, center Jackie Burkett and end Jerry Wilson, Auburn then dug in and repelled every Tech thrust until Braselton put on his aerial circus. Tech completed eight of 10 passes for 71 yards.

Auburn piled up a lot of yardage on Tech—236 on the ground—but after Tech got its touchdown, the Jackets just wouldn't yield.

The Tigers, desperate now, took to the air but Tech guard Leon Tye intercepted one that enabled Tech to make its last gasp field goal try.

Auburn completed only four of 12 passes for 26 yards. Tech was held to a net of 58 yards rushing.

Sub fullback Jimmy Reynolds was Auburn's top gainer with 55 yards while Dyas had 40, Nix 42 and Lorino 41. Cal James led Tech with 32.

STICKLES STARS

Irish Field Goal Beats Duke, 9-7

By JERRY LISKA

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Monty Stickles, 225-pound end, snagged an 8-yard scoring pass and booted a 23-yard field goal for all penalty-bogged Notre Dame's scoring in a tough 9-7 football triumph over Duke's spry Blue Devils Saturday.

In the first gridiron meeting between the two schools, Notre Dame—a two-touch-down favorite—trailed 7-6 until Stickles booted his perfect three-pointer midway in the third period.

Irish quarterback Bob Williams, who tossed the touchdown shot to Stickles early in the first quarter, also held the ball for the field goal.

Duke's touchdown came later in the first quarter. Quarterback Bob Brodhead looped a neat 4-yard pass to halfback Dane Lee in the end zone. The Blue Devils went ahead 7-6 when Wray Carlton booted the extra point.

Notre Dame had a whopping assessment of 135 yards in penalties, compared with only 10 for Duke which was an alert, scrappy foe all the sunny, pleasant football afternoon.

The Irish, rolling to 266 yards from rushing with sophomore Red Mack carrying the load, bounced back from last week's 14-2 defeat by Army for a 3-1 season record.

Duke, winning its last two starts over Illinois and Baylor after losing to South Carolina and Virginia, now has a 2-3 mark.

Notre Dame started in complete charge of the game, controlling the ball the first 4½ minutes and scoring on a 57-yard drive in five plays.

Prior to Williams' clever aerial shot to Stickles for the game's first score, Mack had scampered 64 yards for a Notre Dame touchdown which was recalled because of Irish holding.

Then Mack started the Irish scoring drive rolling with a 45-yard run to Duke's 13. Four plays later came the payoff toss from Williams to Stickles.

UCLA Whips Washington In PCC Contest

SEATTLE (AP) — The UCLA Bruins generated a head of touchdown steam at the opening kickoff Saturday and combined passes with a slashing defense to whip Washington 20-0 for their first Pacific Coast Conference football victory.

With Don Long and Kirk Wilson pitching, the Bruins put on a spectacular show in the regionally televised tussle. A homecoming day crowd of 33,500 saw six UCLA seniors lose out their half-season of eligibility.

Long was one of the half-dozen and he celebrated the end of his collegiate career with three touchdown passes. The last one, a 9-yard toss to Dick Wallen, was thrown in disdain of an earlier hand injury. Long had been trapped on an intended pass early in the third quarter and his hand was injured when he was smashed down by Washington tacklers on the UCLA 1.

Wilson got the Bruins out of that trouble with a 66-yard quick kick.

UCLA scored in all but the final period, when a roaring wind storm swept through the field and almost stalled proceedings.

The Bruins had the touchdown route well mapped from the start. Thrusting by ground and air, they marched 78 yards in 12 plays to score after the opening kickoff. Long hit Marv Luster with a 22-yard pass for that tally, and in the second quarter targeted Jim Steffen with a 25-yard tally toss.

DAWKINS INJURED

Army Rolls Over Virginia, 35-6

By WILL GRIMSLEY

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP)—Joe Caldwell, a ball-faking Houdini who played only two minutes last year, and bullet Bob Anderson passed and ran Army's top-ranked football team to a 35-6 victory over Virginia Saturday at Michie Stadium.

Hampered by fumbles in the early stages, the Cadets recovered their poise behind their 160-pound quarterback Caldwell and turned what started out as a close game into a rout. The game was so fiercely played that two of Army's stars, halfback-captain Pete Dawkins and fullback Harry Walters, were sent to the sidelines with leg injuries.

The extent of the ailments was not immediately determined.

Caldwell personally scored one of Army's five touchdowns with a six-yard run. He sprinted 39-yard sprint on a fake pass, and sparked two other touchdown drives with accurate passes, one of them a 60-yard toss to the fabled Army "lonesome end," Bill Carpenter.

Anderson, hard-running junior halfback who was the team's chief offensive weapon a year ago but who has been overshadowed most of this season by teammate Dawkins, came into his own with a brilliant display of ball-carrying.

Army's defense, lethargic in the early stages, also finally rose to the occasion by twice stopping Virginia within its 10-yard line in the second half.

Late in the third period, Virginia, led by quarterback Arnold Dempsey and halfback Fred Shepherd, drove to the Cadet's 3-yard line. There Army's line rose up to stop Shepherd three times on running attempts and finally took over the ball on the 55 after knocking down a depserate last-play pass.

Baylor Bears Crush Texas Tech, 26-7

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP)—Baylor, sparked by the slick quarterbacking of Billy Humphrey and the power of fullback Larry Hickman, crushed Texas Tech 26-7 Saturday.

The Bears scored in every quarter but the third to spoil the day for a Dad's Day crowd of 24,000 and give a regional television audience a display of one-sided football.

IIt was Baylor's third victory of the season and gave the Bears a thorough warmup for next week's clash with Texas A&M. Tech's record dropped to 2-3 with the Red Raiders' third straight loss.

Baylor dominated the game completely, keeping Tech on defense in its own territory throughout the game and holding the Red Raiders scoreless until the final minute of play, when a long pass connected for Tech against Baylor's reserves.

Humphrey scored twice and piloted the Bears to a third touchdown before turning the quarterback job over to second and third stringers.

Hickman tallied once, gained yardage steadily in aiding the other Baylor drives and boomed kicks deep into Tech territory on the rare occasions when Baylor had to punt.

The other Baylor score came on a 60-yard pass play in final period, when reserve quarterback Robert Starr, hurling from his own 40 caught halfback Merton Fuquay on the Tech 34 and saw him trot into the end zone.

Third-stringer Ken Talkington passed from inside his own 20 to halfback Mickie Barron on the Baylor 45 and Barron lurched away from the Baylor secondary and reached the end zone with 41 seconds left.

Colorado Turns Back Iowa State

The Buffaloes, the nation's No. 1 offensive team, concentrated mostly on their running game and marched 51, 65 and 50 yards for touchdowns.

The Cyclones were not without scoring opportunities but a stronger Colorado defense crushed four drives, one ending on the 15 after Iowa State had driven to the seven in the fourth quarter.

Pete Dawkins Injured In Virginia Tilt

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP)—Pete Dawkins, captain and star halfback of Army's top-ranked football team, suffered a knee injury in the second period of the game Saturday against Virginia. Apparently the injury was not serious.

He fell to the ground seemingly in great pain. West Point trainers worked on him for a while. Then he limped off the field. He didn't return.

Dawkins did not start the second half. Army coaches, communicating by phone from the press box, said of the injury: "It is a bruise on his hip," said one of the Army coaches said "We figure he will be all right."

Ohio State Rolls Over Hoosiers

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Blockbusting Bob White scored four touchdowns Saturday to lead Ohio State to a 49-8 victory over an out-classed and out-manned Indiana team in a Western Conference contest before 82,964.

The 207-pound White bulldozed his way to the first four scores, two of which were set up by intercepted passes and another by a fumble.

Indiana's misplays also gave the ball to Ohio twice for other scores.

The Hoosiers' only entrance into Ohio terriory came against the fourth-stringers when Norm Mackin passed six yards to Dick Bradford for a touchdown with only four seconds to play.

Indiana was unable to contain the devastating Ohio ground attack and could make little headway against the huge Buckeye forward wall. Beset by fumbles, pass interceptions and penalties, the Hoosiers never had a chance as they fell for their seventh straight game to Ohio. The aggregate score of the seven is 257 to 60.

It was Ohio's 27th win against six losses and five ties against the Hoosiers in Big Ten play.

Buckeye Coach Woody Hayes, who created a furore early in the year by charging that laxity of officials was condoning dirty play, created the game's big diversion in the fourth period when, leading 35-0, he shed his cap and coat and rushed onto the field to remonstrate with the arbiters.

Woody's only reward was a 15-yard penalty against the Bucks.

Turley, Spahn Selected As Top Hurlers

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Bob Turley, Warren Spahn, Jackie Jensen and Ernie Banks Saturday were named by the Sporting News as the outstanding pitchers and regular players in their respective leagues.

Turley, a 21-game winner for the New York Yanks of the American League, opposed the veteran Spahn, a 22-game winner for Milwaukee of the National, in the recent World Series. Each won two games in the Series.

Banks, Chicago Cubs shortstop, led the National League in runs batted in with 129 and in homers with 47. He also topped the major leagues in both categories. Jensen, Boston Red Sox outfielder, led the American in RBI with 122.

BEHIND MAJORS

Vols Power Way To 14-7 Victory

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Tennessee, led by sophomore tailback Bill Majors, took to straight single wing power plays Saturday to punch out a 14-7 football victory over Alabama.

A sun-splashed crowd of 34,200 found little to cheer about as these ancient Southeastern Conference rivals dueled chiefly on the ground.

With improved blocking in the line, Tennessee marched to touchdowns in the second and third periods. Alabama, turning briefly to the air, scored in the final quarter.

Majors, held to a net of six yards in three previous games, found some nice holes in the Bama line and ran for 58 yards.

The slender 167-pound speedster scored both Tennessee touchdowns, punching over from the 1 for the first and racing six for the second. Sammy Burklow kicked both conversions.

The first Tennessee six-pointer came on the opening play of the second period and capped a 50-yard drive, aided by a 15-yard penalty.

Majors returned Gary O'Steen's kick 22 yards to Alabama's 34 to set up the second Vol score. Six running plays carried to the 6 and Majors raced in.

Quarterback Bobby Jackson directed Alabama to its score midway in the final period in a beautiful 80-yard drive. The big play was a pass from Jackson to O'Steen covering 44 yards and placing the ball on Tennessee's 26.

Another pass from Jackson to tackle Carl Valletton, playing end in an unbalanced line, was good for 10 yards and another first down. Running plays carried it to the 1 from where Jackson scored. Pete Reaves converted.

The touchdown was the first an Alabama team scored on Tennessee since Bowden Wyatt became coach at his alma mater in 1955.

The victory gave Tennessee a 2-2 mark in the conference. Alabama has won 1 game, lost 2 and tied 1.

Tennessee outgained Alabama on the ground 131 to 98 yards. But 'Bama had a wide margin of 129 yards to 12 in the air, most of it in the final period.

Missouri Upsets K-State, 32-8

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP)—Phil Snowden and Mel West of Missouri upset Kansas State's dream of a homecoming victory 32-8 Saturday.

Underdog Missouri stunned a shirt-sleeved crowd of 12,000 with a slam-bang attack that never gave a previously-potent K-State offense an opportunity to get under way. The Tigers so dominated play in the first half that K-State never got out of its own territory as Missouri rolled to a 25-0 intermission lead.

It was the Big Eight Conference opener for Missouri.

Snowden scored two of Missouri's first half touchdowns on one-yard quarterback sneaks and passed for two more.

HAWKS, CELTS FAVORED

NBA To Open Thirteenth Hoop Schedule Sunday

By JOHN CHANDLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The National Basketball Assn opens its 13th season Sunday with three coaching changes and a host of rookies calculated to strengthen various league members and bolster ranks of the regulars.

One game is on the schedule, the Detroit Pistons playing the Nationals at Syracuse in a nationally televised, NBC game at 1:30 p.m., EST.

The Boston Celtics play the world champion St. Louis Hawks and Detroit meets the Royals at Cincinnati in an exhibition doubleheader for the benefit of Maurice Stokes, Cincinnati ace who has been hospitalized since last winter.

Cincinnati then opens the Lakers' home season at Minneapolis on Wednesday night, while on Thursday St. Louis plays host to Detroit.

All eight teams will get into action Saturday night, with Boston meeting the Knickerbockers in New York, the Philadelphia Warriors at Syracuse, Minneapolis at Cincinnati and St. Louis at Detroit.

Al Cervi, who left the Syracuse Nationals two years ago, returns to the NBA to coach Philadelphia. Andy Phillip, who played with Boston, took over at St. Louis, replacing Alex Hannum who resigned after leading the Hawks to the championship.

Andrew "Fuzzy" Levane, onetime Milwaukee pilot, replaces Vince Boryla, New York coach last season. George Senseky, who coached Philadelphia, went into the front office as assistant to Eddie Gottlieb, owner-manager.

St. Louis should win the Western Division title again, while Boston is the favorite to repeat in the Eastern Division.

The Hawks obtained Clyde Lovellette, one of the game's best centers, in a trade with Cincinnati who joins such scoring stars as Bob Pettit, Easy Ed Macauley and Cliff Hagan. Phillip also expects big things from Dave Gambee, a rookie from Oregon State.

Boston's big three of Bob Cousy, Bill Sharman and Bill Russell figure to make it tough in the Eastern Division. Coach Red Auerbach will have K.C. Jones, who was playmaker with Russell at the University of San Francisco. Jones has been in the Army two years. Gene Conley, Milwaukee Braves' pitcher who played at Washington State, joins the Celtics. Boston also has a top rookie prospect in Ben Swain from Texas Southern.

START NEW STRING

Sooners Wallop Jayhawks 43-0

By SKIPPER PATRICK

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP)—Oklahoma rebounded sharply in a bid to regain its national football prestige by bouncing the outmanned Kansas Jayhawks 43-0 in a Big Eight game played before 30,000 fans here Saturday.

The Sooners, who experienced a rare defeat, 15-14 to Texas last week, sent five different players on scoring jaunts for their 64th conference victory without defeat. Two ties have been charged against them in that string.

John Pellow, a blazing fast 161-pound senior, who gained fame as a member of the Sooners' sprint medley relay team, put the finishing touches to the Jayhawks with a 38-yard touchdown run on a punt return and a 78-yard scoring trip on a pass interception.

Actually Pellow's feats were no more than added attraction for the Sooners, dumped out of the top 10 into 11th place in the national Associated Press ratings last week. Oklahoma scored twice in the second quarter, once in the third and three times in the fourth.

Oklahoma looked anything but a champion in the first period as it opened its campaign for an 11th consecutive Big Eight title. Kansas lost a scoring chance early when a penalty nullified a Jayhawk play that went to the Oklahoma 7.

The Sooners rolled up a total of 507 yards rushing and passing. They scored in the second quarter on a 1-yard plunge by Jackie Holt and a short pass play from quarterback Bobbie Boyd to Jerry Tillery. From that point it was pretty much a matter of how big a score Oklahoma wanted to make it.

Last Quarter Score Beats Wolfpack, 13-6

By ED YOUNG

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — William and Mary's gritty football team threw back the best punches of North Carolina State's multiple offense Saturday and then used a recovered fumble to set up a last-period touchdown that beat the Wolfpack 13-6.

Pinned deep in their own territory most of the last half after staking out a 6-0 lead at intermission, the depth-shy Indians seemed on the verge of yielding to State's belated comeback when the critical break came, eight minutes deep in the final quarter.

State halfback Ken Trowbridge, who moments earlier had ruled off a run that set up a State touchdown, tying the count at 6-6, fumbled on the Wolfpack 25. Halfback Dave Edmunds pounced on the bobble for the Indians.

On W&M's first play, Edmunds pitched a running pass to end Ed Brusko, who snagged the ball on the State 7. Four plays later, quarterback Bob Stoy plowed over for the touchdown that won the game.

It was the second time in as many years the Indians had ambushed State. Last fall they nudged the Wolfpack 7-6 for the only loss State suffered.

Until the fumble recovery, the Indians had held off State's cunning offense repeatedly in the shadow of the William and Mary goal. The Indians held on their 8 and on their 15 in the first half, then on their 1 and on their 5 in the third period before finally yielding the Wolfpack its only score.

Fullback Arnold Nelson cracked over from the 1 for State's touchdown in the final quarter, climaxing a 42-yard State advance that was featured by Trowbridge's dash from the 22 to the W&M 1.

Florida Ties Vanderbilt In Last Minute

By F. T. MacFEELY

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Little Jimmy Dunn saved Florida's homecoming from utter disaster Saturday when he threw a 6-yard scoring pass to Dave Hudson in a driving rain with only eight seconds to play and gave the Gators a 6-6 tie with Vanderbilt.

The steady rain stopped the attack of both teams until the final desperate minutes after Vandy's Boyce Smith had run a punt back 53 yards for the Commodores' score.

Dunn, 142 pounds of spunky quarterback, raced his Florida team back to the huddle after each play and methodically covered those 32 yards just inside the time distance.

He threw a 12-yard pass to halfback Billy Booker two plays before the scoring heave. And those two passes were two of just three completions in the whole game for Florida.

Both teams tried to kick an extra point after their touchdowns and both were blocked. Guard Edwin Johns of Florida broke through to spoil Vandy's effort and Tom Moore ran into Florida's attempted boot.

Quill Takes Filly Duel Over Khalita

R. N. Webster's Kentucky-bred juvenile proved his class in pegging back the California contender for the divisional title, William N. Modglin's Khalita, who finished fourth after setting all the pace in the mile and one sixteenth race.

Quill earned $81,576, boosting her 1958 earnings to $140,502. It was her sixth win in eight starts. She was second choice in the field of 12 and returned backers in the crowd of 34,873 fans, $6.40 $3.60 and $2.80.

Carrying 119 pounds, Quill was seventh at the half mile pole when jockey Paul Bailey let her out. She moved quickly to second place.

Meanwhile, Khalita, ridden by Eddie Arcaro, led by 4 lengths after half a mile and was still 3 to the good after three-quarters.

But once Quill worked up a full head of steam there was no stopping the fleet filly. She sped past Khalita at the top of the stretch as the West Coast horse began to tire.

As Khalita faded, Resaca challenged for the lad but failed by a length and a half. Ruwenzori was third and Khalita wound up fourth.

Quill raced the distance in 1:45.1. Resca paid $7.80 and $5.80 and Ruwenzori $13.40.

In two trials for next Saturday's $250,000-plus Garden State Stakes First Landing, an odds-on favorite, and Rico Tesio, a rank outsider, triumphed.

Illinois Hands Minnesota Fourth Loss

By JIM KLOBUCHAR

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Bob Hickey, a rifle-armed quarterback who once appeared headed for football's junk heap, hurled two mighty touchdown passes and guided Illinois to a 20-8 victory over Minnesota Saturday.

It was the day of deliverance for the Illini, losers of three straight games, and another jarring disappointment for a winless Minnesota team.

Hickey teamed with end Rich Kreitling on identical-play touchdown passes that covered 83 and 66 yards, the first giving Illinois a first period lead and the second rubbing out an 8-7 Gopher advantage.

It was a weird homecoming battle, played before a crowd of 58,174 that saw the officials march off 155 yards in penalties in the first half. Despite Illinois' first period touchdown and offense-killing penalties, Minnesota looked capable of handling the Illini until Hickey's passing arm and a procession of errors caught up with the Gophers.

Hickey, who put in a troubled sophomore season last year trying to live down a bad opening game against UCLA, enjoyed a blue ribbon day. His 66-yarder to Kreitling, coming two plays after a sophomore Minnesota backfield had shot the Gophers into the lead late in the third quarter, shook the Illini out of the second half doldrums.

Minutes later Illinois applied the crusher by sending sophomore Dick McDade over from the 8 after guard Bill Burrell intercepted a Gopher pass and carried back to the Gopher 20.

Outgained on the ground Illinois rolled up 201 yards through the air with Hickey doing almost all the firing.

Wash. State Drops Oregon In 6-0 Game

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Washington State bounced back into the Rose Bowl picture Saturday, showing surprising ground strength as it upset Oregon 6-0 in a Pacific Coast Conference game.

The Staters, who now have three conference victories against one loss, also came up with a stubborn defense that completely frustrated Oregon.

Washington State scored in the second quarter, driving 88 yards in 16 plays. Only two of these were passes.

Quarterback Bob Newman went over on a one-yard plunge. His pass for the conversion was too long.

Newman, suffering from a knee injury, had entered the game only moments earlier when the Washington State drive appeared to be faltering.

It was third down and eight yards to go on the Oregon 43 at the time. He promptly tossed a 17-yard pass to fullback Chucl Morrell.

Thereafter he called ground plays and the Staters methodically ripped off short gains.

Oregon managed only one serious drive. IIt came in the fourth and covered 73 yards before Washington State stiffened and stopped the march on the 8.

State had shown defensive strength after Oregon picked up a State fumble on the Washington State 11. In four plays, the Staters threw Oregon back to the 22.

Villanova Takes 9-7 Win Over Wake Forest

VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP)—Villanova Saturday won its third straight football game as a 15-yard field goal provided the slim margin for a 9-7 victory over Wake Forest.

Though sub tackle Dick Keyser accurately split the uprights for the decisive three points mid-way in the third period, it was the running and pass-catching of halfback Dave Intrabartolo that actually sewed up the Wildcat victory.

Intrabartolo just couldn't—and wouldn't—be stopped. From the game's first play, when he crashed through for 12 yards, until he tore open the middle of the Wake Forest line for a 2-yard touchdown plunge near the end of the third quarter, Intrabartolo kept the 11,439 partisan fans cheering.

He carried 25 times for a gain of 105 yards—more than half of Villanova's 202 total—and caught four passes for 51 of the 96 Wildcat aerial yardage.

Harvard, 26-0

Browns Favored To Top Steelers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Cleveland Browns, almost perennial champions of the Eastern Conference of the National Football League, are 9½-point favorites to win their fourth game of the campaign Sunday when they play a return engagement with the Pittsburgh Steelers at Cleveland.

The Browns swamped the Steelers in their earlier meeting, 45-12.

The unbeaten Baltimore Colts, topping the Western Conference, also will be playing a return engagement, and also are favored to win, although by a lesser margin. The Colts meet the Detroit Lions at Detroit, and the dopesters give them a four-point edge. In their previous game Baltimore took a 28-15 decision.

The New York Giants, current runner-up in the Eastern Division with two victories and one defeat, are given a 6½-point edge over the Chicago Cardinals, who have lost their last four games to the New York club.

The second-place tie in the Western Conference is due to be broken when the Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Rams, each with two victories and one defeat, meet at Chicago. The Bears are given a six-point edge.

Two games matching Eastern and Western Conference clubs are on the schedule. Washington, the home team, is rated a 6½-point choice over the Green Bay Packers, and the Philadelphia Eagles, host to the San Francisco 49ers, are given a slim 1½-point margin.

The Giants and Cardinals also will be playing a return engagement. In the earlier game, played at Buffalo, the New York team registered a 37-7 victory, and now leads in their series, 26 games to 7.

Stacy Stars As Maroons Cop 38-0 Win

STATE COLLEGE, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback Billy Stacy polished Mississippi State to precision for next week's Southeastern Conference clash with Alabama by firing the Maroons to an easy 38-0 victory over Arkansas State Saturday.

Arkansas State, which hasn't won a game this season, succeeded in bottling up Mississippi State's offense in the first quarter. But after the first period the Maroons punched gaping holes in the Arkansas State line to score two touchdowns in the second quarter, one in the third and two in the final.

With Stacy handling the ball like a magician, Mississippi State marched 54 yards in three plays to score the Maroons first touchdown in the second period. Gil Peterson capped the drive by bucking over from the one. Stacy poked over right guard for the conversion.

The Maroons' Ned Brooks recovered an Arkansas fumble by Billy Caldwell on the 11 to set up Mississippi State's second score. Billy Schoenrock marched to the one and then Bobby Bates smashed right tackle for the touchdown. Tommy Miller passed to Robert Neaves for the conversion and Mississippi State held a 16-0 halftime lead.

The second half was even easier for the hard-driving Maroons. They opened the second half by driving 53 yards in eight plays to score their third touchdown as Shoenrock went over from the five. Stacy's conversion run failed.

A 46-yard pass from Billy Tohill to Pat Shute counted for the Maroons' fourth touchdown. Bob Collins ran over for the conversion. Frank Skipper scored the final tally on a three yard smash and Tohill ran over for the extra point.

Miss. State	0	16	6	16	—38

Peterson, 1, run (Stacy run)
Bates, 1, run (Neaves pass)
Schoenrock, 5, run (run failed)

Cotton Is Lower For Past Week

NEW YORK (AP)—Cotton futures followed a narrowly irregular course this weeek and closed in lower territory.

Active contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange took net losses ranging from 50 cents to $1.80 a bale. Bucking the trend was the October 1958 contract which expired at 12:30 p.m. (EDT) Wednesday. It went off the board with a gain of 45 cents a bale over the previous week's closing.

Selling in the active months reflected profit-taking and some hedging. Liquidation was stimulated, too, by favorable weather reports from the cotton belt.

Losses were held in check by price fixing and some buying based on loan considerations.

Traders noted that the amount pledged to the government loan through Oct. 10, although relatively high at 996,000 bales, was exceeded in 1956 when entries totaled 1,015,000 bales, and in 1953 when a total of 1,055,000 was recorded.

Also of interest to brokers was the latest official government report on consumption of cotton in this country. Use of the staple by U.S. mills in September averaged 32,400 bales a day. This represented a contraseasonal gain of 1.6 per cent over the August rate of 31,900 bales per day.

While below the September 1957 average of 33,000, the 1.6 per cent rise over August ran counter to the trend of recent years. During the past five years, the New York Cotton Exchange pointed out, September consumption has shown an average decline of 2.5 per cent from the month before.

Exports of U.S. cotton for the week ended Tuesday were estimated by the Exchange at 50,000 bales, compared with 64,000 the previous week and 117,000 in the like week last year. For the season through Tuesday, exports were estimated at 660,000 bales vs. 888,000 a year ago.

NEW YORK (AP)—U.S. Government bonds declined sharply this week and corporate securities closed lower on average.

Trading was light in governments and heavy in the corporate market. Corporate convertibles were sharply higher on heavy volume in line with the boom of their stock counterparts.

IInvestment quality corporates and foreign dollar bonds eked out small advances. This was more than counterbalanced, however, by sharp declines in rails and industrials. Utilities were unchanged.

Volume mounted to $33,025,000 par value for the week on the New York Stock Exchange from $30,098,000 the previous week and $24,148,600 for the corresponding week in 1957.

Monroe Firm Buys Ins. Co. In Arkansas

Ouachita Securities Corporation, of Monroe, today announced the purchase of the charter and control of an Arkansas life insurance company to be known as Life of Arkansas.

Nick Mantrozos, president of Ouachita Securities Corporation, said that necessary organizational details are being worked out to launch operations of the Arkansas company.

The purchasing corporation, which also controls Ouachita Security Life Insurance Company, "will expedite considerably our long - planned expansion into Arkansas."

The Arkansas insurance commission recently authorized Ouachita Security Life to expand into Arkansas. At that time Ouachita Life announced it would concentrate first operations there in the southeastern sector.

With the purchase of the established charter of the Arkansas company it was pointed out that operations would be extended much faster into all sections of the state.

The company, Mantrozos said, will be licensed as a full capital stock old line legal reserve with a reciprocal reinsurance arrangement with Ouachita Security Life of Monroe and other contractual arrangements which will prove beneficial to both companies.

Although Ouachita Securities Corporation will own the Arkansas company, Mantrozos said, much of the management and board of directors will be comprised of prominent and influential Arkansas citizens.

A definite decision on a permanent domicile for the company has not been made, the company was originally chartered in Little Rock.

Revival Set By Claiborne Methodists

Claiborne Methodist Church, located on the Calhoun Road in West Monroe, has scheduled a revival service for this week.

Services will be held daily Monday through next Sunday, at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. with the Rev. J. J. Caraway of Bunkie filling the pulpit.

Rev. Caraway served in the U. S. Navy during World War II and was pastor of the Morningside Methodist Church in Shreveport for five years before being appointed to the Haas Memorial Church in Bunkie in 1956.

The Rev. Isaac A. Patton will lead the special music for the revival, according to T. A. Brown, church pastor.

Famous Slips In Bible Type Pointed Out

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Religion Writer

"Printers have persecuted me without a cause," lamented King David in Psalms 119:161.

He was right. "Printers" really were persecuting him in this Bible printed in 1653. The word should have been "princes."

The so-called Printers Bible was neither the first nor last edition of the Scriptures to be plagued by that curse of the print shops—the typographical error.

Probably no edition of the Bible has been published without a misprint. Yet the Bible is one of the most carefully proofread of books.

"The last time I was involved in publishing a Bible," says Miss Margaret Hills, librarian of the American Bible Society, "at least four people read it all the way through. And one of them read it three or four times.

"Still it came out with errors. Oh, we spelled names like Nebuchadnezzar right every time. But there were such things as 'now' for 'not' and so forth."

Most Biblical misprints are of no textual importance. Some, however, have brought about complete reversals of scriptural meaning.

Picture the consternation in 17th century London when it was discovered that the latest version of the Seventh Commandment instructed: "Thou shalt commit adultery."

The printers of the edition, men named Barker and Lucas, are said to have been fined 300 pounds for the typographical misstep and that particular Bible has been dubbed the "Wicked" or "Adulterous" Bible.

Only a few years later, another London printer, one J. Field, flubbed St. Paul's message to the Corinthians. Asked the saint in Fields' version:

"Know ye not that the unrighteous shall inherit the kingdom of God?" (1 Corinthians 6:9)

About the same time—the 17th was a bad century for Bible printers—Barker was blamed for slipping on another typographical banana peel.

This time the edition had the Lord directing Moses to "Vex the Midianites, and smite them: For they vex you with their wives." (Numbers 25:18). It should have been "wiles."

Methodists Here Observe Laymen's Day

The Gordon Avenue Methodist Church has invited Fred Huenefeld to deliver the layman's address today in recognition of Methodist Layman's Day, according to W. M. Allen, minister of the church.

Jack Hesketh is lay leader of the Gordon Ave. church, located at the corner of Dixie Street and Gordon Ave. in Monroe, and he will introduce the guest speaker.

Methodist churches through Arkansas and Louisiana will join other Methodist churches across the country in observing today as Laymen's Day.

Dr. Robert G. Mayfield, Chicago, general secretary of the Methodist Church's Board of Lay Activities, has called upon all of the denomination's churches to observe the day by having laymen conduct the services and speak from the pulpits.

Indications point to a wider observance of the day than any year in the history of the board, Dr. Mayfield said. He cited larger orders of program helps for the observance and pointed out that the board's supply had been exhausted and additional materials had been ordered to satisfy the demand.

"Seek Ye First" is general theme for the day.

Dr. Mayfield said he saw in Laymen's Day an opportunity to urge church members to:

—Deepen their own spiritual lives in order that they may be a channel through which the Holy Spirit can work.

—Develop a new realization of the importance of people.

—Rededicate themselves to the task of taking Christ to the whole world.

Laymen's Day, when rightly observed," he pointed out, "will be a time of real witnessing to a man's faith and Christian convictions.

Local Delegates Attend Assembly Held In St. Louis

The following delegates from the two local Christian Churches attended the 1958 Assembly of the International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ) at St. Louis, Mo. during the past week: Reverend and Mrs. John O. Stewart, Reverend and Mrs. Carney R. Burcham, Dr. and Mrs. D. L. Anderson, A. H. Gerson, and Robert Smith of Phillips University, Enid, Okla.

All sessions of the six-day Assembly will be held in Kiel Auditorium, St. Louis.

Convention executives noted a record attendance from the 8000 churches and approximately 2 - million members of their brotherhood in the United States and Canada. Contributing to the heavy registration is the fact that Missouri is near the geographical center of the country and in the midst of states with the heaviest concentration of Christian Churches.

President of the 1958 Assembly of the convention was Granville T. Walker, minister of the University Christian Church, Fort Worth, Texas. Chairman of the Program Committee is Hallie G. Gantz, minister of First Christian Church, Tulsa, Okla.

No Religious Revival In Russia Seen

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Religion Writer

"I'd like to challenge anyone who says there's a religious revival in Russia," says Tommy Hicks, a Texas-born evangelist who recently made a 32-day preaching tour of the Soviet Union.

The Rev. Mr. Hicks, who has spent the greater part of the past five years evangelizing on foreign shores, draws a bleak picture of religion outside the large Russian cities of Leningrad and Moscow.

"Back in 1955," he says, "the newspaper Pravda announced that Christianity would be dead in Russia within 10 years. From my latest observations, I'd say they don't need that long."

How are the Soviets doing it?

"They're taking the children out of the church," says the Rev. Mr. Hicks. "They're luring them away by giving them an esteemed place in the nation.

"They hace children's clubs and the members get to do things and go places that nonmembers do not get to do. If a boy or girl is a Christian he or she is ruled out of membership."

The Rev. Mr. Hicks preached at 23 services during his tour. Arrangements were made through local pastors. The evangelist says he does not know precisely how the pastors obtained permission.

"I preached as simply as I could," he says, "mostly from John 3:16 — 'Fod God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.'"

He preached through interpreters.

"The only time I was sure I was getting a good interpretation was when I had a Christian interpreter. Some were atheists and some just had no comprehension of Christian phrases."

"Churches are tolerated in Moscow and Leningrad," he says, "but it seems to be only a show for tourists. In the smaller cities, church attendance is small and quiet.

MY ANSWER
by Billy Graham

QUESTION: My friends claim I am not a Christian because I do not attend church. Can one be just as religious and good if he is not a member of a church? G. J.

ANSWER: I suppose it could be said that going to church will not make one a Christian. But of this we are even more sure: refusing to fellowship with believers will not make you one either.

I suppose you could live up to the principles of the Masonic Lodge without joining it. You could subscribe to the principles of the Rotary Club without being a Rotarian. But it seems to me that if you sincerely wanted to be a good Rotarian, or good Christian, you would do well to fellowship with those who have kindred goals and motives.

The church is the family of believers. Christ died, not only for the individual, but for the church. The Bible says; "He loved the church, and gave Himself for it." If Christ loved the church enough to die for it, we should love it enough to associate ourselves with it.

By joining a good spiritual church, we are letting the world know where our loyalties are. Even you admit that "your friends say you are not a Christian because you do not belong to church." If we really believe in Christ, the least we can do is to identify ourselves with others who believe. In this way your faith is strengthened, and your witness is buttressed.

Dedication Set For New W. M. Church

Special opening services will be conducted this afternoon at 3:00 at the White's Ferry Road Church of Christ in West Monroe.

Today will also mark the beginning of a series of Bible lessons to be given by Dewey McDowell, local evangelist. McDowell is now working with the new congregation after preaching for about two years for the church in Belle, Missouri.

There will be congregational singing directed by verious song leaders in the afternoon and Harvey Starling of the Slack Street church is scheduled to speak.

The new building is a modern brick structure seating some 400 in the auditorium. There are nine classrooms, a nursery and study, and the building is completely air-conditioned. The parking area adjoining the building will park over 175 cars.

The building was constructed by the Slack Street church in West Monroe before the new congregation began. R. F. Downey, A. W. Brashears and Q. T. Hollis were the elders of the church. The building committee was Russell Jordan, Leo Walsworth, R. F. Downey, Alton Howard, and Tommy Goyne. The contractor was Ted R. Woods of West Monroe.

The White's Ferry Road church is the fifth church of Christ established in the Twin Cities. Alton Howard, member of the new congregation, remarks, "We are happy to be in our new building and we welcome you to worship with us and learn more about the churches of Christ.

Barbirolli To Tour U.S., Canada, Lead Symphonies

By GEOFFREY ILLER

LONDON, Oct. 19 (AP)—Britain's oldest symphony orchestra, The Halle, is preparing to get along for a few months without its conductor, Sir John Barbirolli, and in Manchester that's just awful.

He leaves in November for a three-months tour of Canada and the United States. And for Manchester, proud home of the Halle Orchestra for more than 100 years, that is almost as if the city were losing its lord mayor.

Barbirolli gave up the plum job of conductor of the New York Philharmonic during World War II and took over the famed Halle when its fortunes were at a low ebb. He has brought it back to fame and prosperity. He is a local idol in Manchester and one of Britain's national figures.

After conducting the old orchestra night in and night out for 15 years, Barbirolli announced last March he was going to spend part of each year conducting overseas.

He starts in Canada in December and plans a coast to coast tour of the United States after that. He will conduct his own former orchestra, the New York Philharmonic, as well as the Philadelphia, Boston Symphony and other leading American bands.

Manchester is the butt of English music hall comedians on account of its wet weather and smoky atmosphere. But the Halle is its glory. The orchestra belongs to Manchester as surely as the White House belongs to Washington.

BAND'S BIRTH

It grew out of a band sponsored by 19th Century cotton merchants —who made Britain the world's richest country and Manchester Britain's second biggest city.

In October 1957 the orchestra celebrated its centenary. The occasion brought a new flash of brightness to the glories that light up the murky old city, and brought home to Britons everywhere just what the famed orchestra has meant to the nation's musical traditions.

The orchestra is a vital part of the community. It contributes to the educational program of Manchester and other cities by giving regular concerts for schoolchildren. Every week, too, it plays at industrial concerts, attended exclusively by factory and office workers and sponsored by more than 200 firms in and around Manchester.

These activities are in addition to the orchestra's regular routine public concerts and tours.

Yet it was a German who began it all. One hundred years ago the rich German merchants who were attracted to Manchester by the expanding cotton trade sent for Carl Halle, a musician from Hagen, Westphalia, to come over and develop musical activities in the city.

He formed an orchestra to play at an art exhibition in Manchester in 1856. It was such a success that he stayed on to direct it on a permanent basis.

Halle became an Englishman by adoption, anglicized his name and died Sir Charles Halle in 1895.

BRITISH RULE

From World War I the orchestra has been in British hands. First Sir Thomas Beecham, then Sir Hamilton Harty kept its fame bright. But when Harty died in 1933 the orchestra went into a decline. For 10 years it played under guest conductors but had no permanent chief of its own.

World War II nearly killed it off. German bombs wrecked the city's free trade hall, which had been the orchestra's home. Key players began to drift off to the forces or to other orchestras.

That was where Barbirolli came in.

For seven years he had held one of the highest paid jobs in the musical world — conductor of the New York Philharmonic, were he had succeeded the great Arturo Toscanini.

Manchester businessman Philip Godlee sent for Barbirolli to come home to war-bruised Britain and rebuild the Halle. It meant a smaller salary than he was getting in New York but Barbirolli hurried back.

He rebuilt the orchestra, hiring musicians who had been playing in restaurants and music halls.

"They play the same notes," he said in answer to critics. "It's the quality of their playing that counts, not their background."

Under Barbirolli's leadership, the orchestra started earning its keep by playing in theaters and cinemas around the outskirts of the bomb-scarred city -- buildings where not a note of serious music had been heard before.

The dynamic little Anglo-Italian upset concert organizers by declaring war on celebrity soloists, regarded as the safest box-office attraction in a world of rising maintenance costs.

"I have not travelled from America and spent frantically keyed-up days and nights assembling and rehearsing a new orchestra merely in order to have the opportunity of accompanying guest artists," Barbirolli said.

He won. A star pianist or violinist played with the orchestra from time to time, but Barbirolli mostly went on pulling capacity audiences into his concerts without the help of personality glamor.

Fighting against ill health, he has continued leading the orchestra from success to success for 15 years. A year ago he was looking worn and frail after a major abdominal operation. Now, at 68 he has regained some of his old toughness and vigor.

KNIGHTED

He was knighted in 1949 and a year later received the gold medal of the Royal Philharmonic Society—an honor bestowed on only the greatest figures in music from Beethoven onwards.

In 1950 he had to choose between the Halle and the biggest job in British music — conductor of the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) Symphony Orchestra.

The pull of the Halle tradition won. He turned down the BBC job and stayed in Manchester. The free trade hall was restored and reopened in 1951, and the Halle returned to its old home.

When the Orchestra gave a special series of concerts to celebrate its 100th birthday, trumpeters stood atop the roof of the Free Trade Hall and summoned music-lovers inside with a fanfare that resounded over the downtown area of the grimy city.

Inside, the concert started with another brass flourish. Composed specially for the occasion by Britain's leading composer, Ralph Vaughan Williams, it was entitled "Fanfare for Glorious John."

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

New Book By Keyes Awaited

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

A new book by Frances Parkinson Keyes is always eagerly awaited by her many admirers. This week her novel "Voctorine" was released. This is another story of the Louisiana rice country and is a sequel to "Blue Camellia." it carries on the story of members of the family whom we met in the former book. As usual Mrs. Keyes is weak in character portrayel, but she does tell a good story and her power of description is remarkable. Everyone who read "A Many - Splendored Thing" by Han Suyin will want to read her newest novel, "The Mountain is Young." It has its setting in the Himalayan mountain kingdom of Nepal and is concerned with the experiences of a western girl when she visited this far away and strange country. Han Suyin has a wonderful gift and has used it to the full in this book.

Neville Shute has a long list of novels to his credit, but his latest one, The Rainbow and the Rose" has been hailed by the critics as one of his most moving stories. It deals with a subject with which he is particularly fond, that of aviation. It is the story of two aviators and how their lives were connected. It is a man's book and will appeal to many readers. "Spanish Stirrup" by John Prebble is the story of the first great cattle drive northward from Texas, through Commanche country to Kansas, a distance of more than a thousand miles. It is a book of complete immediacy and of continuous pounding excitement. It adds to John Prebble's reputation as a master story teller.

Those who are devotees of the work of Francis Scott Fitzgerald will welcome a new collection of his stories called "Afternoon of An Author" which contains many of his stories which have not been published before.

In the field of non - fiction there is a great variety of new material. "Paper - Mache" by Lillian Johnson is a very practical book with many suggestions for those interested in this art. Everyone who read "The Diary of Anne Frank" will want to read the book "Anne Frank" by Ernst Schnabel which adds new information about the life of this tragic young girl. "Peace or Atomic War" is the title of the new book written by Albert Schweitzer. In this book one of the great minds of our age, urges us to make peace or risk destruction. This is the book for the man or woman who is not afraid to face facts.

Another broadway play has just been released in book form. It is "Romanoff and Juliet" by Peter Ustinov. Those who like the theatre will want to read it. A most interesting book written by Marie Donovan is called "The Far Eastern Epicure." This is a discussion of the foods of the far East and gives many recipes for preparing them. It is a most unusual and interesting book and will be enjoyed by all those who like unusual foods. "A Dictionary of Contemporary American Usage" by Bergen and Cornelia Evans is a very interesting addition to our reference collection and will be eagerly read by those who are interested in language and semantics.

The book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library is growing rapidly. We are doing our best to meet the needs of the people of the parish with the funds which we have available. Please remember our memorial book plan, for it is a big help to us.

War Is Theme Of Top Novel

CRAZY IN BERLIN. By Thomas Berger. Scribners. $4.75.

Carlo Reinhart, despite his ambiguous name, is an American born and grown to military age at just the right historic moment to make him a noncom member of the 1209th in occupied Berlin — so we read in this novel, an extraordinary work as first novel and extraordinary, too, at this late date for saying something new about the war about which so many other novelists have begun to repeat themselves, or repeat their colleagues.

When we meet, Carlo's chief virtue is "adaptability." He is no one to question other people's notions. It isn't so much that he conforms as that he doesn't react: First he thinks Roosevelt could hardly be worse, but he's willing to reconsider when he hears it said that at least he's better than Hoover. In the same fashion, he goes to Germany cherishing the idea that his forebears, Germans only a generation removed, were brutes. With this, Berger masterfully takes over his education and shows what can happen to a man who, standing well over six feet, enters a world where it is hard to keep from throwing his weight around occasionally, and where some weight is thrown at him.

He has a buddy, Marsala, one of the toughest - talking Yanks to get into any book, the equivalent of a whole college course for anyone helplessly exposed to him. But there are more somber comrades and friends. Marsala primarily is gravelly surface, but the others are skillfull above all at concealing what they are. It is a world of continuing confusion, where a loyalty that once made a man a fortune may now cost him his life, where nothing succeeds like hypocrisy and pretense. There are Lori and her incredible beast - like, brainlike husband; her doctor brother, perhaps her twin; Trudchen in her irresponsible teens; nurse Veronica Leary; Schild the lieutenant who favors communism; Schatzi, the unscrupulous opportunist.

In this "crazy" world, motives lie far from the surface. A neo - Nazi finds words to justify himself, a man is a hero by chance. Just how impure is the ardent Nazi, how pure the anti - Nazi? A complex cross - hatching of obscure impulses, urges and restraints, unfolded in colorful language by a born writer, here is one of our best war novels, and one of our best recent novels no matter what kind.

Painter's Letters Collector's Item

THE COMPLETE LETTERS OF VINCENT VAN GOGH. Introduction by Johanna van Gogh-Bonger and Vincent W. van Gogh. Translated from Dutch and French by C. de Dood and Mrs. Robert Amussen. 3 vols. New York Graphic Society. $50.

No modern artist, including Gauguin on his South Seas island with his nudes, has lent himself to the lurid Hollywood treatment so utterly, from birth to death, as the hapless genius Vincent van Gogh.

And no man deserved this cheap distortion so little. He was one of the historic tragic figures, unfitted personally for the life which he enriched beyond words for the rest of us. Born in 1853 in the Netherlands, son of an impoverished preacher, nephew of a successful art dealer and also broher of one, he was himself a teacher, amateur preacher, sickly romantic who indulged in some tawdry loves, and then consecrated painter, the man of all 19th century men most selflessly absorbed in an ineffable vision.

Fortunately his troubled life is abundantly documented. He died only in 1890 of a self - inflicted gunshot. His brother, Theo, who so staunchly supported him, was still alive, and so was Theo's wife who, with her son, the heir to the estate, has provided the introduction to these generously illustrated volumes.

Some of this has been available here before. Now for the first time it is all here, plus letters to some artists and a sister and from Theo to Vincent. These tell the van Gogh story almost alone. There are some poignantly revealing quotes:

About his place at home: "I have become more or less a kind of impossible and suspect personage in the family." About love: "She (Sien, the woman from the streets whom he wanted to marry) is not nice, she is not good, but neither am I;" and, "in order to love, I think it absolutely necessary to believe in God." About art: "Most people do not admire enough" — and at the start his own taste was faulty, though later he narrowed down his likes to the best artists, and the illustrations show plainly how he progressed from ordinary and commonplace to unique.

The flavor of this collection, which is a collector's item, is what we would have expected, only it is greatly intensified. For 150 years the art world has produced nothing to compare with this except Delacroix's "Journals," a classic that still awaits English translation.

WILEY MAKES VISIT

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Sen. Alexander Wiley (R-Wis.) Friday visited Portuguese Prime Minister Dr. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar at the latter's summer residence in Estoril. He was accompanied by U.S. Charge d'Affaires Robinson McIlvaine. Wiley is in Lisbon as an observer on the American delegation to the conference for the revision of the convention for the protection of industrial property.

BROADWAY

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the case of Eugene O'Neill you could say that the timing was wrong.

How much better it would have been had "A Touch of the Poet" been presented a couple of years ago as his first posthumous production followed by "Long Day's Journey Into Night," instead of the other way around.

For "Long Day's Journey Into Night" was a blockbuster; the master's best, many will vow. "A Touch of the Poet," just opened on Broadway, is merely good O'Neill.

Which should be good enough. Good enough, that is, to win most of the season's drama prizes seven months from now, come Tennessee Williams, Arthur Miller or any other lightweight you might care to nominate.

O'Neill is his own competition. You make a reservation or two about "A Touch of the Poet," and someone immediately jumps to the conclusion that you think it's not good or you didn't like it.

Not so at all. If there are other O'Neill plays that you think are superior — why quibble; that you know are superior — it is only necessary factual reporting to say so in order that readers may have some standard by which to judge.

"A Touch of the Poet" has been given a magnificent production by Robert Whitehead and the Producers Theater at the Helen Hayes Theater. This house, by the way, not only has been redecorated but re-designed into a more commodious and comfortable theater.

Miss Hayes, Eric Portman, Kim Stanley and Betty Field are admirable in the top roles of this play. By now Portman, who has the major part, no doubt will have corrected the only thing that marred the premiere performance—a tendency to growl a number of his speeches into inaudibility. His conception of his role is beyond reproach.

"A Touch of the Poet" is one of the plays O'Neill planned as part of an 11-play cycle covering more than a century of American life under the over-all designation of "A Tale of Possessors Self-Dispossessed." He felt it was a finished work and could stand alone, so did not destroy it in his last illness-ridden years as he did other works in the cycle.

Portman has the role of a would - be gentleman, English style, who has come upon evil days in 1828 New England where he finally learns that a new way of life has made him obsolete. His rebellious daughter wisely joins "the enemy" by marrying into the new "aristocracy" of successful businessmen.

The play has a number of vibrant moments, yet it needs the utmost in acting and direction—the latter supplied ably by Harold Clurman — to be at its best. It does not have an inevitable, mounting power of its own; there is a feeling of fabrication about it.

Yet there is, in the last of the four acts, a scene that is one of the finest O'Neill ever wrote. As played by Miss Hayes and Miss Stanley, it is a thing of truth and beauty and humor and pathos.

As a matter of fact, Miss Stanley, in the role of the daughter, does the best work she ever has done in the theater, and that is a considerable statement, as those who have followed her commendable career will realize.

Miss Hayes, for a change, does not have the dominant role -- in fact, she ranks third to Portman and Miss Stanley. But she is so right and so fine that you are scarcely aware of this.

There are several grades of O'Neill. Any of them is welcome. And this is in no way the meanest of the lot, although a few reservations may be in order.

Hardhitting Tale Of World War One

IN FLANDERS FIELDS: The 1917 Campaign. By Leon Wolff. Viking. $5.

"In Flanders fields the poppies blow" — so begins John McCrae's poem, probably as popular as any verse to come out of World War I. It commemorated the half million casualties suffered, mostly British in the campaign doggedly, implacably pressed by Sir Douglas Haig to win a final victory on the Western Front. It was, except for a sharp tough revival of France's aggressive spirit at Verdun, the last major effort before the United States was prepared to fight in 1918.

A lot of Americans crossed that wretched No Man's Land on the trail of withdrawing Germans in the couple of months before the Armistice. The ruins of the Cloth Hall at Ypres used to be a symbol of the "vandalism" of the Hun, Boche or Fritzie boy. Americans will remember the names with which the Tommies got around Flemish tongue-twisters: Pop for Poperinghe, White Street for Wytschaete, Plug Street for Ploegsteert, and Wipers for Ypres.

They will remember, too, as they read these absorbing pages, those incredibly bloody assaults by unbelievably brave Englishmen over impossible terrain in unendurable weather. Two phases of the 1917 assaults succeeded — the attempt to wipe out the deadly Ypres salient and the irresistible rush up to Messines after the mines blew up the ridge with a blast felt in London. For the rest it was one step forward and two steps back. The English, the Anzacs and the Canadians were hurled into the affray, and it was just about a miracle that the battered British did not revolt as the French had after Nivelle's disastrous offensive on the Aisne.

It was a series of colossal blunders — tanks wasted, German strength ignored, disregard of elementary security rules, fatal delays, and the flouting of basic tactical principles. Lloyd George fought Haig every inch, but it took the Germans to crush him.

This is a merciless exposure of how inadequate the military mind can be — Wolff might ask, what d'ya mean, mind? One curious virtue of World War I is that it has given rise to so many books, fiction as well as non-fiction, that apply just as pointedly to World War II and even III. This is one of them. Hundreds of thousands of soldiers shed blood because of the rivalries, ealousies, ambitions and failings of their leaders. Wolff takes us dramatically from the heat and passion of the conference table to the anguish and agony of the battlefields. This is the whole rounded picture: The few select statesmen and generals, their blunders, and the awful price paid for them by the multitude of common men.

Pakistanis Going Big For Jazzed Bingo

By LEMMY PINNA

KARACHI (UPI) — Traditionally economical Pakistanis have fallen hard for a jazzed-up version of bingo.

The game-known here as tombola—has been made attractive with the addition of a few promotional frills and $1,200 in prize money. As such, it is packing the playing houses.

The Karachi Railway Institute, the most successful sponsor of the game, draws more than 1,500 persons twice weekly to its sessions.

The British Tommies introduced the game to the Indian subcontinent as housie-housie. It never caught on in Pakistan until the government outlawed organized public gambling.

PLAY ON TENNIS COURTS

The law didn't apply to tombola when sponsored by clubs and restricted to club members. The game soon flourished into a legalized sport sponsored by a number of clubs, like the Railway Institute.

On Thursday and Sunday nights, automobiles, motorcycle rickshaws and horse-drawn carriages stream into the institute's compounds. There, on the tennis court, approximately 1,500 members gather, sit and scratch out numbers on their cards-and hold their breaths for the prizes.

Tombola's main attractions are the promotional "snowball" and "silver pool" numbers on its program. The "snowball" offers an accumulated prize of nearly $300 to the winner within a fixed amount of numbers called. The "silver pool" offers four prizes of $150, $100, $75 and $50.

On any one night, prizes given away total $1,200.

'Attila The Hun' Giant Production

The story of Attila the Hun, whose name is synonymous with one of the most savage and ruthlessly brutal eras in the history of humanity, is re-created in "Attila," a motion picture production large - scaled enough to encompass the momentous events of his time. Co - starring Anthony Quinn and Sophia Loren, "Attila," presented by Joseph E. Levine, arrives today at the Jim Theatre with important supporting roles enacted by international favorites Henri Vidal, Irene Papas and Eduardo Ciannelli, plus a cast of many thousands.

It took producers with the imagination and courage of Carlo Ponti and Dino De Laurentiis, who were responsible for the mammoth presentation, "War and Peace," to duplicate on the screen in "Attila" the barbaric battles involving thousands of invading Huns led by the power-mad Attila fighting countless Roman legions; the corrupt, lavish court of Ravenna, capital of the Western Roman Empire, which Attila was determined to conquer; the scene after breathtaking scene depicting Attila's bloody onward march as city after city in Gaul and Germany were overrun and sacked by the Hun hordes.

Against this vast panorama of history is told the personal, passion - charged story of Attila the man and Princess Honoria, a woman as ambitious as he, ruthless as he, who offered herself to him in marriage, knowing that half her brother's Roman Empire would go with her as dowry. Anthony Quinn, holder of two Academy Awards thus far, has the strongest role of his brilliant career as Attila the Hun. Co - starring him with one of the world's most beautiful and talented actresses, Sophia Loren as the covetous, Honoria, was a stroke of casting genius. The curvaceous, sensual beauty of Miss Loren is the perfect foil for the brute power and lust embodied in the world's most famous Hun, as portrayed by the wonderful performer, Quinn.

Technicolor adds to the excitement of "Attila," reproducing in magnificent color the splendor and opulence of the Roman court, the riotously colorful accoutrements of the barbaric Hun hordes.

Hungarian Boss Fights For Life

By RUSSELL JONES

VIENNA (UPI) — Hungarian Communist party boss Janos Kadar, the man who called in Soviet tanks to crush the 1956 revolution, is involved in a fight for his political—and perhaps his actual—life.

Iron Curtain experts here believe Kadar is under an attack by a group led by Premier Ferenc Muennish, who succeeded Kadar in the premiership, and may well be purged within the next few months.

While many factors enter into the battle, the experts cite these points of Kadar's vulnerability:

1. More than any other current leader, Kadar was identified with the revolutionary government of executed "freedom" Premier Imre Nagy and can be attacked for many of the "crimes" for which Nagy was executed.

2. Conversely, he was the tool used by the Soviets to overthrow the Nagy government and, as such, is the focus of the peoples' hatred.

GOVERNMENT

3. While trying to end the revolution and the general strike which followed it, Kadar made many public promises which now are embarrassing to the party and government.

4. Despite his role in crushing the revolution, Kadar's whole record lays him open to the charge of "revisionism," currently the worst heresy in the Communist book. Although the expression was not then used, it was for just this crime that he was imprisoned and tortured by the Stalinists in 1950.

5. Aside from Gyorgy Lukacs, now in obscurity, Kadar is the last surviving founder of the Hungarian Workers Socialist Party, set up by Nagy when the old Communist Party collapsed under the impact of the revolution. Of the other founders, Nagy was executed, Ferenc Donath was sentenced to 12 years imprisonment and Teza Losonczi died while awaiting trial.

Experts here believe the battle between Kadar and Muennich started when the latter forced the trial and execution of Nagy and his colleagues. They say the trial opened last Jan. 28 with Kadar resigning from the premiership in protest the next day.

AGAINST TRIAL

Kadar, they say, was against the trial as both unjust and unnecessary, and—as events proved correct—likely to revive memories both in Hungary and the rest of the world. He is said to have believed that Nagy and the others should have been left in custody until forgotten.

While the trial and the executions were victories for Muennich, the experts say, the fight has not been entirely one sided. The government "white book," which gave the official version of the proceedings, carefully never mentioned Kadar's association with the defendants, and the fragments of testimony which were reproduced did not include anything that might have embarrassed him.

Since then, several Kadar supporters have been removed from high positions and replaced by Muennich men, but the experts are not yet ready to write Kadar off.

They cite two good reasons for this:

1. Soviet Premier and Communist Party Boss Nikita S. Khrushchev, in talks with foreign visitors, has described Kadar as a friend, and friends of the Soviet leader are not likely to be purged.

2. The Hungarian economy is worse off this year than last, and the Soviet loans which have kept it afloat, come due next year. Barring an economic miracle, Hungary cannot pay them. A scapegoat will be needed. Muennich as easily as Kadar could be chosen.

There's nothing so effective in party decor as a timely motif at the start of a new season—particularly for the first few affairs. At this time of the year ye old pumpkins and gourds and browns and golds are the greatest.

Consider, for example, the table at ANNE BERNHARDT's luncheon party Wednesday at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club. Centerpiece was a straw cornucopia, overflowing with fall fruits — apples, avocados, lemons — interspersed with sprays of pyracantha and dried oak leaves. Each place was marked with a card decorated with a miniature dried arrangement. Seed pods and dragonflies were used, with each design different. All of this made a most charming picture against the dull gold cloth. Ham mornay was the main course of the meal, accompanied by asparagus, stuffed oranges, and green salad. The unusual dessert was individual baked Alaskas, cooked and served in small flower pots, with a real flower "growing" in each. Seven guests attended this party.

Another seasonal table was seen at the JACK TERZIAS when they entertained guests for dinner last week end. Ornamental gourds, Indian corn, and chrysanthemums were used in the centerpiece. Eleven guests enjoyed the meal of chicken curry with suitable side dishes — toasted almonds, chutney, rice, cocoanut.

Several interesting visitors in town have been the occasion for a number of parties. MR. and MRS. R. M. MARTIN of Baltimore, Maryland, are the guests of their son and his family, TOM MARTIN, wife PAT, and son, TEM.

First party honoring Mrs. Martin was the luncheon hosted by EVELYN MOORE on Wednesday. The bare table was centered with a large loaf of French bread filled with pyracantha branches. Brown place mats were used. Evelyn served shrimp burgers on individual French loaves, topped with a curry sauce, and cucumber boats filled with a congealed vegetable salad. Hot apple turnovers with ice cream were dessert. Also attending this party were Pat Martin and VERA TROY.

On Thursday CHRISTINE GRAY invited some friends to have lunch and to meet Mrs. Martin. Those enjoying this opportunity for a chat were MIRIAM RUBEY, JOEL JOHNSTON, ALICE PEAT, GAY ULRICH, and MARGARET ALVERSON.

MARY MOBBERLY of New York City has been the guest of her sister, ELSIE STANDLEY. A number of parties have been given in Mary's honor, including a conversational hour last Saturday at the home of IRMA BELLE HUSTED. Co-hostess was MARY LEE SAUNDERS. An arrangement of dahlias, straw flowers, and sage in lavender tones, used with pink roses, centered the dining table. Shrimp dip with chicken salad sandwiches, cheese-straws, and cookies were served to about twenty guests.

DOLL RANSOM honored Mary with a dinner party last week. A fruit arrangement was used on the table, where a chicken spaghetti supper was served. After dinner, the group played canasta. Guests in addition to Mary and Elsie were CARRIE PARKER, DOROTHY FULLER, and VANCE BREARD.

Doll was also hostess at a family party at the Ransom camp which honored her husband CHICK on his birthday Saturday. 'Twas a real holiday dinner with fried chicken and birthday cake and ice cream. Guests included Chick's three grandchildren and their parents, the PAUL RANSOMS and the RICHARD PIPES; plus ALICE and DOC WADDELL, and DOROTHY FULLER.

Guests of LELA SHATTUCK in her home on K street this week have been MRS. W. F. SHATTUCK of Evanston, Illinois, and her daughter, MIRIAM SHATTUCK. A number of parties have been given for these visitors.

The EVANS ETHRIDGES hosted a home dinner party last Saturday night. Guests included several couples who stopped in on their way to the Cotillion club record hop, and thirteen who stayed for dinner. Magnolia leaves and pine cones were used on the buffet, where barbecued chicken, rice casserole, and green beans were served. The group enjoyed a "home dancing party" after the meal.

Another group of Cotillion club members stopped by the LE LIS HALES' before the dance . . . And an intimate group went out to dinner in honor of the BILL SMITHS wedding anniversary . . . All of these, and others, totalling some sixty couples, met later at the Knights of Columbus hall for the informal dance.

A new dance club has been formed about town, made up of approximately one hundred couples. Plans are to have two formal parties each year, one in the spring and one in the fall. The name of the group has not been definitely decided, but the first dance is scheduled for November 6 at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club. Jan Garber's orchestra will play. The evening will begin at 7:30, with the members gathering for a drink and snacks before music for dancing starts at nine o'clock.

Another club as yet unnamed is the newly organized fun club for the seventh grades. One hundred and eight youngsters are members of the organization, which had its first party last night. This first affair was a hay ride, which began at the Neville High School. Trucks filled with hay took the group to Bancroft camp, where they unloaded for games and supper. The box lunches of po-boy sandwiches and pie were served with soft drinks. The members suggested names for the new club, and a cash prize is promised for the one to be chosen.

KARIN WHITE and her daughter MELISSA left on Wednesday for New York. They will visit relatives for about two weeks, when R. C. will join them for the trip home.

The FRED HEUNEFELDS, JR. are leaving today for a week's trip to the East. They will go direct to Boston, where they will rent a car for a drive through Massachusetts, Vermont, and New Hampshire. The New England states are at their most glorious this time of year. By Wednesday, the Heunefelds will be in New York for the American Cancer Society meeting. In addition to the business of the meeting, they plan a round of sightseeing and theatre going. They will take a plane home at the close of the meeting Saturday.

□ □ □

An advance Hallowe'en party honored JERELYN RYAN on her fourth birthday last Friday. Witches and goblins decorated the premises, and the young guests were in costume. The birthday girl was a leopard. Judged the best girl's costume was PATTY SPENCER's witch outfit, while best boy was TOMMY DIXON — a pirate with a knife through his head . . . The children played a target game of shoot the cat, with CINDY WILLIAMS and NED COURTMAN proving to be the best marksmen. Ice cream, cake, punch, and candy pumpkins were served to about thirty children.

Whoever said it, no one else has ever said it as well as William Shakespeare. Here is a right modern psychology lesson by the Bard:

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove.
O, no! It is an ever-fixed mark
That looks on tempests and is never shaken;
It is the star to every wand'ring bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rose lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error and upon me proved,
I never write, nor no man ever loved.

Mary A. Jones Complimented At Bridal Shower

A bridal shower honoring Mrs. Mary Alice Jones, the former Mary Alice Pearson, was given by the WMU at the Pisgah Baptist Church in Bernice recently. Mrs. Maxine Riodan and Mrs. Lorene Grafton served as hostesses.

The refreshment table, spread with a white lace cloth over orchid, was centered with an arrangement of orchid dalohan. Mrs. Grafton and Mrs. Riodan served punch and cake to the guests.

Evening shoes go exotic this season. Look for lots of beads, sequins, and sparkles. Delman shows a red satin pump with a high vamp, resembling a boot, which is cut out and traced with sequins. Beaded flowers decorate toes, and large rhinestones sparkle everywhere. Daytime shoes have a dressy look, and some are lined with gold kid. At - home mules come in printed cut-velvet, outlined in multi-colored sequins, gold lame, and paisley cut-velvet, or are studded with brilliants.

MRS. ORON MORGAN DOWDEY JR.

Miss Ruth George Connell became the bride of Oron Morgan Dowdey, Jr., on Sunday evening Oct. 5. The Reverend Thomas Shipp performed the ceremony in the chapel of Lovers Lane Methodist Church in Dallas, Texas.

Parents of the bride are Mrs. Ruth George Connell of Sheveport, and Tinsley Poole Connell of Houston. Mrs. Dowdey attended Centenary College, where she was a Chi Omega.

Mr. Dowdey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oron Morgan Dowdey, of Monroe. He served as an officer in the United States Navy and finished Ouachita Parish High High School, and attended Southern Methodist University, where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

BRIDAL GOWN

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of imported chantilly lace over rustling silk taffeta. The scoop neckline was embroidered with seed pearls. The moulded bodice had three quarter length sleeves and a cummerbund of taffeta. The bouffant skirt was ballerina length. Her veil of imported silk illusion, fell in a circular swing from a lace and tulle capulet that was encrusted with pearls and irridescent sequins. She carried a white orchid with dainty traditional bridal flowers surrounding it in a crescent.

Afternoon Rites Unite Miss Rebecca Woods And Richard S. Chamberlain

The Chapel of the First Baptist Church in Crossett was the setting for the wedding of Miss Rebecca Janice Woods, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buford Woods, and Richard S. Chamberlain, of Bastrop, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Chamberlain of Bastrop.

CEREMONY

The Rev. H. Hinkie, of Bastrop, officiated at the double ring ceremony at 6:00 p.m. on October 11th 1958. The couple exchanged vows before a chancel decorated with white gladiola, greenery, and lighted tapers. Mrs. Felton Taylor was organist, and Mrs. Wade Tull, soloist, sang "Because," and "I Love You Truly."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of Chantilly lace and tulle over satin, with fitted bodice, and sleeves which tapered to lily points over her hands. The bouffant skirt swept to a chapel train in back, and the scooped neckline was accented with iridescent sequins. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a seed pearl coronet. She carried a white satin-covered Bible topped with a white orchid and a spray of lily of the valley.

MAID OF HONOR

Miss Cecelia Watson, maid of honor, wore a ballerina length dress of iridescent lavender taffeta with pink cummerbund and matching shoes. Her headdress was a lavender half-hat with pink veiling. She carried a single long-stemmed rose. Identically dressed bridesmaids were Miss Margie Miles and Miss Barbara Hancock. Mary Anne Woods, niece of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore an ankle-length dress of lavender satin covered with net, with double ruffles of the net on the full skirt. She wore a lavender velvet headband and carried a lavender satin and net-covered basket filled with pink rose buds.

The groom's father served his son as best man. Groomsmen were Tom Reece Hudson, of Lake Providence, and Glen Edwards, of Bastrop.

The bride's mother wore a sapphire blue two-pieced suit with accordian pleated skirt and matching feather hat. At her shoulder she wore a white dahlia corsage and she carried white gloves. The groom's mother wore a brown two-pieced suit with rose-tan accessories and a corsage of white dahlias.

RECEPTION

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception in the Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's table was covered with white net over taffeta edged with green ivy. The centerpiece was of white chrysanthemums and stephanotis. A traditional three-tiered wedding cake was on the table.

Following a wedding trip through the South the couple will be at home in Charleston, S. C., where the groom is stationed at the Charleston Air Force Base.

Your Basic Clothes Need Accessories

By BETH BLAIR

Plan a basic look in your new winter wardrobe so that you can vary the look of a dress or suit with different accessories. Remember also that a fur accessory as a hat, muff or handbag will give it an air of elegance. A reader writes—

Dear Miss Blair:

I have a gray flannel suit from last winter but I have worn it so much I am tired of it. It has a hip-length jacket cut straight and finished with pearl buttons; skirt is straight. Can you suggest some way to make it look different?

Your gray suit sounds like a wonderful basic costume but you may have gotten into a rut as far as accessories for it are concerned. This could be a soft gray suede or perhaps a cocoa tone with shoes to match. The belt should hit your normal waistline and reach about four inches above it. Another idea would be to add a little fur collar of mink or fox. This could be in white or gray to go with the suit. Altering the suit jacket might help give it new interest too — perhaps shortening it to waist-length or slightly shorter to show interesting leather belts.

Dear Miss Blair:

Will you suggest a basic foundation wardrobe? I am a teen-ager and have only recently begun to wear pantie girdles in addition to bras.

I suggest you have about a half dozen brassieres perhaps in white for the most part. Have one of these in black if you wear it a lot and one in a strapless style or with straps far over to sides for cut-out necklines. The number of pantie girdles should number enough for a fresh one each day — a minimum of three would make it possible to have one always ready to wear with one drying (the third one you have on). Of course, add to this group if you can afford more.

FEED THE KIDS

It's a good idea to have children's snacks ready for them when they come home from school. If sandwich, crackers, fruit or usual fare is at hand, they will not interrupt you in the event you are busy with other chores or entertaining guests in the afternoon.

USING THE NOODLES

NEW YORK — Exotic noodles pep up a dull menu. Heat 2 tablespoons olive or salad oil with ¼ cup butter or margarine.

Add 8 ounces (about 4 cups) cooked fine egg noodles, ½ cup chopped onions and 1 garlic clove, finely chopped. Cook over medium heat, string constantly, until noodles are lightly browned and onions are tender.

Add 2½ cups chicken bouillon, 1 cup light cream, and 1 package (10-ounce) frozen peas. Cover and cook until noodles are tender. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serves 4-6.

Career Women Make The Best Wives

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Writer

Career women make the best wives, says Wesley Simpson, who is married to one.

Despite the fact that his wife Adele is one of the world's busiest women, Wesley radiates husbandly happiness and pride. Sayshe: "I'm sick of hearing the old argument about whether a woman should choose between a career or home. My wife handles both with one hand."

Adele Simpson, one of the top names among American fashion designers, is a tiny dynamo of 4 feet 10, who has managed to run a town house and a country estate, raise a son and a daughter, and conduct one of the country's biggest dress businesses, all without getting a hair out of place.

During the week, she gets to her office on 7th Avenue shortly after dawn, has lunch at her desk, copes with temperamental models, buyers, fashion editors and store owners all day and then goes home to entertain anywhere from two to a dozen guests at dinner.

Weekends she takes off for the Simpson country home at Greenwich, Conn., where the house usually is full of weekend guests from Paris, Rome, London, Los Angeles or points between.

In between times she always has time to help settle the problems of her 19-year-old daughter Joan or her 21-year-old son Jeffrey and welcome their friends at either domicile. Sometimes this amounts to an influx of 15 or 20 young but the Simpsons manage to take them all in stride.

"If I ever had, had to make the choice between home and business, I would have given up the career without a second thought, Adele says. "But I never had to. Maybe I'm fortunate in having a well-adjusted family, or maybe I've just learned to budget my time, but I'm sure neither Wesley nor the children ever have felt neglected. In fact they seem to thrive on all the excitement and the hectic kind of life we lead."

"I wouldn't want a wife who had no interests outside of cooking and housekeeping," says her husband, a banker. "The world's most glamorous women always have been the busiest ones. And they're the ones who know how to be wives, mothers and hostesses too—with no sweat."

TEMPT 'EM

Do not fret trying to get the children to eat cooked cereal in the morning. Sprinkle a few cake decorations over it, and you will find they will welcome the cereal bowl.

Scatter Pillows Lend A Hand In Romance

Scatter pillows can make a steady-dating pair in the room of any young modern. These little girl and boy pillows are beguiling and a nice change from animal motifs that have been around for a time. If you get busy on this project early, you can make pillows for all the starry-eyed teen-aged girls on your Christmas list, one way to solve that "what-can-I-give-that-she-doesn't-have" problem.

Cotton feed or flour bags are ideal for stuffed pillows of this sort, say the experts at your local sewing center. Select two 25-pound print sacks in bright prints. Prepare them for sewing by ripping the chain-stitched seams and soaking the bag in warm, soapy water to remove labels or printed brand names, then dry and press.

It's a good idea to embroider the pillows before sewing them together. Cotton rug yarn is used for the hair. Hair styles may be changed to match the teen-ager who will own the pillows. Such styles as pigtails, pony tails, or crew cuts can be done easily with black, brown, red or yellow yarn.

If you have one of the automatic slant-needle sewing machines or an automatic zigzagger, you can applique the features; otherwise, hand-embroidery is your best bet.

If you are giving a set of pillows to a girl with a string of beaux, make a series of interchangeable neckties for the boy pillow, each with a name embroidered on the bow. Then Sam, or Jim, or Tom, can be sure he's first in her heart, if his name is on the tie when he comes to call.

The bidding:

South, 2 spades; West, 3 hearts; North, Pass; East, Pass.

South, 4 clubs; West, Pass; North, 4 spades; East, Pass.

South, 6 spades; West, Pass; North, Pass; East, Pass.

Opening lead: Heart ace.

When it is to your interest for an adversary to make a certain play you must not place any obstacles in his way. If he is trying to enter dummy to take a finesse which you know will lose, by all means let him get there. Observe the battle of wits between South and West in today's hand.

South's final bid was unsound, and the slam contract should never have been reached. After North's preference bid of four spades, gambling that his partner had the king of that suit, South leaped to six. His proper call at this point is five spades. This announces to partner the ability to take 11 tricks.

Any card that North has that will certainly produce a trick will justify his going to six. If North holds the king of spades he must conclude that partner is counting on losing that trick and should, therefore, bid a slam himself.

West led the ace of hearts and South's queen fell. There could be no question that it was a singleton, because declarer could not have bid a slam with two losing hearts in his hand.

It was evident therefore, that declarer could not enter dummy, but West graciously placed him there by continuing a heart.

Declarer heaved a sigh of relief and reached for the nine of spades about to try the trump finesse, when it suddenly occurred to him that West had been much too generous.

Why had he so kindly put the declarer into the dummy when it must have been evident that declarer had no means of getting there on his own?

This was one gift horse that must be looked in the mouth. West's only reason for wanting declarer to lead from dummy was to permit the spade finesse. On this line of reasoning, South went up with the ace and dropped the singleton king.

Girl Scout News

Congratulations to the winners of the eleven ribbons won by Girl Scouts at the Caldwell Art Festival. Two blue ribbon winners were Mary Alice Pankey, last year in Troop 61, now a member of the new Northside Junior High troop, not yet numbered, for a tile decorated with slip trailing in an abstract design, and Becky Middleton, Troop 24, for a bowl made by the coil method. These girls made their prize winning pieces as part of their work on the Pottery badge in a special class last June, as did several other winners.

Red ribbons went to Jeanette Bush, Troop 17, for her tile with leaf imprint, made at day camp last summer, to Mickie Varnado, Troop 24, for her figure of a poodle dog, to Mary Alice Yeldell, Troop 48, for her figure of a dog, breed unknown, and to Marilyn Denoux, of the same troop, for her coil - method bowl.

Three members of Troop 44, which worked on the Pottery badge last year under the direction of their leader, Mrs. Louis Breard, Jr., earned white ribbons. They are Jane Cook, for her figurine, Virginia Starnsey for her pinch pot, and Renee Breard for a small ash tray decorated with a modern design. Susie Wright, Troop 48, won a white ribbon for her pinch pot decorated with an incised Indian design, and Valerie Fike, youngest of all the winners and the only Brownie Scout to win recognition, earned a place with her pinch pot made in Troop 51 last spring under the direction of her leader, Mrs. W. W. Hathorn. Valeria is now a member of Troop 35 at Plum Street School.

Needless to say, all work was original, meeting Girl Scout standards which allow no copying, no patterns, no molds. One young girl who was having fun with her first experience with clay, was heard to remark "Just think! This started out as a lump of clay!" The program committee is grateful to all the girls who brought their pieces for the festival. Visitors made many favorable comments on the whole Girl Scout exhibit. Prize - winning pieces and others are on display at the office this week.

We're hearing of outdoor activities galore these pretty days, which is as it should be Troop 41, second year Brownies, Mrs. John Salisbury and Mrs. R. L. Kiper, leaders, visited a cotton field on a sunny day and received permission to pick some. All had fun. Troop 15 Mrs. Norman Deaton and Mrs. Charles Schneider, leaders, went on a hike to the Indian Mound one pretty meeting day. The girls were curious about the mound and would like to know more. Anyone know any details?

Troop 51, fourth grade Brownies, learned to cook breadtwists at one of their regular meetings. Making a fire in the little park behind their meeting place, the girls waited until the coals were just right, Mrs. Hathorn said, and cooked their twists to a turn, filling the hole with butter and jelly, and finding them so-o-o good.

Only local adult meeting this week is the neighborhood meeting at Plum Street School at 1:00 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. There are some important matters to come before it. A neighborhood meeting means all registered Girl Scout adults living in that section of town should attend.

The Models Not Royalty Are Aloof

By MARY PRIME

NEW YORK (UPI)—At British royal fashion shows, the models—not the royalty—are aloof.

So says Helen Connor, one of London's highest paid models, who shows the latest fashions to women in the royal family.

Miss Connor is "rather icy" when she models, never smiles, and follows the British pattern of "drifting in and out aloofly."

But Princess Margaret is like any other girl—"very human. She rushes up to us afterwards and wants to feel the material," said the tall, leggy blonde in an interview on her first trip to the United States. She had never modeled a swim suit ("I'm the fur coat type") until the Jantzen Company brought her to New York for an international style show.

SELECT AUDIENCE

When royalty views high fashions, a select 40 or 50 persons attend. Shows are held in private homes or plush hotels. Most frequent requests for the showings come from Princess Margaret or the Queen Mother, occasionally from the Duchess of Kent and the Duchess of Gloucester but rarely from Queen Elizabeth.

Because the Queen's clothes must be exclusive, designers go to Buckinhgam Palace. But Princess Margaret expresses great interest in what other women are wearing and wants to see what's new in the salons. If she or the Queen Mother choose a gown from a collection, duplicates are taken out of circulation.

"Margaret has bought things I've modeled, usually evening clothes, summer dresses or tweed suits. I've never seen her buy a fur coat—I don't know where she gets them," said Miss Connor.

ADAPT WHEN POSSIBLE

Although the princess and the Queen do not always find fashion suitable, such as the current 19-inch hemline, they adapt when possible and have shortened their skirts "two inches."

When showing to any royalty, the models walk in one at a time, and curtsey to all royalty — "in varying degrees."

"There's much practicing before one of these shows. There's always a great, great carry-on, all very solemn, unless someone loses a petticoat, falls while curtseying, or opens a jacket when they forgot to put on a blouse."

Miss Connor also meets other celebrities, such as Winston Churchill (he's sweet) Robert Taylor (He's divine, I must say) and titled bachelors (I'm not interested in titles).

PEAR PIE TIME

NEW YORK — It's Bartlett pear pie time again.

For a 2-crust 9-inch pie, you'll need 3½ cups sliced, peeled, cored pears.

Mix pears with 1 tablespoon lemon juice, grated rind of 1 lemon, 3 tablespoons flour, ¾ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon nutmeg and a few grains of salt. Spoon pear mixture into lower crust, dot with 1 tablespoon butter, cover with vented upper crust and seal edges. Bake in 425 degree oven 40 to 50 minutes.

Empire is the magic word for fall millinery, say stylists for Women's Wear Daily, a trade publication. The high drum crowns of Directoire inspirations, poke bonnets, bloused mop caps, modified postillion crowns with close side - rolled brims all ride the current fashion band wagon. One recurrent shape for fall is the lofty toque with manipulated crown — draped, pouffed, or tiered. Every possible medium is used for these hats, from furry fabrics, to real fur, satin, gold lame, and soft felt.

Teenagers Plan Careers In Dress Designing

NEW YORK (UPI) —The younger generation seems bent on making the housewife extinct.

In a questionnaire sent to girls in the United States, Canada, Hawaii, and Alaska, not one girl expressed a desire to be a housewife, rear children, or follow any non-salaried career.

The girls, considered typical teens, are 70 regional winners chosen from 50,000 youngsters who entered the annual teen-age dressmaking contest, sponsored by the Singer Sewing Machine Co.

"In the six years we've held the contest, this is the first time the finalists have voted strictly for careers. We think it's particularly startling in view of the fact that so many of the girls are within a year or two of the current marriage age," said a spokesman for Singer. The contestants range from 10 to 17 years.

SOME UNDECIDED

Some youngsters in the 10 to 13 year group put "undecided" after their career choices. One girl simply said, "I'm too young to know yet." But only 5 per cent of the girls from 14 to 17 years were undecided.

If the girls continue with their present plans, they should help relieve the teacher shortage. More than 25 per cent want to teach a variety of subjects, from home economics to music. One 11-year-old, Sheryl Angstman, of Denver, Colo., wants to teach handicapped children.

Many teen-agers plan on careers in fashion or dress designing. Others aim to be airline hostesses, scientists, doctors, nurses, actresses and models, and one girl hopes to be a pharmacist.

There is a small trend toward spiritual careers, the survey showed. Mary Lou Smidt, of Britt, La., listed missionary work as a possible choice. Beverly Love, of Montgomery, Ala., said she plans to go to a Bible college, and Stephanie Robinson, of Welch, W. Va., wants to be a Christian education director. All girls questioned are active in local church work.

UNDAUNTED

The young ladies also believe in testing their career-girl wings early, and proved undaunted by a general shortage of jobs during the summer. Nearly 90 per cent spent their vacations earning hard cash.

Baby sitting was the most popular way of earning money in the younger age group.

These also tended to do more chores around the house for money. One enterprising youngster, Marikay Kinney, 13, of Scranton, Kan., was responsible for meals and housework while her mother held down a job. Another, Claudia Cook, 12, of Akron, Ohio, reported wearily that she did "everything—from helping with dishes to mowing the lawn."

Older girls preferred to work outside the house, as department store sales clerks, waitresses and office clerks.

Love Will Find Way To Mail Bag

By VIVIAN BROWN

Is it possible for a couple to live happily ever after, when the man is younger than the woman?

That's a question bothering a teen-ager 19, who is dating a boy 17.

"It seems," she says, "that my mother and father enjoy criticizing my relationship with the boy who is two years younger, although we get along beautifully. We may never marry, so why should they worry about it, and if we do marry isn't it our own business, about our ages, I mean?"

Parents do worry about such things, and there is no way to stop it. At age 19, a girl is likely to look more mature than a 17-year-old boy, and the contrast may worry parents. Many couples have found the age discrepancy no barrier to happiness, however, and if you feel that you have a meeting of minds with this boy, then do not worry about the opinions of onlookers. As you say, you may never be interested in marrying him anyway, if he proposes.

"My boyfriend asked me to go steady with him a few years ago. We have been doing that ever since. Now it seems he takes out other girls occasionally, although we have discussed marriage, and he resents the fact that I look at other boys or dance with them."

Grandma was a lot smarter than today's youth, because she wouldn't have been silly enough to tie herself down to one boy unless he showed concrete evidences of his affection, such as an engagement ring. The advantage of symbol was not so much its cost, but rather an indication of his intentions so that other girls knew that he had been taken. In those days other girls kept hands off a boy who had proposed to a girl, but these days anything can happen. There are some girls who wouldn't have the slightest qualms about flirting with a boy who is engaged, but on the whole there is less risk than just the steady-dating arrangement, which just seems to tie the girl up, letting her rely on chance to keep the romance alive.

"My 16-year-old sister who is a year younger than I flirts with all my boy friends, and every once in a while she manages to take away someone I like. Don't you think it is pretty dreadful of her to deliberately try to snatch my dates. She never gets a boy on any other basis."

There are girls who specialize in stealing other girls beaus. Your sister may not be doing this intentionally, however, so you had better decide whether the boy or Sis is to blame.

Right, gentle, elegant news, this free and easy silhouetting of deep tone brown tweed, soft as butter. The chemise is shaped loosely to just below the hipline. The skirt is a slender shaft of tiers, fringed and fringed.

DOWN TO EARTH

NEW YORK — Plant bulbs now for flowers next spring.

Dutch bulb importers recommend planting bulbs until the end of November, or until frost hardens the ground. Follow planting rules on the package or booklet which comes with the bulbs. For example, place tulips six inches deep and six inches apart.

Don't plant bulbs in a single line. Clumps of five or more give a better effect, especially if all the bulbs in a clump are the same color.

Dr. Pareti Speaker At PTA Meeting

"What do we have in mind when we say health?" asked Dr. Marie L. Pareti, section chief of maternal and child health for the Louisiana Health State Department last night to the parents and teachers association of Plum Street School. Health doesn't constitute merely a disease free body but includes social-mental attitudes and environment. Tensions and pressures in our ever changing world is a challenge to parents and teachers to create better communities in which to rear our chfildern in honest values. The major problem in health taday from the age of one to the thirty-fourth year is credited to accidents. This chief threat reverts back too often to our children's training and environment.

Root Pruning Autumn Chore

By MILDRED SWIFT

Are you like some who feel that fall is a sadtime of year? Probably it's because falling leaves seem so final. The children are sad because of the confinement of school walls. One husband says it's a sad time of year because the leaves start falling before the grass stops growing.

Any way you look at it, fall is a time when there are garden jobs to be done. Many of these we've told you about in our columns. But — when talking to you, you tell me to keep on telling you lest you forget. Here goes! This is a good time of year to root-prune many large, fast growing shrubs. Privet hedge is a good example. It's just impossible to even grow St. Augustine close to these plants because the roots are so greedy and spread so far.

Sharpen the spade. Plunge this as deep as you can, about two feet from the main body of the hedge. This severs the large roots, yet doesn't damage the plant. New feeder roots start growing again.

This root pruning is a yearly process if you want any vegetation to grow near these large plants.

Mrs. Winnona Guidry, our state garden specialist, says why bother with privet when there are so many less greedy evergreens. Peggy Garnett says privet berries attract some of our loveliest birds. Wisteria is root pruned for a different reason — to encourage blooms.

MORE JOBS

In answer to the question, "Are snapdragons easy to grow from seed?" No! Not easy but it can be done. Your safest bet is to buy the plants from the nursery.

Plant calendula seed now. They'll bloom right through the winter months. Don't forget pansy plants. Sweet peas can be planted from now until Thanksgiving. Wisteria growers say fertilize this vine, now, instead of in late winter. They claim you get more blooms and less vine. You can use 8-8-8 but 5-10-5 would be better. There's less nitrogen in the latter, and growth is certainly not needed, when it comes to wisteria. They grow too much. Mr. Hunt says probably every other year is often enough to fertilize. If you're not having blooms, use bone meal.

OTHER REMINDERS

It's not too late to plant the spring blooming bulbs. Why not include some ranunculus and anemones? But hurry.

When planting ranunculus and anemone bulbs place the claws down. If you can't remember whether they go up or down, plant them on their sides. They'll bloom. Claws down is best and is the proper method. It is fatal to get them upside down.

Don't prune your roses now. Associate that job with Washington's birthday.

GOOD NEWS

Yes, a new method for whitening discolored nylon garments. Here are the instructions:

Wash garments thoroughly with soap or synthetic detergent by hand or in a washing machine, depending on the construction and type of the garment.

Into approximately one gallon of hot water (160 degrees) in an enamel container, add one package of color remover and immediately add wet garments. Stir gently while maintaining temperature. If after 30 minutes whiteness is restored, leave in 30 additional minutes. Temperatures in excess of 160 degrees may set wrinkles that are difficult to remove by ironing.

Into approximately one gallon of warm water add two tablespoonfuls chlorine bleach and two tablespoonfuls of detergent. Immerse garments and with occasional stirring let soak for 30 minutes. Rinse thoroughly in warm water.

For final rinse, immerse garment in approximately one gallon of warm water containing a tablespoonful of perborate bleach. (Borax will do.)

Drip dry and iron with a steam iron or a dry iron at "rayon" setting.

Any precautions supplied by the manufactures of any product used should be followed.

SPOTLIGHT

Now that shorter skirts are back, your legs will be much more in the spotlight. If they are near perfect you may want to play them up with those glamorous new colors. If you're on the conservative side you can still emphasize them with very dark or extremely pale hues.

On the other hand, if your legs are not your most intriguing feature, minimize them. DO IT with a stocking shade that blends well with your costume and shoes. Remember, too, that plump legs look trimmer in seamed hose.

COLOR, COLOR!

This is a very colorful season. Red in all tones is top choice. Red is followed by soft greens, bright electric blues, purples and a wide range of beige and gold tones. Soft brown fur tones are high in favor. Naturally the little black dress and suit are always with us.

When you choose your color this fall, however, the dress is not enough. Hat, gloves and shoes should match exactly, to carry out the important one - color look.

Bracelets, if you choose them with care, can accentuate one's attractive features, so the fashion and beauty experts tell us. They say the bulkier and higher the bracelet, the smaller the wrist and hand will seem. However, if your wrist bone is prominent, avoid a plain bracelet. One with bright stones would be good — and they tell us to wear the bracelet low on the arm. A narrow band is best. One too wide will make the hand look bony.

If your wrist is pleasantly slender, it can take a more eye arresting bracelet. It could even be tighter fitting.

If your hand is short, or if your nails are long, set your bracelet somewhat higher on the arm. This will allow the wrist to blend with the hand and give the effect of length. This will counteract any stubbiness at the tips of the fingers.

Green Brick Assets May Be Avoided

People buy green bricks as well as gold bricks.

The green bricks are the landscape "assets" that sometimes induce home seekers to buy established dream castles. Then the assets turn out to be duds.

A. F. Rumph, field representative of the Davey Tree Expert Co., points out that such plantings frequently contain items of doubtful worth. Old shrubbery may be badly overgrown. Trees may be long neglected and seriously weakened by disease, decay and passing storms. Existing landscapes often include species no longer recommended because they are prone to disease and expensive to maintain. Off with the old and on with the new greenery can make large holes in an already strained family bankroll.

Instead of getting trouble-free and relatively work-free grounds the home owner inherits a Pandora - box of groundskeeper woes. Chances are the previous owner was happy to get out from under.

It's relatively simple to avoid the headache and purse-break. Consult the best qualified tree expert, landscape architect or nurseryman available before purchasing. His appraisal may have as much bearing on the price you should pay as the value of the land, neighborhood, house construction, improvements and other items of consideration.

EXTENSION NEWS AND VIEWS

Cuttings Yield Winter Blooms

By AUDREY DAWSON

I've had a number of calls this week about the strawberry barrel. We, in the Agricultural Extension, recommend it only as an interesting novelty for the gardener. We have the instructions for making one and you may get a copy by calling our office FA 3-2551. The barrel should be about a 55 gallon iron bound wooden barrel. The varieties of strawberries recommended to use in the barrel are Konvoy, to Marion Bell, Klonmore or the Progressive Everbearing. Now is the time to order strawberries if you are going to plant them this year.

GARDENING

There are many ways in which you may have winter blooms in your home. One of the quickest ways is using cuttings. Look over your flowers as geraniums, coleus, lantana, verbena or begonias that are growing in your yard. Select new growth but be sure branches or stalks are stiff enough to snap back when bent sharply. Use a sharp knife and cut off just below a leaf joint. Don't use your shears for this job as the shears will crush the plant tissue. Trim the tops back and make each cutting about 3 to 4 inches long. Let them wilt slightly then dust with a rooting hormone. Place in container or pot filled with half sand and half peatmoss.

Bury the pots up to the rims in a partly shaded spot outdoors and cover with inverted pot or plastic and keep moist. In a few weeks you'll find most of the cuttings have rooted and you can move into individual pots of regular potting soil and by mid winter your house will be bright with blooms.

JUST TALKING

I saw a good definition of glamour in some of my reading a few days ago that interested me so — I'll pass it on to you. Lilly Dache, one of the great leaders of the fashion world today gave this definition:

G — Good grooming
L — Love
A — Ambition
M — Making the most of yourself
O — Originality
U — Understanding
R — Realism

HINTS

Save your worn out nylon hosiery to stuff the cuddle toys you plan to make for Christmas. Clipped into one inch pieces, the stockings make a light, soft stuffing that is washable and dries quickly.

When removing spots from dark garments, apply the cleaning fluid or tepid soap mixture with a piece of old nylon stocking. It is excellent for this purpose as it leaves no lint.

Fold pillow slips together in pairs when you iron them. You won't have to search for matching ones when changing your bed linens.

Wash your nylon underclothes with just the white laundry as even washing them with a pink slip — it will pick up the dye from that slip. Nylon can take hot water just like your white cottons.

EXHIBITS

Two of our Home Demonstration club women entered a clothing exhibit at the State Fair in Shreveport, which opened yesterday. Mrs. Luttrell won the sweepstake prize in this division at the parish fair with 11 blue ribbons, 5 red and 2 whites. Mrs. Luttrell was one of the top winners at the parish fair. She received over fifty dollars in cash award.

Mrs. Cleburne White, of the Cadeville Club, entered a tailored dress, a house dress, church dress and a coat in the state exhibit.

The 4-H members from the parish have an exhibit of clothing and food preservation at the state fair. If you have the time, be sure to go in the Agriculture Exhibit Building and look for Ouachita's exhibits.

A THOUGHT

Wanting to spend a quiet evening at home — isn't a sign you're old and ready to be turned out to pasture. It may mean you're already living in clover.

Leaf Burning Smoke Signals Note Of Alarm

The skies of almost every home community will be black with distressing smoke signals during the weeks ahead. These signals are by - products of the leaf burning season and horticultural authorities are upset because it hinders rather than helps the landscaping.

Tree men in particular are concerned because leaves have special virtues as vegetable matter so important as compost, according to O. S. Simpkins, field representative of the Davey Tree Expert Co. They return trace elements, such as iron and magnesium, to the soil — too often depleted of these nutrients.

The leaf - burning practice usually is initiated by the home owner who feels justifiably or not he has no facilities for composting tree leaves. Actually, he has the means at hand for painlessly converting leaves into material that will benefit both trees and lawns.

Leaves can be ground or shredded right on the lawn by a rotary mower. Action is the same as in cutting grass. Shredded leaf particles will work their way down around the grass roots and eventually decay. There is only one precaution. Make sure the leaves are comparatively dry. This can be done by first scattering the leaves over the lawn for even distribution and better drying. Too much of this do - it - yourself compost over any one area may prove harmful by choking the grass.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Clubs To Meet At Winnsboro

By MARY M. JARDINE

One of the highlights of the garden clubs season is the coming annual meeting of the Federated Garden Clubs of the Fifth District of Louisiana. The meeting will be held in Winnsboro on Thursday, November 6, 1958 at the Winnsboro Court House.

Mrs. J. W. Huckabay of Tallulah, Fifth District director, has planned a most interesting day. Registration begins at 9:00 a.m. followed by the business meeting and election of officers. Luncheon at noon. Mrs. Roy Davis, Shreveport, will do a flower arrangement demonstration at 1:00 p.m. Mrs. Davis is a very talented designer of floral arrangements and has lectured all over Louisiana, Texas and Alabama and Mississippi.

She is an Accredited Flower Show Judge and is currently serving as Director of the Fourth District of Louisiana. Be sure to send your registration to Mrs. Roy Taylor, Winnsboro by October 31, 1958. This is an event you all will want to attend.

BERRIED SHRUBS

Our display at the Garden Center this week featured the use of berried shrubs in arrangements. As a follow through to our program last week, gardeners are urged to plant berried shrubs as an invitation to the wild song birds.

Mrs. Max Kulcke designed a most colorful arrangement in orange and brown tones. A leaf shaped brown container was placed on a polished palette base of mahogany. A graceful triangular design was effected with a bold placement of the brilliant orange love - apples (solanum) in a vertical position. This line was strengthened with orange pyracantha berries. Two graceful curved sprays of pyracantha formed the right angle of the triangle. The line was further emphasized with low placements of glossy Buford holly foliage and a spray of green holly berries following the right hand placement. A heavy cluster of pyracantha berries in brilliant orange formed the center of interest. Very colorful. Gladys designed this to be used on a mahogany desk in a wood panelled room.

The bright violet berries of French Mulberry (Callicarpa americana) were featured in the next design. A background of soft pink was the perfect setting for this arrangement. I selected a redbud colored bowl low and square in shape. The needle point holder was placed in one corner so that the triangular design would fan out over one corner of the container. The design was very simple. Three triangular placements of the berried branches of the mulberry. These lines were strengthened by shorter placements of the same berries. Fatshedera foliage was placed low unifying the design and the bowl. The lovely French Mulberry is a colorful note for gardens. This is one of our native woodland plants. If you dig in the woods for one I would suggest selecting a fairly small plant. They grow fast.

FEATHERS

Red - birds made of real feathers (very realistic) were the highlight of a composition using a gray weathered log. A ligustrum "tree" appeared to be growing behind the old log. Spanish moss was draped over a curve of the wood and a cluster of ligustrum berries growing through. The two cardinals, one with his wings spread for flight, contemplated the feast of berries growing before them. The composition was placed on a piece of gray, weathered board and staged against a gray background.

Our display of bird houses and feeders created much interest. In addition to the wide variety available at local shops many can be made at home by the do-it-yourself fans. On display this week was a most attractive blue-bird house made by Barney Lipscomb.

This was the official size and painted in brown overlaid with black to create a rustic finish. Barney selected one-half inch marine plywood for his material. The top of the peaked roof is hinged so that the rest can be cleaned, after Mr. and Mrs. Bluebird have raised their family and moved away.

I did not know that different birds liked different size houses until I started studying them. The blue - bird likes his house about five feet from the ground. Approximately fence post height. If you live at the edge of town or in the country by all means have some blue-bird houses available.

BIRD FEEDERS

A most attractive bird feeder was made by Mr. L. M. McBryde. Made of pine it was about 16 inches long and 9½ inches high with a peaked roof, also hinged for easy filling. Inside the "house" was a glass trough to hold the feed. The birds just love this one, as the roof keeps the grain dry and they can feed and visit out of the weather.

Be sure to turn in to Open House next Wednesday at 12:15. Jo Evans will talk to us on Bulbs for Louisiana gardens.

We are most fortunate in securing a copy of Elizabeth Lawrence's book "A Southern Garden" for our garden center library. This book is now out of print. Also we have Miss Lawrence's latest book, "The Little Bulbs." Be sure to stop by and look them over.

THE SOUTHERN GARDENER

Tractor Best For Subsoiling

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The sunshiny days from now till Christmas are the best time of the year for gardening activities in the south. Such good weather and cool days give everyone a yen to dig if they are ever going to have such a yen!

Deep digging is the very best preparation we southerners can make against the several different droughts we are sure to have though we never do know exactly when they will come between April and November. We have mentioned several times in the column that a tractor with what is called a sub - soiler will do more deep digging for you than you can get done in any other way. Where you can get in to use it, a subsoiler will do deep soil preparation better and at one third the cost of having it done by hand.

SUBSOIL

New areas where you are going to plant shrubs, perennials bulbs or grass should be subsoiled as deeply as you can go. Rocks and roots will be brought to the surface, and the deep stirring of the soil will allow the moisture to rise quickly during dry times. After the sub - soiling has been done, some kind of humus (soaked peat moss, thoroughly rotten saw dust, rotten leaves, compost or any other decayed vegetable matter) should be spread over the area from four to 10 inches deep. Then the same tractor that has done the sub-soiling can first turn the humus under and then mix it with the soil. These two operations are more thorough after subsoiling.

Most of our soils are deficient in phosphorous and will benefit from five pounds of bone meal to the 100 square feet.

From three to five pounds of a complete fertilizer should be scattered over each 100 square feet, also. Some people like to turn their fertilizer under and some have it harrowed into the top five or six inches with a disc harrow. Where it is possible to get coarse — not fine — sand, heavy clay soils can be kept open and made easy to work in by discing in four inches of coarse sand in addition to the humus. In flower beds that are likely to be permanent, it is a joy to have this perfect soil where you may dig and plant flowers for the rest of your life. Even when it is raining, you can work in such dirt!

PREPARATION

If you have been struggling along, trying to grow plants in soil that has never been really prepared, you will be surprised that gardening can become a joy in soil that is "right." Keep a mulch over well prepared soil, and your watering is cut down to a fourth. Only in real droughts do you have to water. When you do water, the results are very surprising.

Ike Designates Farm - City Week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower Friday designated the week beginning Nov. 21 as National-Farm-City Week.

In a formal proclamation, the President said "continued mutual understanding among those who produce this bountiful supply of farm products, those who process these products, and those who consume them" is an important part of American life.

ANCIENT POTTERY FOUND

CHIBA, Japan (UPI)—Japanese archeologists said Friday that eight ancient eathern jars uncovered in a Chiba schoolyard might be the oldest in the world. Scholars of Tokyo and Meiji universities said the jars might be more than 10,000 years old, or at least 3,000 years older than the Egyptian find considered to be the most ancient earthenware discovered so far. The scholars planned chemical tests to confirm their estimates.

The bold bright yellow flowers of the candle tree were placed in a triangle pattern. Foliage of eleagnus, camellia seed pods and the berries of the pyracanthea was just the right texture and color for this distinctive design.

The president, Mrs. W. G. Haynes, called the meeting to order and welcomed our guest, Mrs. A. Dickerson.

During a business period, reports of club officers and interesting correspondence was read.

Divers Find New World Of Beauty Under Water

Coral Reefs, Caverns Are Ports Of Call

By BOB EWING

The advent of the SCUBA (self-contained - underwater - breathing-apparatus) has made it possible for anyone in fair health, free of heart trouble, to explore safely the wonders of the world beneath the surface of the sea.

Good SCUBA consists of a fully automatic two - stage demand type regulator that couples with a tank designed to hold compressed - air. The regulator is designed to give air from the tank to the individual easily in any position (upside-down, etc.) at any depth to which man may safely descend and to fully equalize the pressure within the diver to the surrounding pressure at all times irrespective of the depth.

Because of this, the diver has no constant ear - pains — as he descends and his ears begin to hurt, he merely has to swallow to "clear his ears" which is in reality equalizing the pressure in the eustachian tubes in his ears to the outer pressure. He then has an equal amount of pressure pushing out on his ear-drums as there is pushing in and this, of course relieves all pain in the ears.

A single - tank lung will hold about 70 cubic feet of air at 2700 pounds pressure per square inch which will give the diver about an hour's supply of air near the surface but only about fifteen minutes of air at a much greater depth, say 150 feet. The tank has a fool-proof air reserve that warns the diver when he is running out of air by becoming hard to breath. The diver then pulls the reserve lever which releases another 500 pounds pressure per square inch of air which is equivalent to approximately 5 minutes of breathing time and is plenty of time to surface from a dive as deep as 250 feet.

REGULATOR

Should any part of the regulator fail to function properly, it is constructed to give a constant free-flow of air rather than fail to operate altogether. This is true of all two - stage regulators but if anything goes wrong with a one-stage regulator, it is likely to produce a negative action which could result in serious trouble. Although other units have had a few unfortunate victims over the past few years, on the greater numbers of diving accidents are caused by unfamiliarity with the use of equipment, not respecting the water (it only takes an inch of water to drown in), and plain carelessness.

The diver must use flippers to propel himself for without them, he is like a bird attempting to fly without wings. A mask enables the diver to see in clear water as well as on the surface and is another necessity in the diver's gear with the SCUBA on, it is possible to clear any water out of the mask that might get in by a simple procedure.

The mask covers only the eyes and nose. A neoprene rubber hose fits in the mouth that is attached to the SCUBA regulator to supply air to the diver. The last necessity is a weight belt. The weight belt is the diver's provision for perfect balance in the water. This usually takes from 2 to 8 pounds of weight depending on the build of the individual and the type of water (salt-water is more bouyant than fresh - water). Once the diver has determined the correct amount of weight to use, he will find that he can hang suspended in the water with no gravity pulling him down and no bouyancy pushing him up — it is a wonderful sensation to move unhampered in any direction with an almost effortless kick of the flippers.

FIRST DIVE

Just a short six years ago, I donned mask, flippers and a SCUBA for the first time and slipped into a crystal - clear fresh water spring in northern Florida along with a friend of mine who had also just purchased some new diving gear. Cousteau (the inventor of the SCUBA) described his first dive as the most exhilarating experience he had ever known and further said that it cured him of a twenty year dream of being able to fly through the air like a bird — I can say that he did not exaggerate in the least. Since then, I have been diving all through the Bahama Islands in the West Indies, in all of the major fresh water springs throughout Florida, all along the cost of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Florida, and I have never ceased to be amazed at the beauty and wonders of the underwater worlds.

BAHAMIAN VOYAGE

Following is an article that I wrote for the Skin Diver Magazine in September of 1957 about a five - week diving and underwater photography expedition that I went on in the West Indies in the summer of 1956 entitled "Bahamian Voyage":

"Last year, I talked on a long distance telephone call to Jordan Klein of Underwater Sports, Inc., in Miami, Florida from my home in Monroe, Louisiana. We were discussing a special underwater camera case with twin flash units for my 33mm Nikon. During the conversation he mentioned a month - long expedition to the British West Indies that he was planning to make and asked me if I wanted to come along to work on some underwater photography with him. Well, that took care of that — I arrived in Miami about two months later to help get the eighty - foot diver - rigged cruiser, the "Mako," ready for its voyage through the outer Bahama Islands and coral reefs.

During the past few years, I had done quite a bit of underwater photography off the Louisiana coast while diving at the oil rigs there. I had also taken pictures in several of the inland fresh-water springs throughout Florida and in the waters around the Florida Keys but had never satisfied my desire to work with my camera around good virgin coral reef.

Preparing the boat to be ready on time was a hectic job. A new ship-to-shore telephone, fathometer, and other electrical equipment had to be installed plus our diving gear, fuel, water, extra batteries, and food for the deep freeze.

GROUP

Frank Satenstein (Jackie Gleason's director) and Paul Heller from New York City, Pat Boatright, Joe Thomas (the fellow attacked by a barracuda two years ago while diving off the Miami coast — he received a fractured rib and lacerations requiring 23 stitches), Jordan Klein from Miami, and myself comprised the party for the undersea adventure.

Preparations completed, the 'Mako" churned out of the Miami port on a hot summer day headed for Bimini, fifty miles east of Miami. We arrived there at dusk that evening, went ashore and ate dinner at a small restaurant where we inquired about a cook or steward to go with us for the duration of the trip. Fortune was with us as we were able to hire a good cook there on the island.

We dived a little the next day around a shallow water wreck a few miles from Bimini and then moved on to the town of Spanish Wells, Eluthera Island where we hired a guide to take us safely through the islands without ending up on top of a reef. He really knew the islands well and I doubt if the "Mako" could have made it without him. There's a lot of reef out there and many boats have realized it too late — those are the ones we search for and explore today.

The reefs around Eluthera Island are some of the most beautiful I have ever seen. The next morning when we left Spanish Wells to begin the day's diving there was no wind whatsoever. The diving conditions were perfect and the water fantastically clear. The "Mako" dropped anchor in 60 feet of water. I grabbed my camera, flashbulbs, and lung then slipped beneath the surface of the crystalline sea.

As I neared the bottom, the reefs were like skyscrapers towering above me, growing to within several feet of the surface. The ocean floor was teeming with fish of every size, shape, and kind. The colorful marine tropicals greeted me along with the larger species of fish. I started taking color slides as fast as I could focus and all was fine until I got back to the "Mako." I hadn't tightened a screw in the bottom of my camera case and it was full of salt water. I immediately put the camera in fresh water and then dried it and worked on it. By the time I got to sleep that night, I thought I had saved it. The next morning, however, I was a sad photographer as all the parts were frozen. For the next week, my photography was confined to the surface using my Leica. I had another camera flown to one of the islands from Miami. When we arrived there several days later and picked it up, I was well again.

I had a good time during the days I wasn't taking any underwater pictures. Pat Boatright and I landed a 78 pound record grey snapper (he didn't like being speared and knocked my mask and mouthpiece off in ninety feet of water) near Rocky Point, Abaco Island.

SHARK SCARE

The very next day, Satenstein, Boatright, and I were diving quite a distance from the boat with out double - tank lungs when we ran into a seven - foot "fish" shark (so called because they have taken fish from a few divers throughout the neighboring waters . . . the actual species is unknown to me but they are considered as very dangerous sharks to divers in the West Indies . . . they resemble the black - tip shark). I first saw it rush out from under a ledge along a beautiful strip of reef in about thirty feet of water. I motioned to my two companions but they didn't understand me until they looked up and saw it coming straight at us at a tremendous speed.

Our eyes must have gotten as big as our masks as it rushed to within five feet of us. Suddenly, it veered off and disappeared into the blue. A moment later, it reappeared coming straight at us from a different direction. By this time, we were back-to-back in a circle sort of like a wagon train preparing to ward off an Indian attack. I got in a coral "fox-hole" wondering what the devil was wrong with the shark.

It made several more runs toward us and then disappeared again. We waited for it to come back for a few minutes and when it didn't show up, we nodded silent agreement to leave the area. Pat then remembered something he had left at the edge of the reef — a 50 pound grouper on a spear. I suppose that may have accounted for the shark's excitement.

Boatright picked up his grouper and about that time we saw a tail protruding from under a ledge. Our acquaintance was still with us. I was ready to leave it in peace but I was voted down. Boatright took the first honors with speargun followed by Satenstein. To our surprise, it merely wedged itself further under the ledge rather than rushing out as we had expected. After about an hour and a half, it began to weaken and a short time later the shark was high and dry after being hoisted up onto the Mako's deck with half a dozen spears protruding from its once streamlined body.

The only other shark killed on the trip was a ten - foot sand shark. I had my new camera by then and photographed the undersea battle. The credit for this shark goes to Satenstein and Boatright. They put the large shark out of commission in a very short time.

SHIP WRECK

Several days later, we dived around a ship wreck farther on down the coast line of Abaco in 85 to 100 feet of water. As soon as we anchored, we were over the side and into the water. Hordes of fish greeted us as we descended toward the hull of the wreck. It was the remains of an old freighter and appeared to be in fairly good condition. We went to work exploring and photographing the wreck and its inhabitants. We ended the day's diving by collecting some of the spiny - lobster lurking around the torn hull for our dinner that evening.

After dinner, we decided to leave for Munjack Reef near Green Turtle Cay. We heard it was one of the most unusual strips of reef in the Bahamas — and that it was, being about two miles long and two hundred yards wide. It broke the surface and dropped straight off on either side to depths of over a hundred feet deep. Beautiful staghorn coral covered much of the seascape here and to add to the scenery were huge silver tarpon and jewfish. Tremendous caves ran through the reef and thousands of transparent pilchers or glass minnows gave me the impression of huge sparkling glass chandeliers suspended in midair in the room of an old mansion. The sea seems almost a fantasy rather than a reality when one witnesses such picturesque scenes as this.

The days passed all too rapidly and almost before I realized it, we were on the last leg of the journey. Only four days of diving remained when we arrived at our final pre - planned diving destination near Grand Bahama Island. The sea life seemed to be exceptional here. We dived at a ship wreck where we saw everything from sharks and schools of extra - large barracuda to a six-foot wide sting-ray and two green sea turtles that we caught, the largest one weighing over 400 pounds.

We left Grand Bahama the next afternoon. We took our turns at the helm and sailed through a beautiful moonlit night and on into the next day's sunlight across the Gulf Stream arriving in Miami and terminating a wonderful trip about noon that day."

LOUISIANA DIVING

You don't have to go all the way to the Bahamas to enjoy diving at its best — just hop in your car and head south to the coast of our own state of Louisiana. The off-shore oil rigs have an abundance of big game fish for the diver that is comparable to the very best places known to man. The bottom of the oil rigs is the dwelling place of the enormous jewfish which sometime exceed a thousand pounds. When you hit one of those big babies with a spear and try to hold on, it's like trying to hold on to a locomotive. I have seen up to thirty jewfish under one oil rig and at the same time felt as though I was in a herd of elephants.

The rigs all have an abundance of amberjack, jack crevalle, sheepshead, spadefish, red-snapper, grouper, and some of the rigs farther out have an abundance of large barracuda.

The waters there do not have the beautiful scenery that coral reef offers but more big fish won't be found anywhere.

Ocean diving offers the greatest variety of thrills because of the abundance of life there. Contrary to popular belief, sharks and barracuda are not nearly so dangerous as some old tales of the sea would lead you to believe. Sometimes a shark or barracuda will make a pass at an object on the surface of the water but rarely, if ever, will they attack beneath the surface. The chances of being hit by lightning are far greater although the killer whale and sharks in very deep water (several thousand feet deep) are considered very dangerous because of the wild depths in which they live. The giant octopus may exist, but not in the depths accessible to man in the SCUBA and the diving record is 475 feet deep with a lung. Actually, the biggest hazard in diving in the ocean in clear water is getting cut on coral reef.

CAUTION

There are as many if not more diving enthusiasts in the United States today as there are water-skiers. This rapid development of the sport has occurred for the most part in the last four years and today there are far too many teenagers jumping in the water without proper instruction. It is easy to panic in water when you don't know what to do in a tight spot and these situations will occur once in awhile, but even more so if you don't know what you're doing in the first place. Diving in the crystal - clear fresh water springs that dot the state of Florida bears this out. There are many beautiful underwater caves in these springs that go to almost bottomless depths and they are quite intriguing to explore, but this is a dangerous sport without the proper precautions such as taking underwater flashlights, safety lines, and above all, experienced divers. There have been 4 or 5 deaths due to drowning this past summer in Florida springs caused by inexperience or carelessness. Two 17 - year - old boys were drowned in one spring because they entered a cave and could not find their way out in time when they began to run low on air. A third youth with them barely got to the surface in time. If these boys had tied a rope or cord to the entrance of the cave, they would probably be alive today. Another spring drowning occurred during the late summer in the very spring that one of these pictures was taken in. An Air Force sergeant from Eglin Air Force Base was deep in the caves of Morrison Springs in Northwest Florida when his underwater flashlight went out and he got separated from his diving companion. Divers recovered his body in 280 feet of water about two weeks later. A friend of mine and I were the very first to explore the depths of this particular spring back in 1953 and I know that this was a silly sacrifice of human life.

FUN

Diving is as much fun and just as safe as any of our sports if caution and care prevail over carelessness. It has opened up a whole new beautiful world for man to enjoy to the fullest.

FEATURES

HISTORY INCLUDES CURRENT EVENTS — The American History classes at Neville High School also carry on spirited discussions on current events . . . 'tie the past to the present, to make the entire thing more meaningful.' Here, Leon Marx, teacher, watches as Melvin Rambin points to Little Rock on the United States map. Looking on, front row, are Diane Southall, Frances Parks and Steve LaFrance, with John Byrnes in the second row. All are seniors. (Staff photos by John Fogleman)

SPECIAL WEEK SPOTLIGHTS ACTIVITY

Patriotic Education Work Observed In Classes Here

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

Time: 3 p.m. Place: Neville High School. Sound: The rush of students through the halls . . . the warning ring of the school buzzer, sounded twice . . . then complete silence.

The first notes of "Retreat" are sounded by the school bugler, as a color guard composed of four students lowers the Stars and Stripes.

Each person in the school or on the campus stands facing the flag, in reverent silence.

The brief ceremony ends — and the halls immediately are filled with teenage Americans, heading in all directions.

Begun during World War II, the ceremony of raising the flag at 8:20 a.m. each school day, and lowering it just before classes are over for the day is a normal occurance to the students.

"But this ceremony, observed day in and day out, can't help but instill reverence for the flag and the nation," pointed out one teacher.

EXAMPLE

It's also one forceful example of patriotic education in action.

Starting today, and continuing through Saturday, Oct. 25, "Patriotic Education Week" will be observed throughout the United States.

Mayor W. L. (Jack) Howard proclaimed the week for special observance in Monroe, and stated:

"Patriotic Education is sponsored by the Society of the Children of the American Revolution, an organization which for a number of years has been interested in the dissemination of patriotic, historical and educational material pertaining to the founding and growth of our glorious nation."

Mrs. Sherod W. McLean of Monroe, senior state president of the Louisiana Society of the Children of the American Revolution views the week as a time to stress the meaning of this nation's history.

"Learning to appreciate what our forefathers fought for is the best inspiration for upholding these ideals. It's the only way to fight communism in the United States, and to make people better Americans . . . by learning what principles this country was founded on," she stated.

Do today's students know the history of the United States?

In Louisiana they do.

American history is a required subject for each high school student in the state. They also study civics, and world history . . . spending one full school year on each of the three subjects.

At Neville, typical of many American high schools, "most of the students are aware of a need for American history. They see the social need for it — as citizens, they want to know about their country, and what its past has been," pointed out Leon Marx, history instructor.

"These students, in their late adolescence, have an acute social awareness, and if they have the opportunity and are not thwarted, they carry on stimulating discussions of current events, keeping in mind the historical background for today's situations," he stated.

AGREE

Instructors agree that students can understand and interpret present-day events by tracing back into American history for the cause or for similar situations.

But is history difficult, compared to other subjects?

"I don't think it's any more difficult . . . but with modern day education, students are not accustomed to reading as much as they did in the past; and in history, you need to read quite a bit," Marx commented.

Students themselves tell you that they realize they will soon be voters — and they hope to vote intelligently. They believe that a thorough knowledge of American History and Civics will help them.

At Neville, the students start the fall term by reading pre-American history . . . the factors in Europe which resulted in exploration and colonization of the United States.

During the first six weeks of school, they study the material leading up to the Revolution.

1776 . . . the Revolution . . . the founding of the government . . . the Constitution, how it was written, what it explains . . . and the period of time up through the administration of President Adams make up the second six weeks.

Students go over the events leading up to the Civil War, to conclude the fall semester, then during the second semester they study the history up to the present time. The subject is also taught with an emphasis on term paper writing, which students will face in college.

"We use current events to stimulate interest during the class. Anytime you can tie the past to the present, it makes the entire thing more meaningful . . . history shows the basis for or simularity to startling current events and world tensions," history educators explain.

"You can't just run through the dry facts of history, though, you have got to make it come to life for the students," Marx added.

The daily flag ceremony, one of the most patriotic actions which any school can carry out, began at Neville High in 1932. During the second World War, 1941-45, President Franklin D. Roosevelt asked all the people of the country to observe one minute of silent prayer for the United States each day.

Paul J. Neal, at that time Neville principal, thought that the best way to carry this out would be to incorporate the minute of silence with the flag raising and lowering.

CONTINUES

The entire ceremony continues today . . . absolute silence falls upon the school when the first note of the bugle sounds.

"It's the only way possible to stop everyone from moving, at the same time, in the school," instructors agree.

Another example of good citizenship in action occurs at each school assembly, when all the students pledge allegiance to the flag.

In their civics classes, they learn the different types of government, the services available through the community and the Constitution, and just what citizenship means.

Condition Of Wreck Victim Still Critical

Because a mule wandered onto the highway, pretty 13-year-old Rhonda Gail Sims, who has battled the effect of a polio attack since she was a baby, lies unconscious, in critical condition after she suffered severe head injuries in a wreck late Friday.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Z. Sims of Route 1, Calhoun received a fractured skull and a brain concussion in the mishap.

She had recently undergone the second of two operations to make it possible for her to walk normally on the polio - afflicted leg.

The cast was removed from her leg a few days before the accident.

Rhonda was the only person who received major injuries in the accident. Eight other persons, including her brother, James Dale Sims, 22, driver, escaped harm although a 15 - year - old girl suffered minor injuries.

A loose mule caused the wreck, authorities said.

State troopers who investigated said that the mule wandered onto U. S. highway 80, about 8 miles west of Monroe, and was directly in the path of the oncoming car

The driver saw the animal seconds before he struck it. The mule was flung back, around, the car, careened through the right rear window and crashed into Rhonda.

It was killed instantly.

Dr. L. Boykin Is Speaker At Grambling

GRAMBLING (Special) — In a keynote address at the eighth annual Blalock Education Day here yesterday, Dr. L. L. Boykin, professor of education at Florida A. and M. College, Tallahassee, declared that the classroom teacher can solve many current school problems.

Speaking before the largest group ever to attend the confab, Boykin said teachers can give new hope and status to the cause of education in America.

Morelle Emmons, superintendent of schools in Lincoln parish, noted that work and understanding are essential to problem solving.

Grambling College President R. W. E. Jones urged teachers to apply information gained from the conference in attempting to upgrade the quality of teaching.

A number of other educational leaders appeared on the program also, and the Grambling High School Choir provided a musical interlude.

"We in Alabama have always looked to Memphis as the commercial capital of the South, due to its great inland waterway."

The cruise will take the party to Cairo, Ill., via the Mississippi, and back to Alabama on the Tennessee via Florence and Decatur. The yacht is expected to reach Decatur about noon Tuesday.

Urges Careful Vote Decision

JACKSON (UPI) — The Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation called on cotton farmers Saturday to weigh carefully their decision to vote for or against an optional plan of the 1958 farm bill giving them a choice in price supports and acreage for next year.

The federation noted less than 20 per cent of farmers affected in such referendums have voted in the past. It said two thirds of the farmers who do vote must favor the plan for it to be put into effect.

Atom Device Is Exploded

A device packing a bit less power than 1,000 tons of TNT was detonated at dawn from a 75-foot wooden tower. It was the ninth test in the current series.

The AEC schedule puts two shots on the program for Sunday, but a spokesman said one would probably be postponed. Both shots are to be fired from balloons 500 feet up.

Truman Says Nixon Would Lose Race

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Truman Saturday indirectly called Vice President Richard M. Nixon a character assassin and said Nixon would be "the easiest to beat" of prospective Republican presidential candidates in 1960.

He also had some harsh words for Sens. Harry F. Byrd (Va.) and James O. Eastland (Miss.), members of his own Democratic Party, and for rebellious southern Democrats who have hinted they might form a third party based on "white supremacy."

In a typical "give-em-hell news conference, Truman predicted the South "won't have a third party" in the 1960 presidential race. He said he thought rebellious southerners would stick with the national Democratic Party because they would not want to give up the seniority that entitles them to the chairmanships of powerful congressional committees.

"It might be better for the country if they did" give up such posts, he said.

Truman came to Washington Fri-day to speak and unveil portraits of Democratic presidents at the National Democratic Club. He also spoke at a Democratic fund-raising dinner at which Mrs. Truman and Mrs. Elanor Roosevelt were honor guests.

Saturday he lunched with members of his staff when he occupied the White House and attended a tea at the women's National Democratic Club. The tea also was in Mrs. Truman's honor and commemorates Democratic women's day.

In response to questions, Truman named Byrd and Eastland as among those he would like to see out of committee chairmanships. Byrd heads the powerful Senate Judiciary Committee.

But the ex-President specifically excluded Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), leader of the Senate's southern bloc and chairman of the Armed Services Committee. He said he considered Russell to be "one of the ablest men in the Senate."

As for Nixon, he made it clear he feels no more kindly toward the vice president than he ever did.

Recalling past political campaigns, the former President said: "I never did any character assassination in my life. It's the lowest form of politics."

Asked if he thought Nixon were engaging in "character assassination" in this year's congressional campaign, Truman said Nixon had achieved political prominence "in the first place by such tactics."

"I see by the Republican press that he's reformed," he added. "I don't believe he has. He called me a traitor and that's about as far as you can go. When he slanders a man, that's a compliment to him."

(Nixon has denied ever calling Truman a traitor.)

As for the 1960 presidential campaign, Truman said Nixon "is my candidate on the Republican ticket. I think he would be the easiest to beat."

NEW LISTING! YEP, and it's one we're kinda' proud of — for it's a most appealing 4-year-old "youngster" with more than its share of good features. First of all, the "traffic-free" living room is on the back—and has a decorative shelf on one wall, drapes, and for entertaining ease, a pass-thru to the . . . step-saving kitchen with more than "enuff" cabinets all with Formica tops, exhaust fan, pantry, and dining area. And here's something that will please the entire family —the master bedroom has TWO double sliding door closets, EACH with built-in chest of drawers; the other bedroom also has a double sliding door closet with built-in chest of drawers. The bath has glistening white ceramic tile around the tub (with shower and storage above). And there's more "plus" features: 42 in. attic fan, central heating, drapes, insulated (both walls and attic fan), double carport with utility room and washer connections, plus storage room 6x10 with shelves. 75x150 lawn with cenipede grass, pleasant shrubbery, and pine trees. And Mom, don't worry about school—it's only a block away! Tarry not a minute in calling on this — 'cause it's attractively priced, too, for only $14,500, and can be bought on assumption, or $600 down on a new FHA loan!

CANYON, WHY DON'T YOU ADMIT I DO A BETTER JOB OF TELLING THE HIGH SCHOOL BOYS ABOUT THE AIR FORCE ACADEMY THAN YOU DO!
I GLADLY ADMIT IT, SAVANNAH...
BUT RIGHT NOW IT'S MY JOB TO DO IT—DAY AFTER DAY!
THE MINUTE YOU START TO SHOOT A NEW PICTURE YOU'LL FORGET THE AIR ACADEMY EXISTS!
OKAY—I'M A KNUCKLEHEAD—AND I CAN PROVE IT!...
I'VE BEEN CHASING YOU EVER SINCE WE LANDED IN LOS ANGELES---
AND, ALTHOUGH I'M SUPPOSED TO BE A BOX-OFFICE, GAL-TYPE GAL...
I HAVEN'T REALLY BEEN ABLE TO GET YOUR MIND OFF YOUR JOB FOR A MINUTE!
WE'VE BEEN UP AND DOWN THAT STREET BEFORE, SAVANNAH!..
I COULDN'T KEEP YOU IN FACIAL TISSUE TO TAKE OFF YOUR MAKEUP!
FALLING IN LOVE WITH YOU WOULD BE A ONE-WAY TICKET TO BECOMING MISTER SAVANNAH GAY!
AND YOU'RE SO CONCEITED, YOU CAN'T STAND PLAYING SECOND FIDDLE!
MAYBE! BUT MORE LIKELY IT'S BECAUSE A FIREBALL SUCH AS YOU FEEDS ON DESTROYING THINGS—AND I'M NOT READY TO BE SEARED!
YOU'RE PROBABLY RIGHT! LET'S BURN BRIGHTLY, PAL! IT MAY BE A SHORT BLAZE, BUT WE COULD MAKE SOME HISTORY TOGETHER
BUT, SIR, MISS GAY IS—AH—BUSY...
AS I CAN CERTAINLY SEE! BUT WHAT I AM HERE FOR IS MORE IMPORTANT THAN EVEN THAT!
